IT Resources to Support Distance Instruction (03/27/2020)	–
With the official launch of our new 'virtual University' this week, reliance on technological solutions to continue instructional activities and business operations has hit an all time high. US:IT has continued efforts to provide additional tools and services to support the University community during this transition. We are pleased to announce the immediate availability of these new services through the IT Resource Guide. (Last reviewed/updated: 03/27/2020) Any in-person events or gatherings which include 10 or more people are prohibited. These restrictions include any events on University property, events being hosted by the University in a non-University location, and official participation by University students, staff, and faculty in such events regardless of location. If you are considering attending an event or gathering of any kind, but you are sick, please stay home. (Last reviewed/updated: 03/18/2020)
