PreK-12 Resources for Educators and Families

An important part of our mission at the University of Maine College of Education and Human Development is to provide outreach to the public on issues of importance to educators and families. Teachers, administrators and parents are just some of the stakeholders who reach out to us regularly with requests for information and questions about our areas of research expertise. During the COVID-19 pandemic, we have seen such requests with increasing frequency. So we created this section of our website to highlight some resources we feel are helpful for members of the public on issues such as remote education, trauma-informed practices, social-emotional learning, special education and more. We plan to update these pages with more resources vetted by our faculty and graduate student content-area experts, so check back often to see what's new.

To get started, click on the image to the right ("Search by Topic"), and check out some of the links below for recent work from our college and collaborators.

Beyond Crisis Schooling

What can we learn from the innovation of Maine school districts to support remote student learning from March - June 2020?

Community Learning for ME

Volunteer driven, grassroots website designed in community for community as a resource to support parents and teachers.

Maine Schools in Focus

Information and research from UMaine faculty, students and collaborators discussing important educational issues in Maine schools.
