Pass/Fail Options Extended At UMS Universities

25
MAR 2020

Maine's public universities are all extending the deadline for students to choose Pass/Fail options for their course work in recognition of the extraordinary transitions students, faculty, and staff are making in their personal lives and in their academic plans.

"For many students the learning modalities we'll use to finish this semester will be different then how we started and all of us have had to make a fast adjustment to a new but necessary way of life." said Chancellor Dannel Malloy. "We will need to be patient with each other, learn quickly from our mistakes, and adapt to flexible solutions that always put students first now and when we are eventually able to transition back to in-person instruction."

Details of the Pass/Fail extensions, other grading options, and implications for grade point averages and prerequisites vary by campus and can be found at the following links:
