Joseph G. Deering tentatively identified the location as the Kennett lot near the train station in Cornish, Maine. Deering identified the photographer as John Marshall from Portland. This was a period of economic crisis in the timber industry following the "Great New England Hurricane of 1938." The Category 5 hurricane caused an estimated $306 million (1938 USD)--about $18 billion in 2010 USD--and approximately 600 fatalities in Long Island. Without warning, the Cat-5 storm made landfall on Long Island as a Cat-3 on September 21, 1938. Acres and acres of timber were downed by the storm, also called "The Long Island Express."
