Robert P. T. Coffin To Speak Here Wednesday

Famous Maine Author and Poet to be at Student Union Building Next Week

By Roy W. Nickerson

Robert P. Tristram Coffin, famous American author and one of the sons of whom Maine is proudest, will speak before an assembly of the Brunswick Annex students Wednesday morning, Dec. 10, at 10:45. The regular class schedule for assembly days will be followed.

Dr. Coffin is a native of the same Maine coast near the Brunswick area and has lived the life so many of us have read about, and wondered if it really existed. Had we stopped to think about it, we could have known that it does, for he has merely taken the things common place where he lived and written about the life. With his pen, one could do the same thing with his own home town. Dr. Coffin is also a noted scholar — writes about it and today he is one of America's best known living authors.

Dr. Coffin is usually well known as a poet, and his verses have been widely published, both in book form and in various magazines, such as Library and the latest issues of Good Housekeeping.

Dr. Coffin has had 32 books published, including his latest, YANKEE TONGUE. He has been a teacher this year, deals with his family, friends and adventures in the Brunswick, Harpswell and Bailey Island areas and is typical of his style. In it he tells of the thrill he gets in setting the coast he thought he knew so well by land, this time from the air—"Angels' Eye View." He has a lot of exchange of viewing the coast of Maine," he writes. "But the angels have the best one. From High Above."

"Now, of course, most of us do not get the view from high above, but we have the angels to enjoy the Maine shores at their best. Luckily, there is a way around. And I have been taken by the coast if you want to see it at its 'Book of Revelations' best . . . . The plane does not have to be a high-priced one. Mine wasn't. It was a hydroplane, held more or less together by cross-pipe wire and imagination . . . ."

His vivid word pictures have been read for years by Americans, and this prolongs to his airplane ride is a sample of how interesting and unusual he can make something that we have now come to accept as commonplace. His description of cooking lobsters on the beach at night, his childhood on Lost Paradise Farm, the lighthouse, a little history thrown in here, pure, incomparable Yankee wit tossed in there, make it very evident to the reader why he has become so popular.

"Last year I spoke at the Brunswick High School and the N-X-X reported that he was the most popular speaker of the semester. I have left and now you'll like him—miss him and you'll make the biggest mistake of your University career!"

To be Continued on page three.

Students To Be X-Rayed Wednesday

The State of Maine Health Department will be here at 1 o'clock on Wednesday, December 10 to begin taking X-ray pictures of the student body and employees of the Brunswick campus.
The mobile X-ray photoflaboratory will be located near the college infirmary and will operate from 1 to 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, December 10, 9:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, December 11, 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, December 11.
The pictures can be taken at about 100 per hour and it is important that a continuous line be made on the X-ray machine as to expedite the work.

It is believed that some system will be made so that students may be on their way back to the subject of discussion and the play before the close of the week.

Chemical Engineering Scored As A Stable, Interesting Career

L. C. Jenness, acting head of the department of chemical engineering at Orono, visited the Brunswick Annex Monday and talked with a group of students who are following the engineering course.

Jenness also heard the newly formed department of industrial corporation, a university wide project, stated two years ago. He stated that any industrial projects at the University are welcomed.

Jenness said that he had found some real interest in chemical engineering here, but that he felt many men are being unduly influenced to other fields largely as a result of the War.

"I encourage them to make contacts with the upper classmen and their relatives and friends who are all ready in industry," he declared.

He further explained that the career of chemical engineering is not subject to the rise and fall of some other professions. Employment is so diversified that over a period of years it has proven to be most stable.

Jenness feels that there are a number of fine careers for men who are interested in the many fields of chemical engineering, and hopes that technology students at the Brunswick Annex will look into the matter further. He said he would welcome any correspondence addressed to him at the Orono Campus regarding vocational guidance in this field.

THE EDITOR'S DESK...

So far we've received only a few of the sheets we sent around for your reactions to the word-finding goy, try, and dislike list about the paper. Thanks to those who have responded, and let's get the rest of them in this week!

On the whole, they were most favorable. The general consensus of opinion seems to be that our opinion writers are Bill Robertson and Sid Folsom, in the feature department. Of course, there is usually no way to identify your news men—they are the unseen heroes of the newspaper profession. The staff, as a whole, is doing a good job.

What pleased us most of all was the fact that no one suggested we go out of business. In fact, no one suggested the deletion of a single feature! Also glad to see that our World Events Roundtable is going over well.

And a word about the Roundtable. We have only our staff members to draw on for opinions on the world situations that we write about, and, in this issue for instance, both writers took about the same stand, to fill our opinion pages. If we can, if any of you readers would like to sound off, and can do it well on paper, label it as such and put it in the Suggestion Bag. If there is room, and it's a well written opinion, we will publish it.

In that way, you can't accuse us of trying to promote a cause and pushing the opposition side.

Of all those that came in, one Thos. Burrows wrote as follows:

"Why do you have to express your ignorance about Friday meals? I think you are definitely out of order, when you print material that involves religion... That was in regard to my... then on Friday, why do we Protestants have to suffer, too? Can't they have hot dogs or something else instead of fish, as they do for Catholics?"

My answer is straight and simple. It's what I think, and I want to hear no more about anyone who thought that—and I imagine there are more of them than one, who was good enough to put it up. But four months now, in my opinion, a very narrow minded person suffering from an inferiority complex. I made no religious statement, I said nothing against any creed, I did not even infer that the Catholics, or the Moslems, or any other group, was right or wrong. I just said that in my opinion, I most definitely stated that some people, such as myself, neither have nor eat fish in any form. Seems it is mostly for religious reasons it is served. I asked, was it possible to have hot dogs we could take if we wanted to? How can you make a religious war out of that?"

I personally think that anyone who makes such a statement is doing just like many people do when they say "he makes a good general but he won't make a good president! Look at Grant!" That is a statement handed down from one generation of American history teachers to the next, and when a general is mentioned for the presidential office, that thought comes to mind. I think that general's other qualities, they have their opinion on that statement and Grant's term of office. Washington was a general, too, remember? I think the two tie in closely, the mince religion is mentioned. It is automatically tied in with Grant. That is the conclusion, today.

My critic also underlined what I had said about the Germans, and says "I also think that warrants an apology." I still stand by my opinions, and if you're interested in them, turn to World Events Roundtable today!

NOW HEAR THIS

Maine veterans, whose GI Insurance has lapsed, were reminded today by Samuel Goldberg, Insurance Officer of the Veterans Administration, Togus, Maine, that under present regulations they have only until and including December 31, 1947, to take advantage of the very liberal restrictions now in effect for reinstating their National Service Life Insurance.

Mr. Goldberg explained that, unless an extension is granted, the present liberal method of reinstatement will go out of effect on January 1, 1948. Prior to that date, no matter how long the premiums have been unpaid, applications for the reinstatement of GI Insurance may be made usually without a physical examination, provided the health of the veteran is as good as it was when the insurance first lapsed. Veterans may still reinstate after December 31, 1947, but a physical examination will be required if the insurance premiums have been unpaid for more than three months.

It is important for veterans to know that they do not have to pay back all the premiums they have missed when reinstating their Territorial insurance, the plan of insurance first issued to them in service. Only two months premiums have to be paid to the Territorial insurance back in force. The amount of each of these monthly premiums is only for the actual amount of insurance the veteran wishes to keep—he does not have to reinstate all of the insurance he had in service. Moreover, the monthly premium rate for the Territorial insurance is not higher—it remains at the same premium rate which was paid while in service.

Veterans may receive the necessary short and simplified form, and complete information at any office of the Veterans Administration, American Red Cross, or municipal Veterans Information Center.

CAMPUS CUTIES

Prologue Comes Out Wednesday

PROLOGUE, the new intercollegiate magazine, will make its initial appearance Wednesday, Dec. 5.

The magazine is a new idea in college publications in that its staff is made up of all the Maine college groups together, the U of M, Bowdoin, Bates and Colby. It receives general distribution throughout New England and is sent to various parts of the nation as well.

PROLOGUE will enable students to print their ideas on the national, international, and local college situations. It has the added advantage of a wide distribution and fulfills a need to promote student expression.

A subscription drive has started this week at the Brunswick Campus, and anyone interested should see the agent in his building—his name is on the sign in your hall. If you can’t find him, see a member of the MAINE ANNEX staff.

The first issue includes such articles as “The New Look Views College Man,” written by a cored at the Maine Campus; Communism in Czechoslovakia, an eye-witness account written by a student at one of the Maine colleges: Green Mountain Edition, 80 proof; and Basketball, Rhode Island Style.

The magazine is a quarterly, and the issue that is not published this year will be mailed to you if you are not at Orono next year.

Looks like a lot of fun, men! Let’s say greenback on the line!

By Don Povich

Pine hitting for our all-lying friend the news editor, Al Mersky, I wandered over to the lower north wing of Weller Hall determined to hit a four sacker, and I think I did.

I found this week’s queen of the campus in Room 60. Now Al may be an all-for-the-face man, but give me a good body! Stop reading right now and take another squat and you’ll see what I mean. (She has a face, too!) Her name is Joan Messmore and she comes from Richmond Hills, N. Y. and she’s the pride and joy of John Drahunam. She now attends Mary Lewis Academy and does modeling on the side (which proves my point.) She is 17 years old, five feet, seven inches and holding all over with personality.

And here’s the real scoop I managed to wheedle out of the boys in room 68; she has an identical twin sister!

After gazing at this for an hour or so, I think I’ll hand in my resignation to the 12th man to boot! I sure am a“boomer” and pray that I have enough gas to get to Richmond Hills, N. Y.

(Editor’s note: in proof reading the above, I found that Don, in his last sentence, had written “pray” instead of “pray.” A slip of the typewriter keys, no doubt!) —

Leave it to Pollman to boost the nation’s birth rate!

SUGGESTION BOX

The suggestion box has yielded a few suggestions this time, but the business manager was away most of the day, so many of them will have to be held over until next week.

A few that we can answer follow:

"What is the story on the post time hours? Have they been canceled since they were first anounced? I don’t know how many times I have gone over there about 30 minutes before the place was opened to close and found the store shut tight. Others I have asked with have had the same good happen to them.

"We are going to close early why doesn’t he announce new hours that give the time he will be open? I have a family of 6m an extra walk over there sh laundry kits and other things that we can bring in window service . . ."

The mail clerk has to go in town to get the mail, and sometimes he delayed a few minutes. This is the order of the day, however, so I’ll find the following schedule & best to follow: open 8:30 A. M.
10:30 to 1:00 P. M. 3:30 to 4:00 P. M. Saturdays he goes at noon.

Another anonymous one came in:
"Don’t if the Physics Department hold the class used now & the Chemistry Department and get a mimeographed copy of the daily assignments available for every member of the physics class?"

We called Mr. Olsen and he said I would have a meeting of the department that day, however, and that a slip of the keyboard didn’t worth a darn looked around so in advance, so they did. We think it is being looked and more is cooked. Sometimes supply and the demand don’t match, so there is a wait. This avoided as often as possible, and i asked that you bear up!

"POMES"
By E. L. Genest
In the days that followed their exit
From this world and their entries into heaven,
Carlyle, Emerson, Novells, Dostoevski and Descartes
And a hundred million others
Were permitted to take seats
Rain and snow below.
And to ask again the questions
Whose answers they had so Assiduously sought in this life
And they were enlightened.
Although regarded by contemporaries
And posterity as sage and learned men
Their eminence, they knew,
Was simply ascetic to the fact
That they were fated to this incomprehensible existence.
The questions they asked are universal.
"Why did I live?" and
"Why did I die?"
"Did you ever the world?" and
"Did You make me?"
"Was my soul a part of Thee?"
When He enlightened them.
They were heaven's;
Their faces lit with smiles.
"Had I but known!" and
"Why couldn't I see?"
These were followed by
"But now I know," and
"No it isn't!"
Now you demand.
"Quickly! Tell me, what did he say?"
To us, the living. He reveals no other but this:
"Live! Live by the laws of man and Then die, and learn the reason why."

The Haunted Campus
By Dan Povich
Have you been awakened at mid-night?
Or have you been distracted from your studies at the witching hour by a strange sound? The ANNEX has received several reports of such sounds in the night.
Nerves bound that we are always and always wishing to find the facts (an A, please, Mr. Marsh), we looked further into the matter.
One night in the fall of the moon we stationed throughout the campus in an effort to put an end to this foolish rumor.
I pulled this duty myself, but I did it reluctantly. I told the staff they were all crazy to think that such things could come to pass.
A haunted campus, impossible!
However, as I walked my post in front of the Add. Building (this is a masonic fraternity) I heard the queerest sound. It was a moan like howl, far worse than the Hound of the Baskervilles or the inner sanctum mystery. I staggered, shivered, and held on to the flagpole as I looked up.
There it was atop the Add Building.
The figure of a man clothed only in full-length pajamas with his arms raised to the sky. A man with the voice of a wolf.
I lived around these parts all

All this and Heaven too! You no doubt noticed the photo on this page of the pin up girl. You too can have a date with a beautiful girl like this. You ask how? Then read this column for further details.

On the 12 of December, the Annex is holding a Christmas Ball at the Student Union Building. This dance is to be a semi-formal one, and any member may attend. As yet, the decisions as to the orchestra has not been made. However, music of top quality will be made available. A committee has been working very hard to bring you this dance.

The dance will start at 8:30, and refreshments will be included in the price of the tickets. The decorations will include Christmas trees, Christmas lights, and of course mis-letoe. Each student can bring his own date if he prefers; or he can have a date arranged for him. Several buses are going to bring to the Annex dates for all you that want these. Be sure you buy your tickets from the ticket sellers, just tell him if you want a date or if you are going to bring your own. If you want to have a date, the cost will increase a little to take care of corsages. Keep posted on the bulletins boards for complete and up to date information. The Student Union Building has an excellent floor on which to dance and plenty of room. The Annex Fire Department, the electricians, and several other departments are all helping to make the dance a success. At the time this was written, all information was not exactly right, and this had to be in on Tuesday night. So -

Tennis Club Ends Round Robin Matches

The Fall Tennis Tournament was recently completed, and Ben Blanchard was the winner as he was unopposed in all his matches. Ten men were entered in the Round Robin in which each man had a chance to play each other. The men entered were Robert Gascoine, Ben Blanchard, Pete Hay,

Dou King, James Rice, Dick Knowlton, Stanley Fink, Al Mer-sky, Ken Murphy, and Ken Dyer.

Abigail, who was the winner, lives in New York City and attended Dublin School, Dublin, N. H. He is majoring in Civil Engineering, and he was the guest at the Fall Sports Banquet Wednesday night representing the tennis team. The tournament was held for three main reasons, and that was to give the athletic department a chance to view the future tennis players for the spring, to give men themselves a look at the competition which they must face, and to provide recreation for the tennis players in the Round Robin competition.

And finally there was church on Sunday morning with the family and all our friends, and then we packed up and headed back for the dear old alma mater to rest up for Christmas. I swear all these guys lost weight while they were home, but everybody brought back turkey sandwiches to pass around. I don't, but I think I've had enough social activity combined into this recess to last me for quite a while, and we'll all be back then, and... wait a minute! Don't I remember making a date with somebody for next weekend? I guess I did, at that. Well, that's settled. I might as well start packing again. On the other hand, I won't bother unpacking.
