The Maine Question Podcast

University of Maine

Division of Marketing and Communications

The Division of Marketing and Communications is principally responsible for presenting the story and maintaining the image of the University of Maine to all UMaine constituencies, including the media, public and UMaine community.

Toward this end, the Division of Marketing and Communications guides and partners with all UMaine communicators, providing counsel and services in newswriting and media relations, marketing, graphic design, photography and video production, and web-based services, with the goal of producing internal and external high-quality messaging consistent with UMaine positioning, branding and strategic priorities.

University of Maine Policies and Procedures regarding marketing, advertising, branding, public relations, media relations, web standards, social media, mobile applications, videography and photography are available online.

Episode Description: Maine is the most forested state in the country, and its residents interact with forests regularly in many different ways. They provide supplies for various products, which fuels industry and job creation, and space for outdoor recreation. These interactions, which help define Maine's identity, are the subject of Jessica Leahy's research. As a professor in UMaine's School of Forest Resources, she studies the human dimensions of forestry and other natural resources. In this episode of "The Maine Question," Leahy discusses her work, the ways forests impact our lives and how our actions affect them.
