Elizabeth Banwell is the director of program development and strategic initiatives at the Maine Association of Nonprofits (MANP). In partnership with The Broad Reach Fund, MANP has been running a three-year leadership and network-development program for emerging leaders in Maine's local food movement. She is also on the steering committee for Slow Money Maine.

Betsy Bieman was appointed by Governor John Baldacci to serve as president of the Maine Technology Institute in 2005. Previously, she was an associate director at The Rockefeller Foundation in New York City, joining their staff in 1996 after working in the field of international development for 10 years, principally in Africa and Latin America.

Amy Carrington is program coordinator for the New American Sustainable Agriculture Program (NASAP), founded under the umbrella of Coastal Enterprises, Inc. (CEI) and which became part of Cultivating Community in 2009.

Jane Caulfield is economic development director for the Aroostook Band of Micmacs.

Leah Cook co-owns and operates Crown O' Maine Organic Cooperative with her sister Marada. Together with their amazing crew of strong characters, they work hard to get good food to good people.

Jean English is an adjunct instructor of sustainable horticulture at Unity College; edits The Maine Organic Farmer & Gardener, MOFGA's quarterly publication; and writes a gardening column for local Maine papers.

Douglas Fox is a professor at Unity College, where he directs the Center for Sustainability and Global Change.

Barbara Ginley is executive director of the Maine Migrant Health Program, a statewide primary care program for migrant and seasonal farmworkers and their family members.

Michael Gold coordinates the Farm Viability Program at Maine Farmland Trust. He has operated his own organic vegetable farm and worked on several other farms and has also worked for Johnny's Selected Seeds, MOFGA Certification Services, and Crown O' Maine Organic Cooperative.

Barbara Ives has been at the New England Environmental Finance Center since 2007. She is the project assistant to the center, and has been program manager for the Maine Food Trader and Ag Trader sites. Before coming to the EFC, Barbara was in education for 13 years, teaching at different times from kindergarten through high school and adult education.

Jeff Johnson is CEO of the Cobscook Bay Company. Former owner and founder of Pemberton's Gourmet Foods, he has broad-based marketing management experience with national consumer brands such as Unilever, Nabisco, Lipton, Eskimo Pie, Schering-Plough, Polaroid, and Converse footwear.

Amber Lambke is a founder of the Kneading Conference, and executive director of the Maine Grain Alliance, the nonprofit organization responsible for the Kneading Conference, the Maine Artisan Bread Fair, and educational baking workshops for school children.

Virginia Manuel has been state director of USDA Rural Development in Maine since 2009. She has more than 25 years experience in business and economic development, international trade and community economic development in both government and the private sector.

Sam Merrill is an associate research professor at the Muskie School of Public Service, University of Southern Maine, and director of the New England Environmental Finance Center, housed at the Muskie School. His research interests include fiscal and policy connections between land conservation and development in New England, and developing tools for financial adaptation to sea-level rise.

Ken Morse is the partnership director of Healthy Oxford Hills, a Healthy Maine Partnership, a founder of Community Food Matters, and the Maine lead for the National Farm to School Network.

Juan A. Perez-Febles is the state monitor advocate with the Bureau of Employment Services in the Maine Department of Labor.

John Rebar is executive director of the University of Maine Cooperative Extension, a statewide resource to Maine people located in 16 county offices, on the UMaine campus and in other locations across the state. He has been with UMaine Extension for 27 years and director since 2007.

Linzee Weld is on the steering committee of Slow Money Maine and is the president of No Small Potatoes Investment Club, LLC.

Tanya Swain serves as executive director of the Western Mountains Alliance (WMA). A community and economic development organization located in Farmington, WMA started one of the state's first online farmers markets in 2009 and facilitates the Franklin County Agriculture Task Force.
