School of Social Work graduate students in Maine schools

September 2, 2020 | Teaching in brief

The School of Social Work currently has six master of social work students placed in Maine schools — the Biddeford School System, Oakland School, the Bangor School System, and The Collaborative School, a special treatment school in New Gloucester. Over two semesters the students will complete 400 to 500 hours of service working alongside, and with supervision from, school social workers who provide services to students and their families.
