Photo Description: Black and white outdoor photograph of a Winter Carnival snow sculpture outside the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity house at the University of Maine. An unidentified man wearing a Buffalo Plaid wool jacket stands in the doorway of the house. On the snow-covered front lawn, the sculpture depicts a scene of four male figures making a film. To the left, a male figure stands behind a hand-crank movie camera with his hat turned backwards. The director is seated in a chair beside the camera with a megaphone at his feet. To the right, two figures stand atop a pile of snow shaped to look like a rocky outcrop. The figure on the left, atop the "outcrop" appears to be a depiction of a Native American male. The figure on the right appears to be a depiction of a white, European frontier man. The figures are engaged in hand-to-hand combat, struggling over a weapon. Photograph is circa 1940s.

Photo Description: Black and white interior photograph of an unidentified young man practicing the standing high jump inside the field house on the University of Maine campus. An unidentified young man, wearing a winter coat over a sweater and slacks, stands leaning on a garden rake, prepared to smooth the sand below the high jump. The athlete is caught in mid-jump, as he attempts to clear the bar. The top half of his body and one leg are over the bar, on the side toward the photographer. Shadows of people can also be seen in the far background. Photograph is circa 1940s.

Photo Description: Black and white interior photograph of a group of an unidentified man practicing the long jump in a fieldhouse on the University of Maine campus. Approximately 11 men stand in a group on the left, watching an unidentified athlete captured in mid-jump over a sandy pit. Two coaches stand opposite the group of men, observing the practice jump. Behind one of the coaches is a stack of lumber. To the far left, a small group of students huddle together on a set of bleachers watching proceedings. Hundreds of panes of glass make up large windows that cover two-thirds of the fieldhouse walls. Photograph is circa 1940s.

Photo Description: Black and white photograph of campus mayoral candidate Richard Huff addressing a group of young men and women gathered on a set of granite steps outside a brick building on the University of Maine campus. Huff is a young man, short of stature, wearing a tuxedo and bowler hat. He holds a piece of paper in his hand as he speaks to the assembled group of students. A large banner reading, "Franchette for Mayor," hangs over the open door. Below the banner, hangs a smaller sign that reads: "Marden Maine Mayor." A couple of dozen male and female students stand, watching the proceedings. According to The Maine Campus, May 13, 1948, Huff was a decided underdog candidate who won the office by a landslide. (See also p06900.)
