Scope and Contents

This collection was created in 1980-84 by Pamela Dean in the course of doing research for her master's thesis in history at the University of Maine 1984, entitled "Us and Them: An Oral History of Life on the Summer Estates in Coastal Hancock County, Maine." The period covered by the interviews is approximately 1880-1980. The major focus is on the relations between the summer people who owned estates in Northeast Harbor and Blue Hill, Maine, and the native Mainers who worked for them on the estates. Dean's grandparents and aunts and uncles had worked for summer people in various capacities and her interest in the topic began with interviews with her aunt, Ethel Anthony, conducted for Sandy Ives' fieldwork course in the fall of 1980. (See also Collection 043 Northeast Harbor Library, which includes several interviews with summer people copied from the holdings of the Northeast Harbor Library.)

NA4564 Thesis, written by Pamela E. Dean, August 1984. "Us and Them: An Oral History of Life on the Summer Estates in Coastal Hancock County, Maine." This is an oral history of a way of life which is surely an anachronism, a piece of the past which continues in many ways unchanged today. It is a history of the daily lives and interactions of the people who spend their summers on estates on the coast of Maine and of their hosts and employees, the native

Mainers. The period covered stretches back to the 1880's, to the earliest childhood memories of some informants, now dead, and to others' recollections of stories of the lives of their parents. It also reaches to the present, to the natives who still work for the summer people as their fathers did, and to the summer people who are now year-round residents in what was once their family's second or third or even fourth home. Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirement for the Degree of Master of Arts (in History). Text: 209.

Thesis, written by Pamela E. Dean

Creator: Dean, Pamela

Abstract: NA4564 Thesis, written by Pamela E. Dean, August 1984. "Us and Them: An Oral History of Life on the Summer Estates in Coastal Hancock County, Maine." This is an oral history of a way of life which is surely an anachronism, a piece of the past which continues in many ways unchanged today. It is a history of the daily lives and interactions of the people who spend their summers on estates on the coast of Maine and of their hosts and employees, the native Mainers. The period covered stretches back to the 1880's, to the earliest childhood memories of some informants, now dead, and to others' recollections of stories of the lives of their parents. It also reaches to the present, to the natives who still work for the summer people as their fathers did, and to the summer people who are now year-round residents in what was once their family's second or third or even fourth home. Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirement for the Degree of Master of Arts (in History). Text: 209.
