SOLDIERS AND THE HOME FRONT, by Nina Silber and Mary Beth Sievens	Andy DeRoche	76

COVER PHOTO: Mount Katahdin forms the background for this Bert Call photo of the toll dam on Sourdnahunk Stream. This issue offers two perspectives on Maine's north woods: Geoffrey Paul Carpenter employs the observations of Henry David Thoreau to describe in qualitative terms the changes wrought by dams, lumbering, and agriculture, while Lloyd C. Irland uses a variety of statistical sources to describe the same phenomenon. In our third article, Charles Shain follows the literary "trail" of a well-known instrument of war: the machine gun invented by Hiram Maxim of Sangerville, Maine. Cover photo by Bert Call, courtesy Dexter Historical Society and Fogler Library, University of Maine.
