Although the Maine Campus is dated on Thursday of each week, the actual mailing date has been late for the past weeks because of mechanical problems in the new offset printing press at the University. Delay in receiving your paper is not the fault of the post office.

It may be some time before the new press is operating smoothly. In the meantime, we are doing our best to circulate the paper as soon as possible.

Sunday ETV will offer live, timely, color shows and public television

A Sunday ETV service will be initiated November 5 when Maine's educational television stations present Sunday evening programming for the first time on a regular basis. Stations offering the new service include University of Maine stations - Channel 12, Orono; Channel 10, Presque Isle; Channel 13, Caribou.

Highlighting the Sunday evening ETV output, which begins at 7 p.m., will be the innovation in "public television," P.B.L. This Public Broadcasting Laboratory experiment in the use of television in conjunction with the Maine Art Department Head Vincent A. Hartgen has been cited for his accomplishments in the field of visual arts as one of five Governor's Award recipients for contributions to the development of a strong cultural environment in Maine. Hartgen's award was presented for "the fervor with which you have communicated this dedication (to art) to others" and for his untiring efforts to promote the University of Maine's Traveling Art Shows for school children. "This program, accomplished through sheer determination, has entered into areas where before there was nothing," the citation read. The award was designed especially for the Maine State Awards for the Arts by Castine Sculptor Clark Fitte-Gerard.

A good many of these committees are used primarily as investigatory branches, which pre- sent their findings to the Senate who in turn acts on them.

In their function, these committees differ little with similar committees of the State and Federal government except for one very important aspect. They are open to every University student and faculty member to join and are not just limited to members of the Student Senate. Another important point is that the chair- man does not have to be a senator. This is still another means for the student body to voice their opinions and bring their proposals to the attention of the University.

There is yet another way students can be heard. They are allowed to make proposals directly to the Senate for consideration without first going to their senator.

"It is preferred, though, that he (the student) discuss his problems with his respective Senator instead of voicing it to the Senate himself. That is the reason we bother to hold elections for Senators. They may represent the voice of his constituents... but the student can directly address the Senate," explained Sena- tor President Jim Turner. He further explained that a student body with an effective voice on the cam- pus but their using it to the fullest is the biggest problem we (the Senate) are faced with."

Mr. Turner also stated, "We can't make changes in University rules. We can, however, suggest changes which are then presented to the Faculty Council. We have a seat on the Faculty Council and are thus allowed to suggest changes. So far, to my knowledge, we are the only student body to make suggestions to the Faculty Council."

"This was not the case at one time," said John Stewart, Dean of Men, "I remember when, dur- ing my freshman year, the faculty never met with the students. Any rules proposed by the faculty were to be accepted by the students without question."

Last year the Senate faced a considerable amount of criticism from the student body as to their effectiveness as a representative of the students. There is still a question as to whether the Senate should be dissolved or not. These questions are still being discussed.

"I feel the Senate should be dissolved and a more effective representative body should be es- tablished to represent the student body, a member of SDS and presently a senator."

"If we are presently contributing a great deal of worth on campus," said Jan Turner, "but we are limited financially on the other hand... and the students should show more interest in our proposals."

Dean Stewart added: ... by the evidence of the many committees presently formed, I definitely do feel that the Senate is effective."

In their role as a student government, they may instruct changes in University rule, which are then submitted to the Faculty Council and then to the Board of Trustees for final approval—much like our present federal structure.

They have still another function; in their role as a student activities organization, they try to kindle an "off-campus" atmosphere on campus, as well as organize student events such as rallies and other campus events.
Westerman sites gym conditions as inadequate

"We have a dangerous and volatile situation at Orono and two years from now it will be even more explosive." Are these the words of a large city's mayor pondering the tense civil rights situation there? Or a Pentagon official discussing further peace marches? Not at all. The quote is from Harold Westerman, Director of Physical Education and Athletics at the University of Maine and he was speaking of conditions at the Orono campus brought about because of the lack of adequate physical education facilities.

Westerman can back up his assertion that a volatile situation does exist at Orono. He cites a complaint which was held at the Memorial Gymnasium at which some 3,500 students attempted to crowd into an area which would accommodate only 2,500, defying both doormen and policemen.

University officials hope that this situation will be alleviated through the construction of a new physical education building at Orono. The first step to provide the building will come at the November 7 referendum election when voters of the state will act on several questions, including Question Four which seeks $900,000 for seven projects to benefit the University of Maine.

Some $1,300,000 is sought for the construction of the new physical education building. This would be part one of a three-part plan for construction with projects extending over six years with an expenditure of five to six million dollars. Future funds should provide approximately a million and one half of this amount.

According to Westerman, the present Memorial Gymnasium and Field House was constructed in 1926, through funds raised by alumni, to provide a program for a total enrollment of less than 2,000. The Orono campus today has some 7,000 students and university officials anticipate some 8,500 by 1970.

Westerman also points out that the Memorial Gymnasium and the Field House no longer are used exclusively for physical education and athletic purposes. He cites its use for university classes, club registration, graduation exercises, school dances. Boy State activities, clinics, conventions, alumni gatherings and examinations.

"All of these are vitally necessary to our university community life; however, these demands upon the facility and the pressure of increased enrollment continually decrease the time for our activity programs which are so essential to the over-all educational curriculun and wellbeing of the student," Westerman adds.

"We have had to cut down on our programs, we have not been able to initiate proper programs and we can't encourage students to participate in recreational activities because we simply don't have the facilities," Westerman continues.

He cites these examples: A gym class of 100 boys using one locker room because there are being used; as many as 150 to 200 boys waiting to use showers and lockers when there is only room for 50 in any portion of the building; boys in gym clothes running from their dormitories to the gymnasium late in the middle of winter for physical education classes because they know they have the time to wait for showers and lockers to become available; required physical education classes as limited to the freshman class and yet there are more than 150 Olympic size swimming pools for the one gym floor available.

"We meet the needs of the university community, it will be necessary to replace completely the existing facilities and add new ones to include several basketball courts, 200, 300, squash, tennis and gymnastic rooms, area for physiotherapy and corrective studies dealing with the professional program, a regulation Olympic size swimming pool and ice arena, according to Westerman.

"The tensions and exciting study habits of our students of today are much greater than ever before. They need to have an opportunity and a place to relax through exercise as individuals and as team members. There must be an outlet for physical energy and a clean atmosphere for physical activity. As we are somewhat confined to the indoors for a period of five months, these indoor facilities are essential," Westerman declares.

Westerman is emphatic in declaring that the University of Maine provides the poorest facility for physical education, intramurals and recreation of any state university he knows, yet because of the university's location, the needs are greater than any of the others for indoor facilities.

Using the key needs of student health and welfare, Westerman warns that before the first brick of any new facility could be placed, before any new campus buildings are grown up to 10,000 people with 3,000 of them men between the ages of 18 and 21.

"We sincerely believe that we would not be willing to provide adequate physical education facilities for these students. They are cooped up in bedrooms, class rooms, and labs with the place to go except to seek recreation by leaving the campus in automobiles, frequenting night spots or getting into trouble on the campus," the U.M Athletic Director declares.

Greek chiefs

New committees to build stronger Greek unity

Under the leadership of Mike McElhinney, newly elected president of Inter-Fraternity Council, all committees are working to make the I.F.C. a strong and unified part of the fraternity system.

The I.F.C. has a strong Executive Council comprised of first vice president Van Tazzoli, Phi Kappa Delta, second vice president Greg Johnson, Sigma Chi, treasurer Doug Stewart, Phi Eta Kappa, and secretary Benjamin Russell, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

The I.F.C. met late in the summer and formed a new, workable committee system directly aimed at fraternity problems relations and system objectives.

The first step was to expand the roles of the house mothers, making them an integral part of fraternity functions. Secondly, the I.F.C. tackled its pledge and initiation problem. They formed the Pledge Council chairmaned by Doug Stewart of Phi Eta Kappa. This council is made up of the house pledge trainers. The first meeting was very beneficial as each trainer was willing to admit his program's faults and share constructive, modern ideas. At the next meeting a clinical psychologist will be present to offer ideas and analyze programs.

A panel of sophomores will also be present to evaluate the past year's programs. The leadership of this committee should moderate pledge training and informal initiation practices.

The third area developed by I.F.C. is the Scholarship Council made up of the individual house chairmen. Their function is to improve faculty relations. They are in the process of coordinating a weekly faculty member invitation dinner.

A fourth innovation is the Sorority-Fraternity Relations Committee. Its function is to coordinate program, share ideas and build a stronger Greek unity. A fifth committee under Chuck Webster is current making plans for the establishment of two new fraternity chapters.

This year's Greek Weekend is being planned by the Social Committee under the chairmanship of Keith Rowe.

Chuck Martel's Rush Council is tackling the ATO and Beta reactions. The I.F.C. is doing everything possible to get the best for them and allowing them an easy rush in order to acquire a working membership.

Coffee House drama

"Waiting For Godot" presented by the Colby drama group will be the Coffee House entertainment Friday, November 3 at 8:30. The doors will be closed at this performance when the house is full.

The Coffee House will be closed for repairs from November 4 to November 10 and 11 will be held for weekends, nights with admission charged in order to pay for the necessary repairs.

Entire campus open to soapbox privileges

by William Yates

The Lovejoy Quadrangle hasn't moved physically, but it is no longer the center of free speech activities on campus. A recommended policy statement, issued by the University administration this summer, opens the entire outdoor campus to any form of expression of opinion by students, faculty members, and their invited guests. The only limitations are that normal University functions may not be disturbed, nor may the free flow of traffic be disrupted. Individuals wishing to use outdoor facilities have the responsibility of informing the chief of campus police of their plans. Inside facilities that are used for scheduled meetings are also to be available on a non-discriminatory basis, to be scheduled through the proper authorities.

Dr. Austin Peck, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, commented that the Lovejoy area "was no longer the right way to go about the matter." Reiterating sections of the new policy, he said the primary purpose of an academic community is to search for truth. Indispensable in this search is the freedom to think and speak "as one wishes."

He further noted that the University of Maine is implementing this new concept with a review board. Specially, the Board of Free Speech and Assembly has been established to cover all eventualities that might arise in connection with the rights to exercise freedom of speech and assembly, as well as with the University's efforts to preserve these rights. The Board is composed of six members, two each from faculty, administration, and student body. All members will serve two-year terms, except this, the first year, student members shall be a junior and a senior, and one faculty and one administrative member will serve for a year each. The other two members will each serve a full two-year term. In following years, student Senate will elect a junior each fall, to serve a two-year term. Faculty members are selected by the Faculty Council, while administration members are selected by President of the University. Neither faculty nor administration members may serve on the Free Speech Board and the Committee of Discipline at the same time.

The new Board will serve to advise those whose responsibilities concern implementation of policy, serve as an appeals board for those who feel that by the establishment of prior restraints the spirit of the new policy has been violated, and serve to review cases of alleged improper use of and response to the right of free speech and assembly and to make recommendations to the appropriate individual or body. By publishing its decisions, the Board will establish a body of precedents, to be used as guidelines in similar future cases.

Dr. Peck believes that the idea of a review board is good, because it provides a channel of two-way communication, and serves as a forum for discussion. He stated that the University is one of few schools to provide such a body for discussion of free speech and assembly problems.

ANTARCTIC PEAK NAMED FOR ZOOLOGY FACULTY MEMBER

A mountain in Antarctica now bears the name of University of Maine zoology department faculty member Dr. John Dearborn who spent 25 months in the region between 1958 and 1961 as a member of two National Science Foundation-supported expeditions. This is the second Antarctic landmark to be named for a U. of M. faculty member. Previously a glacier was named for Geology Prof.
Harold Borm who has also spent considerable time there on geological research. Dr. Dearborn was notified that the U. S. Board on Geographical Names had named the mountain for him by T. G. Jones, divisional director of environmental science for the National Science Foundation. Jones was head of the Anti-rctica Program office for NSF when Dearborn was there.

A graduate of the University of New Hampshire in 1955, Dearborn received his master's degree in zoology at Michigan State University in 1957 and his Ph.D. at Stanford University in 1965. It was while he was a graduate student at Stanford that he made two trips to Antarctica as a research assistant studying marine animals.

Before coming to Maine in the fall of 1966 Dearborn was an NSF postdoctoral fellow at the Museum

Europe has always trusted international opinion to be strong enough to change any country’s unpopular policy. So Europeans are now a bit confused with all the almost entire world protesting American involvement in Vietnam and the war widening anyway.

Two recent speeches, accenting this growing isolation of the U.S. from the world’s good graces, were the first, in the United Nations, was made by Sardar Swaran Singh, the Indian De- fense Minister. His second was in Paris, made by Pierre Mendes-France, the former chairman of the French Assembly. It certainly wasn’t an unconditional end to the bombing of North Vietnam. But it’s significant, in that Singh adds his protest to those of a number of other countries considered friends if not allies of the United States. Holland, Denmark, Norway and France—all NATO members—have bitterly attacked Johnson’s Vietnam politics. Canada, Indonesia, Sweden, and Ethiopia have taken similar positions: that the U.S. must take the first step towards peace. Mr. Mendes-France said pretty much the same thing, but his tone was much sharper than Mr. Singh’s. He called the bombing “absolutely unjustifiable,” and gave homage to “the proud people of (North) Vietnam.” His unequivocal language will no doubt be received with a heavy heart in Washington, where the State Department types predict an “apres-Gaullisme” controlled by the Federation of the Left, whom Mendes-France represents.

At this writing there are only three countries left in Western Europe who haven’t formally protested the U.S. conduct of the war. Ireland, whose Foreign Minister, Mr. Frank Aiken, has always acquiesced to anything the U.S. did; Moco, Italy, for whom NATO is “a way of life;” and finally Great Britain.

Of these three “silences,” Washington is undoubtedly happier about Britain’s. But last week, the Labor Party began to lean on the Wilson government to “dissociate itself completely” from America’s war. The same day, National Opinion Polls of Britain said that the Wilson government had lost the support of the electorate. The Wilson government would get whipped.

Maybe Wilson will continue his support. He ignored last year’s Labor call to “bring all pressure to bear on the U.S.A. to end the war.” But significantly, this week, Foreign Secretary George Brown said the British Government “doubts the competence of Vietnam.” He added, no doubt for Washington’s benefit, that he didn’t feel Hanoi had indicated that it would respond to a bombing halt. Despite its still silence now, it is obvious that if Wilson is going to lose the election on the Vietnam issue—an issue that doesn’t even belong to him—he will change his stand.

As for Hanoi, it seems clear that they won’t “indicate” anything until the American elections are over in November, 1968. If they agree to negotiate before that election, and talk a bit, President Johnson is sure to win by running on a “don’t-negotiate-in-midstream” platform. This must be intolerable to Hanoi, which trusts Johnson as much as he trusts “nervous Nellies.”

Glancing at the rest of the world: one student killed, 743 injured, in an anti-war demonstration in Japan; U.S. Navy ship quarantined in Turkish port for fear of anti-U.S. rioting; 70 Italian Communists defect to pro-Chinese party because their pro-Soviet party isn’t stiff enough on the U.S. on Vietnam; a second Buddhist monk burns himself to death in Sa Dec, Vietnam. This kind of stuff doesn’t raise an eyebrow any more.

Well, OK, so the foreigners don’t like the U.S. What about what these red-blooded Americans, who fought two wars in defense of peace? A New York Times survey this week says public support for the Administration’s conduct of the war in Vietnam has declined measurably in recent weeks, with increased sentiment for less military action and more negotiation. Gallup polls continually show Mr. Johnson slipping because of his conduct of the war. On a given day you can get one half-million people around the country to demonstrate against the war (like this American Legion demonstration on the West Coast); or two million. But sionistically this week. agreeing

To the Editor:

I wish to voice my agreement with the editorial signed C. P. The right of dissent is the basis of liberty. On the other hand, haranguing and maliciously slandering those whose opinions and actions offend you is the basis of intolerance. It must be remembered that the slander of the left is just as undemocratic as the conservative intolerance of the right. Both extremes have been expressed in the Maine Campus recently.

antiwar?

To the Editor:

Today the positions pro and con on the U.S. involvement in Vietnam have pretty well solidified. The minds are all made up and most of the demonstrating and verbal abuse does nothing more than reaffirm the previously agreed upon opinion, both pro and con.

Much of the anti-war feeling started out as a protest against this specific war and not as a protest against war in general. Gradually, perhaps, it has perhaps been frustrated with the knowledge that "nothing I can say will alter the war." Many protesters grew disillusioned with everything military. Now we have the protest against all activity that is or seems to be, military, or in sympathy with military views.

Let's face it — the military establishment is a fact of life. The United States is not going to disband and eliminate the military from our lives and government. Our culture cannot exist for any period of time without a large and powerful military establishment. Thus, consents military influence in civilian life is going to continue and anyone who calls for an end to it is, frankly, all wet.

The current Vietnam war is a nasty, unpleasant, dangerous business. Perhaps we should never have gotten involved in it. That's tough, we are in it and there is no pleasant way out.

Immediate and total withdrawal is unlikely and unfeasible. Immediate and total involvement is equally unfeasible. Our superior firepower has stalemated the war and could win it in a military sense, but that would not end the war.

It is easy and convenient to blame individuals such as Johnson or McNamara, but the gap between proclaiming instant solutions and the gap between carrying out workable solutions is truly vast.

The simple truth is that much of the written and verbal fireworks over the war are merely harmless toys designed to soothe the ruffled egos of insignificant by-standers. The actual powers governing the war machinery (and this not intended to imply a massive conspiracy) function aloof and unilluminated by the demonstrations and counter-demonstrations, demonstrations and counter-demonstrations that needlessly excite so many.

The Interfraternity Council voted unanimously to pull behind Alpha Tau Omega and Beta Theta Pi in their reinstating period. IFC President Mike Melinis said that the IFC Rush Council (made up of the House Rush Chairmen and an IFC Chairman Chuck Martel of the ATOs) is helping the Betas and the ATOs organize their rush programs. The IFC voted to allow the two fraternities to start rushing on November 1, three weeks before the other fraternities. During this time, both ATO and Beta will be holding smokers in their houses and visiting freshmen in the dorms. Melinis stated that even men from the IFC will be helping them rush in the dormitories, "so that each freshman will be introduced to the challenge and tremendous benefits to be derived from organizing their own house."

ATO has already signed eight men. Skip Smaha, transfer from St. Michael's College, was elected president of the new ATO organization. Beta has four of their brothers moving back into the house next fall. Both houses are looking for real leaders from the freshman class to pledge and actually "form their own house, running it the way they want it," "Both houses are in tremendous physical shape and are financially stable, giving the freshmen a clean slate with which to start out."

"If you have taken LSD, don't worry," says Dr. Jose Egozcue, a genetic specialist at the Oregon Regional Primate Center. "The drug is not dangerous, in recent publicity has led people to believe."

"But, of course, this is considered, along with Maimon M. Cohen, State University of New York, as one of the country's most knowledgeable LSD researchers. He has often been quoted in the American press, though he says that many of the warnings sounded against LSD by national magazines are alarmist and false."

"I don't think LSD will cause anyone to get leukemia," he said, "and as long as a mother does not take the drug during the first three months of her pregnancy, her child is not likely to have any serious, drug induced congenital abnormalities."

Not everyone who has taken LSD sustains chromosome damage. "LSD, if taken in doses of under 200, about 150 miles, rarely causes breakage in chromosomes," said Dr. Egozcue. He said that the number of trips a person has taken is probably not important, it is the size of the dose which determines the amount of damage, if any. "LSD is not addictive," he added, "but it can become habit forming, like tobacco."

Dr. Egozcue, a young man who is not afraid to answer truthfully some of the questions which plague LSD users, is a pioneer in the field of relating chromosome damage to LSD.

He is a well known personality to Portland's drug using community, both hippie and straight, because he has educated them, taking blood samples out of their arms. So far over 80 people have volunteered blood. Their LSD experiences vary from one trip to more than a hundred LSD trips.

"I'm looking for chromosome damage," he said, and LSD does cause at least one chromosome, Philadelphia one, found in circulating blood cells to become broken. (This condition bears some resemblance to leukemia but is not leukemia). "As far as I know, Philadelphia one breakage will not cause any permanent or lasting damage. He added that the condition would probably disappear in about ten years after the last LSD dose.

Egozcue is one of the few LSD researchers in the country to take blood samples from LSD users. "I'm off the street," "I sample people who take drugs."

For a period of research is done on persons who take the drug under laboratory controlled conditions. I get a much bigger variety."

Dr. Egozcue comes off as an honest man. As a medical researcher he is convinced his work may be a valuable contribution toward unlocking the "secrets" of LSD. He is scrupulously careful in his experiments, as only one man who loves his work can be. To the people who volunteered blood samples, Dr. Egozcue has proven he can be trusted to keep their identities anonymous.

"I wouldn't take it myself," he said of LSD, but he believes the dangerous aspect of the drug has been greatly inflated by many popular periodicals. He said, "No one is sure how much damage, if any, the drug causes in brain cells and nobody really knows, in the brain, what is neurological and what is physiological."

He said there could be a relationship between "bad trips" and brain damage but nobody really knows. He said in his own field, chromosome research, his work is still in an infant stage. At any time he might discover evidence that LSD does do permanent or serious damage to humans.

Presenting The Drinking Song for Sprite:

"ROAR, SOFT-DINK, ROAR!"

(To the tune of "Barbara Fritchie")

Traditionally, a lusty, rousing fight song is de rigeur for every worthy cause and industry. But we wrote a song for Sprite anyway. We'd like you to sing it while drinking Sprite, though this may cause some cocktail and coughing. It's all in good, clean fun. And speaking of good, clean things, what about the taste of Sprite? It's clean. However, good clean things may not exactly be your idea of jollies. In that case, remember that Sprite is always refreshing. "There and tingling," in fact. And very collegiate. And maybe we'd better quit while we're ahead. So here it is: The Sing Song For Sprite. And if you can get a group together to sing it—we'd be very surprised.

ROAR, soft drink, ROAR!

You're the lowest soft drink we ever saw.

So tart and tingling, they couldn't keep you quiet.

The perfect drink, you.

To sit and think by,

To any campus riot! O00000h--

Flip your cap, hiss and bubble,

To any campus riot! O00000h--

Roar, soft drink, roar!

fizz and gush!

Oh we can't think to hang out in the street with!

"ROAR, SOFT-DINK, ROAR!"

SPRITE, SO FAST AND SPIRITED, IF YOU COULDN'T KEEP IT QUIET.
University observatory available to students

by Steve Smith

All star gazers and fellow celestial observers are invited to use the facilities of the University observatory located between the Memorial Union and the cow barn—the small, white domed building with the red light over the door.

The observatory, which prior to this year was available only by special permission to students doing projects for astronomy or photography classes, is now open from 7 to 9 every evening. Duncan Moore, a junior Arts and Science student, is in charge of the visiting hours. The observatory presently houses a small meridian telescope and an 8-inch refractor telescope. The former is not available to students only become nobody knows how to operate it. The refractor is run by Duncan Moore and fellow students who were instrumental in getting the observatory opened to the public.

The 10-foot high scope was built for the University by Alvan Clark and Son in 1900. The scope has a maximum magnifying power of 710X and a minimum power of 8X, with a reduction to 40X with a special attachment.

Weather and season permitting, the students who operate the observatory try to show visitors Jupiter, Double Star, the Moon, Saturn, Andromeda Galaxy, and Ring Nebula. Also, daytime visitors can view the sun through a special attachment which filters out 96% of the sun's heat, allowing only 4% to reach the lens.

The students who operate the observatory report that it now receives an average of eight visitors each night; they anticipate an increase in visitors, which will, hopefully, prompt the University to appropriate $350 for a clock drive for the telescope. A clock drive would adjust the telescope automatically for the earth's rotation and thus prevent constant adjustment by students. It would also make it possible to take time exposure shots through the telescope.

Debate team places seventh of eighteen

by D. Johnson

Two annual events marked the week-end of October 27-28 for "Maine" debaters. The first of these events was the Boston University Debate Tournament, held Friday and Saturday. The University was well represented by an affirmative team of Bob Reidamn and Sue Hart, and a negative team of Joe Pietroski and Gary E. Smith.

On the affirmative side Bob and Sue took wins from Ursinas College, the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, Hunter College, and Queens College. Queens College gave Gary and Sue their only loss. They were triumphant over Brooklyn College, the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy, Wesleyan University, Hunter College, and Ursinas College.

The crowning event of the tournament was the awarding of a plaque for best negative speaker in the varsity division to Gary E. Smith.

"Maine's" final record was seven wins, five losses, while she tied for seventh out of eighteen schools in the entire tournament. The University of Vermont will host a varsity-novice tournament on November 17 in which our debaters will participate.

The second event of the week-end was the annual high school debate workshop held here at the university. About seventeen schools traveled here to participate in discussions and debates on their national topic, and listen in on an exhibition debate and panel discussion presented by University of Maine faculty members.

Looking for excitement, romance, and intrigue? But you say you have to stay on campus and finish school? Then do the next best thing. Take a job with the CAMPUS! Right now we have openings on the editorial and news staffs and in the advertising and business depts. You may not find love, fame, and fortune but you will find working for the CAMPUS rewarding and stimulating. But you say, what about fringe benefits? If it is fringe benefits you want then it is fringe benefits you will have, like a satisfied id and feeling of prestige and your name up in type. So hurry. Come in today and leave the rut behind.

ATTENTION STUDENTS, PARTICULARLY SOPHOMORES

All students preparing for teaching regardless of college must apply for admission to the Teacher Education Program before the end of their sophomore year. Obtain applications from your advisor or the Information Desk, College of Education.

Passing an English Proficiency Examination is a requirement for preliminary admission to the Teacher Education Program. In no case will a student be enrolled in student teaching. As this is a state requirement, the Fall administration of this examination will be held Saturday, December 2, beginning promptly at 9:00 a.m. in Hussey Auditorium and will take approximately two hours to complete.
Holding Carter Ill, editor of the Delta Democrat-Times, will be the principal speaker for the annual Newspaper Day dinner Friday evening. Maine newsman will be guests at the dinner meeting in the Hilton Room, Memorial Union, at 6 p.m. Newspaper Day will begin at 3 p.m. with an open house in the journalism department at Lord Hall.

Carter has been on the Orono campus since Monday morning, October 30, as the journalism department’s Peter Edes Visiting Lecturer. The visiting lecturers was begun last year in order to bring newspapermen from other parts of the country to the U.M.
campus to discuss ideas with students. This year’s visiting lecturer is financed by a grant from the Maine Daily Newspaper Publishers Association.

Carter joined the staff of the Delta Democrat-Times in 1959, after graduating from Princeton University. He says that his experience in the Varsity, Frosh cross country teams victorious

by Russ Potter

Both the varsity and freshman cross country teams ended their regular seasons on a winning note in home meets Saturday. The varsity tuned up for the Yankee Conference Championships by topping Vermont 21 to 34 while the freshmen edged Old Town High School 27 to 28. Steve Turner won the varsity meet for Maine and Don Goodness capped first place for the freshmen. The varsity, 2-3 in dual meets for Maine this season, hosts the Yankee Conference Championship meet this Saturday at 11 A.M. on a special course at the Penobscot Valley Golf Course. The class of the conference would appear to be Massachusetts, the defending titlist, and Connecticut rating a slight edge on the basis of a one point victory earlier this season over Massachusetts.

Maine does not figure to have the depth to challenge either Connecticut or Massachusetts for one of the top slots, but with a home course advantage the Black Bears just might surprise the rest of the pack.

Dalers ready

by D. A. Steward

The roster of the 1967-68 varsity basketball team has been released by Coach Brian McCull. There have already been two frosh-varsity scrimmages and Coach McCull intends to have more, in this year’s races, comprise “the biggest, strongest freshman basketball team we’ve had in years.”

The varsity has been practicing since October 15th for the December 2nd opener against Assumption.

Members of the 1967-68 Basketball Squad include:

SPORTS CALENDAR

November 2 — Frosh soccer, the Bates JV’s at Orono, 1:30 p.m.
November 3 — Frosh football, the Bowdoin frosh at Orono, 1:30 p.m.
November 4 — Cross country, the Yankee Conference Championships at Orono, 11:00 a.m.
— Soccer, Maine at Colby in Waterville, 12:30 p.m.
— Football, Northeastern at Orono, 1:30 p.m.
November 8 — Soccer, Maine at Bates in Lewiston, 1:30 p.m.

The varsity with a 1-3 will be on the road for games Saturday against Colby and Wednesday with previous shut-out victim Bates. These two clashes will decide Maine’s finish in the state series.

The freshman soccer team suffered a 3 to 2 defeat at the hands of Keene Hill last Thursday when its second half rally, led by goal-scorers Rubin Hernandez and Jose Braymal, fell a goal short. The state series soccer standings are: Bowdoin, 2-1-0; Maine, 1-1-1; Bates, 1-1-0; and Colby 0-1-1.

Soccer team runs into "juggernaut" at UVM

by Russ Potter

The Maine varsity soccer team tied Colby 1-1 Thursday and fell before Yankee Conference leader Vermont 5-0 Saturday. After a sluggish first half against Colby, the Black Bears, stung by the visitor's third period goal, came to life. Swat Manthali climaxed the rally with the game-tying goal mid-way through the final period. The teams then battled through two scoreless overtimes.

“We run into a juggernaut,” Coach Livesey said of Saturday’s encounter with UVM at Burlington.

The Maine boosters trailed Vermont only 1-0 at the first half, largely on the brilliant goal-tending of Ken Olsen, but the superior speed and experience of the host squad was telling in the second half when Vermont knocked in four tallies.
