Rule modifications due
Grad students seek organization

by Mark Jacobs and John Scott

Over the last several years the number of graduate students at the University of Maine has remained nearly constant, to nearly five hundred. However, the position of the graduate student on the Orono campus is unusual. As a rule, graduate students carry heavier work loads than do the undergraduates, not necessarily in course hours, but in the amount of work that they must do in the regular 10 hours and courses as well as in the graduate level 500 courses.

To consider the graduate students as a team standing by goals set Saturday, October 14, at 4:30 in the Loom Room, will be the Standards Board Chairman of the A.A.U.P. which represents graduate students. The graduate students also have their own means of expression and communication such as the Student Senate, the I.F.U. and A.W.S. The graduate students, however, lack these means of expression and communication with the administration and the student body. Until recently there has been little need for the graduate student to worry about this unusual situation.

Formerly the University of Maine had not developed to its present proportions, and communication was relatively easy through departmental channels. The total number of full time graduate students at the University of Maine was small, and as a general rule many graduate students lived off-campus and tended to dissociate themselves from campus life; not because of disinterest but due to the essential difference between undergraduate and graduate studies.

The University of Maine has always been, and still is, primarily an undergraduate institution, and its major concern rightfully, has been with this group. Recently the University, as many other major institutions of higher learning, has extended its facilities to include a comprehensive graduate program, and with this growth of the Graduate School, the graduate student has found his position to be increasingly unusual.

Currently the graduate student must meet the standards set by the Graduate School, yet at the same time they are also under the control of the undergraduate administrative dean and are subject to the undergraduate social code. This is not to imply that graduate students should be exempted from all rules but it does raise the exceedingly apparent that there must be a change in the existing rules as they now apply towards graduate students.

This is most apparent in the housing situation. Graduate housing has been provided in Oxford Hall, but in the larger and more obvious unavailability of this facility, it is still desirable to have graduate students in the residence halls.

The proposal would then be re-examined and revised by the Graduate Students Senate and the University Council and the Orono chapter of the A.A.U.P. which represent graduate students. Graduate students have found this idea should be incorporated and made into law.

So what's happening now with the University Senate Constitution Committee? The Constitution Committee has prepared and distributed to the individuals for discussion. Talk-it-over sessions will be held by Constitution Committee for undergraduate student and graduate students. Undergraduate students will be held on November 28. Undergraduate students will be held on December 24. The Constitution Committee has submitted the proposal to the Constitution Committee for further deliberations. The Constitution Committee then be referred to the Constitution Committee for further deliberations.

March 21 is the date of this year's Constitution Committee will consider changes in the U.S. Constitution of the University of Maine. If the Maine women have shown enough interest in the in the graduate program and a workable way of providing for them on the campus has been found, the proposal will be put to a popular vote. A majority can make it a law.

The flying feat

by Melanie Cyr

It is doubtful that there is a coed out on campus who has not felt the wind of the curler elimination proposal. Girls clower in the laundry rooms and sprawl in the halls to discuss the possibilities of this modern innovation in dorm living. Phrases like "a kind of liberation," "Maine's finally catching up," and "the nifty curlers" carry along down corridors and up stairwells. But, thus far, the conversation has run primarily in questions and speculation. Only one person on the subject.

The plan that has been ushered through A.W.S.'s Constitution Committee is one pertaining exclusively to senior women. A curl is eligible for the program if she is a senior, as a senior or at least twenty-one years old and is not on disciplinary probation. Her parents or guardians will have received a letter explaining the curler policy and she will have signed a statement of responsibility. Curler Committee meetings would be held in each living unit and the candidate must attend at least one.

If this type of program were adopted there would be a Special Curler Committee created with the rank and file coming from the Standards Board Representatives

AWS curfew proposal to be debated in dorms

"It is the contention of A.W.S. that there should be a reexamination and revision of these phases of life affecting the women students at the University of Maine. Opinions should be updated in order to compensate for the void that exists now between what is inherent in the word 'college' and what exists here.

... Sharon Sullivan

In her report to the A.W.S. Constitution Committee, Sharon Sullivan states 'Currently there is no curfew policy, as such, regarding residence halls and there is little formal discipline enforced by the dormitory counselors. The residence halls are left to the students to police, to the extent that they can. The students have complained that there is too much noise and freedom during the night hours.'

I.C.C. presents dual concert

The newly-formed Interclass Council will bring two top vocal groups to Orono for what may be the concert of the year. Jay and the Americans have been scheduled to present a dual concert with Ian and Sylvia in the Memorial Gym on November 8. Tickets cost $2.00 and will be available in the Union on November 13.

Lots of guys born in desperate poverty lowered their horns and broke through the jungle to find recognition and fame—some juggling partners along the way with whom they can share the spotlight. But Jay and the Americans share between them the satisfaction of realizing an ambition that began together as kids in New York, and that has blossomed together as adults in the entertain- ment world.

At night when they sat around on the steps of the tenements they sang together, and there the seed of ambition was planted. Their voices blended beautifully together and they found they shared the same enthusiasm for singing, and the same conviction that America offered unrestricted opportunities for all who were willing to work.

They began a series of "Candy Store Concerts" to establish a feeling of communication with an audience. They haunted the pawn shops and took odd jobs to get money for singing and dancing lessons. They returned in homes and vacant lots, Billied JAY AND THE AMERICANS out to seek their fortune in late 1961.

In the spring of 1962 they cut a disk "She Cried," and presented it to United Artists, who immediately signed the group to a long-term contract. "She Cried" was released and became an instant hit.

During the following three years JAY AND THE AMERICANS found more work coming in than they could handle. They were booked into the normal one-night-er类型, adju night clubs, television and college concert tours. "We could never afford to go to college," Jay recalls humorously, "now we can buy one."

They've come a long way from the "Candy Store Concerts," but they are still the same kids who played stick-ball in the streets of Brooklyn and sang on the streets with their big dreams and high hopes. "We still have a long way to go," Sandy admits, "but we're going to make it all the way.—TOGETHER."

"Folk singers... could hardly find a more tasteful model than the work of Ian and Sylvia."

Barushok breaks Masque casting tradition

by V. Kerry Inman

The Inter-Fraternity Council will hold rush orientation meetings in the men's dormitories on Wednesday, November 15 at 6:30 p.m. Freshmen about to leave various homes for college have the problem of choosing a major, and it is for this reason that the council is presenting a musical play, "Sensations." Three shows have been scheduled for November 8, 9, and 10, with dancing to the "SENSATIONS.

Best wishes to Jane Survant, Delta Delta Delta, pinned to Bill Boudier; Noreen Billings pinned to George Dunham, Beta Theta Pi; Joanne Stiles, Chi Omega, pinned to Steve Corn, Delta Epsilon, Mid- dlebury; Linda Rand, Alpha Chi Omega, pinned to Roger Clark, Phi Kappa Phi, Lyne Edmonds pinned to Peter Legendre, Sigma Chi; Peggy Cook, pinned to Bill Johnson, Sigma Chi; Caroline Whitehead pinned to John McElwee, Sigma Chi; Pat Scammen pinned to Bruce Verrill, Alpha Gamma Rho; Peggy Lock pinned to Howard Neal, Alpha Gamma Rho; June Wheelock engaged to Richard Weeks; Pam Flambag engaged to Pete Finnegan, Luis Kisereng engaged to Bob Pitch, USAF; Judy Cooper engaged to Ralph Newbert, Farmington; Peggy Cuming, Phi Mu, engaged to Jim Drummeny, St. Bonaventure; Joy Langmaid engaged to Davy Green.

Barushok breaks Masque tradition in two ways. First, the cast includes talent from nearby communities and secondly, a single role has been double cast. The results of this interesting departure will become known when the curtain rises December 12. Besides being interesting, the casting of the play has become the subject of controversy among persons interested in university theatre.

Talk to the man from General Electric. He represents 130 separate GE "companies" that deal in everything from space research to electric toothbrushes. We call them product departments. Each one is autonomous with its own management and business objectives. That's why a job at General Electric offers the kind of immediate responsibility you might find elsewhere. Right from the start you get a chance to demonstrate your initiative and individual capabilities. And, the more you show us, the faster you will move ahead. As you do, you'll find that you don't necessarily have to spend a lifetime working on the same job in the same place. We have operations all over the world. Chances are you'll get to try your hand at more than one of them. Our interviewers will be on campus soon. If you're wondering whether it's possible to find challenging work in big business, please arrange to see him. He speaks for 130 "companies."
Come gather 'round people
Wherever you roam
And admit that the waters
Around you have grown.
And accept it that soon
You'll be drenched to the bone,
If your time to you is worth savin'
Then you better start swimmin'
Or you'll sink like a stone,
For the times they are a-changin'!

"Senior-senior", three undergrads in Jazztet

by Paul MacGarvey

"College" student disparaged as a gray-haired music store merchant from Bangor, and three U. of M. students make up the University Jazztet. The Jazztet, a well-balanced group, is not officially related to the University, but for the past four years their activities have centered around the University.

The group is a very fluid organization, having gone through many transformations since its conception in 1963. At one time they numbered six and were known as the University sextet. The present quartet has been together for three years with the exception of the drummer, who is a freshman.

The pianist, Bill Deacon, is a "senior-senior" who graduated from Maine some 27 years ago. He now runs a music store in Bangor. Jim Howe, a junior music major from Old Town, plays the bass for the group. Also a music major is the saxophone player, Marshall Dessent, a senior from Orono. On the drums is Roger Ballau, a freshman liberal arts student from Reading, Mass.

The three senior musicians make up the University orchestra and the University sextet. The group is a very fluid organization, having gone through many transformations since its conception in 1963. At one time they numbered six and were known as the University sextet. The present quartet has been together for three years with the exception of the drummer, who is a freshman.

The University Jazztet practices in Lord Hall for their Thursday, November 16 concert in the Union's Main Lounge.

The Jazztet plays everything from Bossa-Nova to traditional American jazz. They don't seem to take themselves too seriously and as a result they have a very easy style. This easy style may also be because their concerts are given free and are as much for the enjoyment of group members as for the audience.

If you wish to enjoy their kind of music they will be playing in the Union's Main Lounge of the Memorial Union on Thursday, November 16 from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. They're a sound worth hearing.

Radio club offers telegram service

The U. of M. Amateur Radio Club has resumed its free message service for Maine students. This service provides students with a free "telegram" service to almost anywhere in the world, including servicers in Vietnam.

Message handling is one aspect of amateur radio which interested amateurs perform for the public. They are known collectively across the country as the National Traffic System. As this service is performed on a hobby, a complete guarantee of delivery cannot be made.

This service has been performed for almost fifty years and it has proven highly reliable. The messages themselves are systematically related from station to station until they arrive in the area of destination. The messages are then usually delivered by the telephone.

To take advantage of the service, students need only to fill out a message form. These forms are available next to the news counter in the Memorial Union. The completed form is then placed in a container which is emptied each day at 5 P.M. when the messages are being sent.

The only request asked of the students is for brief messages, legible hand writing, complete addresses and a telephone message when possible.

For years we backed a losing horse—the Maine Student Senate. And again we went to the polls and invested our trust in the officials and senators we elected; time and again the Senate failed to even show. Time and again we had a hidden cut nipped out of our tuition and time and again we wondered where the money went when our rug was pulled off the course to shoot the bull. Now, suddenly this year, it dawned on us that our dark horse is not only off and running, but way up front.

Last spring the Student Senate was little more than a joke to us far from over! Long in new Bethesda’s- written discipline code with something life into a dead horse. Although plans are not gelled and the Senate committees are working over the new Senate have done everything from raising funds to changing the rules of order that have regrettably been allowed to get away from us.

This much is certain: like his predecessor, Stan Wentzell, before him, Jim Turner made a number of campaign promises. Unlike his predecessor before him, Jim Turner has obviously matched his words with action.

Jim Turner promised last spring to fire up the Political Lyceum Committee and get excellent and prominent speakers to come to Orono. So far this year we have had a visit from U. S. Senator Barry Goldwater. Recently, we heard a highly polished Gov. Lee, we have heard from prominent Senate dove, Mark Hatfield. Although plans are not gelled and the Committee is still a shadow of a committee. Jim Turner may very well pull off a feat of imagination, and resourcefulness sometime in early December if plans come off to hold a Vietnam debate on campus between Dean George McGovern (D-N. D.) and Hawk Senator Gale McGee (D-Wyo.).

Another of Jim Turner’s promises was to work toward replacing the University’s current haphazardly written discipline code with something less a wasteland of uncertainty and vagueness. Jim Turner has worked well. He has gotten Dean Godfrey of the Portland Law School to draw up a clearer and more detailed code. Presently, various Senate committees are working over the new discipline code. The Senate has held a number of meetings and heard a couple of proposals and amendments, and generally adapting it for campus use.

Jim Turner promised last year that it be the prerogative of University instructors to excuse from final examinations all students holding an honor grade. Jim Turner has fulfilled his promise. It has been drawn up and is now up for a vote. Clearly, Turner has seen another promise through.

In addition to the above, Jim Turner and the Senate have done everything from raising minimum student wages from $1.00 hourly to $1.15, to making calendar changes which result in a wasted semester break, to founding a Yankee Conference Student Government Conference to share ideas on solving common campus problems.

This year the Senate has moved into all areas. It is on the job of campus housing conditions, while, at the same time, seeking to bring into the open for reassessment the problem of “untasteful” privileges for both fraternities and dormitories. Throughout the state the Senate-sponsored HEMY has been in touch with 184 schools. In the academic area, plans are afoot for a course evaluation booklet which will avoid the drudgery of answering endless surveys by all-inclusive, editorially constant, and complete with the pertinent statistics.

And Jim Turner and the rest of the Student Senate have done a splendid job so far; who knows what the future holds in store.
To the Editor:
In his letter to the editor, Mark Woodward categorizes UM as a "vault of virtue" and states that other institutions are "sink- ing in sin, Languishing in last, and whistling in wantonness". He seems very proud of the virtuous atmosphere in which he is gaining his "education." But is what value is the virtue he admires? Avoidance of problems — whether they are academic or social — is no way to gain insights into them. As so aptly put by John Milton in "Paradise Lost" and Mark Twain in "The Man Who Corrupted Hadleyburg", virtue without temptation is no virtue at all.

The temptation I speak of is not Mr. Woodward's sin, lust and wantonness, but the temptation of life itself. If this institution is to educate, then it must prepare us for what lies ahead. To create a sterile environment is to deprive us of the education — in life — which we seek and of which academic knowledge is but a part. If going to Pat's or the Don until 10:30 is considered by Mr. Woodward to be a step toward sin, lust and wantonness, then I suggest that he takes a long, hard look at his concept of virtue.

Yes Mr. Woodward, I would like to see "all this" crumbling before the onslaught of the thousands who will look outside our locked doors. Yes I would like to see a re-evaluation of the meaning of education. Yes I would like to see the students of UM be given the preparation needed to meet the complex academic, industrial and socially-interactive problems which 20th century Americans face. My complaint is not with the academic preparation UM students receive — it is with your attitude that sheltering students from normal car dates, until 10-30, will build their character, their moral fiber, and enhance their education.

If your views predominate, then when students graduate and face the real so-called corrupt world, they will be impregnated to cope with the problem of the thief who will attempt to burglarize their own personalized "vault of virtue".

Mel Colchamiro

To the Editor:
In his letter to the editor which appeared October 26, Mark Woodward-eight makes some rather strong claims. I seriously wonder if he is hiding under his bed in fear of the "thousands who now lurk outside" his locked door. I, for one, doubt very much that the University of Maine is, despite its rustic charm, "the last bastion of purity in a corrupt world".

Someday Mark may have to un- lock his door and venture forth into this great wilderness which man has fashioned for himself. I hope for his sake that the day is not too distant in the future. In his present frame of mind, Mark can call himself concerned, but he would be stretching the truth to call himself a student.

Roger A. Roy

To the Editor:
Ever since our daughter applied for admission at the University of Maine a year ago I have had nothing but the highest praise for all that has taken place, that is, until halftime at homecoming.

Never in my life have I experienced anything like the shock of having a buoyant and gun held on me that day. Even now I am shaken to think that an institution of education should resort to unsanctioned performance of a such a primitive nature. I would hate to think I had a son to be so "honored".

War should be the last possible resort in the affairs of men. I feel the half-time performance was done in extremely poor taste. I agree with the editorial which appeared in the CAMPUS signed P.S.T. Let us hope that never again will a visit to the campus be marred by such a low grade exhibition, and that once again praise for the Uni-

(R.M.) Virginia Phillips
Coed hours eliminated at Louisiana college

GRINNELL, Ia. (L.P.) Grinnell College has abolished Women's hours effective immediately, President Glenn Leggett said the Board of Trustees approved the new policy in the belief "that any regulation of college women's hours, either by the college or by the individual, is a matter of security rather than morality and that reasonable security can be assured within the women's residences without the necessity of the college's maintaining an arbitrary 'hours' system."

Dean of Women Alice O. Low said the decision was made after careful and lengthy discussion among individual students, the representatives of student government groups, the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, and the student dean.

"The college is aware of significant changes that have occurred in the years in attitudes and practices which affect the social regulations of women," Dean Low said. "These changes have been reflected in a gradual relaxation of the time limits which have been imposed on college women in their freedom to remain outside the college dormitories, and the hours imposed on most campuses today are far more liberal than they were only a decade ago."

"The way a student uses his or her time clearly has an effect on the individual's academic success and social life, but the relative effect varies greatly on individuals and at different times," Dean Low said.

"From an academic point of view, it seems likely that self-regulation with its inherent necessity for the sometimes painful development of self-discipline and an increasingly intelligent sensitivity to priorities and proportion, has a firmer educational justification than a gradually relaxing system of arbitrary hours set by the college."

"The responsibility must rest with the individual student and with her parents in their normal family relationship," she added.

Some say we specialize in power... power for propulsion... power for auxiliary systems... power for aircraft, missiles and space vehicles... power for marine and industrial applications...
A young campus, a reality only since 1965, has been keeping pace in those short three years with the enrollment projections made by the university which forecast 1,875 students in 1971-72. This fall 174 students began their college education at Augusta — two new two-year associate degree programs. The liberal studies program is planned for students who may continue their education in senior college, while the public administration course is terminal. Intended for students who do not plan to go beyond the first two years, it offers a program of general, semi-professional, and occupational/technical education, combined with liberal arts. Students who select the administration program have two options, business or public administration.

The dialogue included comments on every controversial subject from politics to sex. At times it was humorous, but more often shocking and scatological. The line, "Save in Latin -" is at once poetic and satirical. Objections are not unfounded to the statement, "I once thought I saw the Holy Spirit like a great bird flapping its wings in the cathedral, trying to get out." It was an interesting and well-produced dialogue of avant-garde theatre. Such productions are an integral part of today's theatre world, and a welcome addition to the university campus. The Last Word was followed by a special off-campus presented by Donald Thomas. Mr. Thomas' topics were for the most part original and exceedingly humorous. They were no satire. His style is similar to that of the popular comedians of today, and only in a few cases inferior. For their Friday night performances the Colby Players are to be thanked for bringing to the campus avant-garde theatre of exceptionally good quality.

Jan Peerce in concert

by Tracy Bronson

Everyone knows Jan Peerce. Even those who aren't opera fans have a warm spot in their hearts for this renowned tenor. His debut at the Metropolitan Opera came in 1941, and he has since performed in Europe, Japan, South America, Australia, Africa, Israel, and the Soviet Union. Everywhere, he has earned raves and bravos. He has become familiar to the American public through his records, ranging from opera to folk music and popular ballads, and radio and television appearances.

For his 8 p.m. concert in the Memorial Gym, Mr. Peerce has selected music by Bach, Scarlatti, Handel, Schubert, Paladilhe, Four- drain, Danticii, Taran, Rachmaninoff, and Verdi. "Students may pick up their tickets in 123 Lord Hall, only at I.D. is necessary. This week also gives us an opportunity to see the music faculty in action as Clayton Hare and Dorothy Swetnam present a concert on November 10 in the Lord Hall Recital Hall." Intramural Football

by Keith Rowe

After careful consideration, sixteen Greek men were selected for the first annual intramural football all-stars team. These men were chosen on the basis of their performances during this fall's season. Only the top four teams are represented, as none of the other teams competed in more than two games, limiting individual performances.

Kappa Sigma, the league unbeaten, leads the offense with four all-stars; Phi Gamma Delta follows with two selections; Sigma Chi and Phi Eta Kappa each have one. Defensively the "Sig." again pave the way with three athletes; Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Chi each have two, and Phi Eta has one.

Ch.E.s at Merck..."You know that isothermal recrystallization process Dick Klophaus' worked out?

Dick Klophaus gets real satisfaction from the variety and sophistication of engineering needed to develop, design, and manage the processes required to produce Merck products. He and his Ch.E. colleagues get equal satisfaction from the knowledge that the end result of their work is needed for the betterment of people around the world.

For Ch.E.s, it's an ideal combination. Add mobility...real opportunity for growth and promotion...real opportunity to learn...develop new techniques...Merck's liberal policies on benefits, graduate work, and professional achievement...Merck's outstanding sales growth (12%/year since 1957) and research investment ($46 million this year). Add all of these factors together, and you'll see why Merck attracts some of the finest engineering talents in the country. And keeps them.

How about you? Think about the engineering variety and sophistication required to produce the complex molecules used for pharmaceutical products. Think about the good use these products are put to. Then see your Merck Representative on campus.

Dick Klophaus, by the way, now supervises production of Vitamin C, Vitamin K, and various sulfa products. His responsibilities, and those of other young Ch.E.s, are described in our new booklet, Merck: an engineer's world. And thousands of other young engineers are finding out...you'll actually enjoy reading them. Bears lose Fourth straight
shoutout

by D. A. Steward

The Huskies of Northeastern University sent the University of Maine Black Bears down to their fourth straight shooout Saturday. NU is now 6-1-0 on the season, and Maine is 0-7-0.

Maine stayed in the game for three quarters on fumble recoveries, an interception by Ken Zich, and some other good defensive plays, but failed to put together enough of a drive to get into Huskie territory. UMaine's net yardage also fell short of the fifty mark, with only 22 yards on the ground and 27 through the air.

Steve Gravelle (77) seems intent on tackling a Rhode Island ball carrier, while Pete Quakenbush (35) practices his Yoga.

Do you buy a shirt
or a label?

If you want a good shirt, look for a good label. One that means the shirt is styled to last. With rolls, tapers and seams in the right places. Like this Arrow "Cum Jiuade" Oxford. It's a woven blend of Dacron polyester and cotton with skinny boxed stripes of green and blue. Button-down collar, tapered waist, long sleeves. Perma-iron so it won't wrinkle. And "Scourized Plus," in checks, plaids, solids and stripes. All the things you look for in a shirt—for $7.00.

And in a good shirt you'll find a good label. The best labels come in our shirts. Arrow.

- NOTICE -
Applications for men's residence hall counselors for the Spring Semester 1968 are now being accepted. All applications must be submitted prior to December 1, 1967, to be considered. Application blanks may be obtained from the head counselor of the residence hall in which the applicant resides. Applicants not living in the residence hall system may obtain application blanks from the Office of the Dean of Men.

Charlie Yanush again led the ground "attack" with 37 yards. and Bob Farrell ground out 27. Pete Norris sailed one punt over 711 yards on the fly, but he continued to have trouble getting the long ball out of the backfield.

Huskie halfback Jack Martinelli scored 14 points for Northeastern, scoring two touchdowns and running in a two-point conversion. Bruce Cornell, starting in ace fullback Bill Carpenter's slot, tailed one six-pointer on a 12-yard jaunt through the center of the Maine line. Curran, NU's prime scoring threat, spent most of the afternoon on the bench nursing a broken hand. Dick Quigley accumulated 5 points by booting one field goal and two extra points.

At the end of the 3rd quarter the score was only 6-6, but the Huskies added 18 points in the final period to turn the game into a rout. Final score: 24-6. So much for the grabiron ghosts, and Maine's hopes for a one-victory season. I think.

The bulk of Northeastern's defensive line spent most of the time chasing Bears down in the backfield, and on one auspicious occasion the Maine offensive squad faced a 4th and 45 situation.

Coach Walt Abbott tried a few new wrinkles, using a shotgun formation in running with senior Gary Platz at quarterback for a while, but to no avail.

Next Saturday Maine ends the 1967 season in a tilt with the University of Rhode Island. The game starts at 1:30 in Kingston, Rhode Island on MacDonald Field. The Rams currently have a 5-1 record, and just last Saturday they snuck by Boston University 27-19. With two excellent receivers in Frank Cicciutini and Henry Walker, Fullback Brent Kuttin is their leading ground gainer, and Tom Fay and Larry Cornell show the quarter-backing duties. Last year the Black Bears beat the Rams 24 to 6.

The fresh football team ended its season last Friday in the upswing, defeating the Bowdoin Senior 24-6. Let's hope that this is an indication of things to come.
