NEW MAINE HISTORY
—from Maine!

Aroostook: A Century of Logging in Northern Maine
Richard W. Judd

Aroostook County, Maine, on New England's northern rim, has always had a character of its own. A frontier long after the rest of the eastern seaboard was settled, Aroostook subsequently evolved a unique international character as a result of active trade with its downriver neighbor, New Brunswick.

Richard Judd's new book explores the development of Aroostook in the years 1831-1931, tracing the lumbering industry from its beginnings through its peak expansion and up to the devastation of the Depression years. As Judd's concluding chapter shows, if modern Aroostook bears only slight resemblance to its pioneering days, the people of Aroostook County can still draw on a legacy of frontier community spirit and independent initiative in meeting new challenges.

351 pages, 32 illustrations $27.50 hardcover
$17.95 paperback

Bangor, Maine, 1769-1914: An Architectural History
Deborah Thompson

A "comprehensive history of Bangor's rich architectural heritage from 1769 to the First World War. Closely tying the lavishness of local architecture with the city's economic boom, the book works to tell the history of this one-time lumber capital during its heyday."—Down East Magazine

"Deborah Thompson's long-awaited book stands virtually alone as a comprehensive reference to the architecture of a Maine city. No one has dissected a community's building history in as much detail as Dr. Thompson. . . . Invaluable to scholars throughout the country.”—Maine Preservation News
