Maine Campus Staff
The Student Health Service will move to the large-windowed, one-story, brick building now under construction between the main and Benton Halls early in June. The new infirmary will house 32 patients compared to 25 in the old building. Six rooms which will not be completed until the university population reaches 10,000 will increase the capacity to 44. If the need arises, a second floor can be added to the present structure to double the capacity.

More efficient laboratory facilities and increased office space will be two major improvements in the new building. A physiology department and a pharmacy department have been built but will not be equipped because the budget does not provide for men to staff them. A large kitchen and dining area are also included in the new building. Dr. Graves said that 80 percent of the patients are well enough to get out of bed to eat, and this cafeteria system will save much time for the nurses. There will be a check-up for each patient who is allowed to be used by patients during visiting hours if they do not wish to have guests in their room. It will also be used by the patients for their own relaxation.

The members of the medical staff next year will include Drs. Robert Graves, Russell Lute, Harry Weing, and Dean Hackter. Dr. Heath has been on a two-year leave of absence in Nigeria, working on a smallpox and measles immunization program.

Charles Grant will remain as the staff psychologist. Dr. Graves said that he hopes the Health Service will be able to get a second psychologist to complete the staff.

Dr. Graves said he started talking about a new infirmary in 1963, but the item was not included in the legislative agenda until 1965. The estimated cost of the building is $650,000.

Dr. Hackter will be located at the Dow Air Force base branch of the Student Health Service at least half a day every day next year and part time thereafter. The emergency care problem on the Dow Campus is foreseen by Dr. Graves since it is only nine miles from the Orono infirmary.

Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis announced 14 of the 15 member board of trustees to be the governing and planning board for the new multi-university of Maine. Thursday, April 4.

The new board is comprised of leading education, government, and business personnel. Newly selected trustees will assume their official responsibilities on May 26, 1968. First items of business will be selecting a chancellor, to head the entire university system, and the fifth member of the board, planning a budget to be presented to the 1968 legislature, and effectively merging the university and state colleges into a single unit.

Seven members were selected from the University of Maine Board of Trustees, three from the State Board of Education, and four from the public at large. Each member must serve no less than one or more than seven years on the board.

The seven members selected from the U. of M. board of trustees are: Arthur H. Belote, Miss Lucie Cormier, Dr. Lawrence M. Cutler, Ralph H. Cutting, Robert N. Haskell, Mrs. Helen W. Pierce, and W. Gordon Robertson.

Members of the State Board of Education who will serve on the new board are: Miss Priscilla Brown, Charles F. Bragg II, and Mrs. Jean Sampson.

Members selected from the public at large are: Dr. Nib Wessel, Hayden L. Anderson, James H. Goodhue, George W. Wernich, and Dr. James Clark, assistant to President Young, said the university will provide the services of such notable academic figures as Dr. Wessel and Prof. Brown. Clark emphasized the large universities' need for strong scholarship.

The place — Boston Common. The cause — draft resistance. Waving signs, resisters marched to a corner of the Common to hear the words of an impressive group of speakers. Reactions varied. Some marched with determination, some not mounted in disgust, some protested the protesters. Noam Chomsky and Terry Cannon were among those who spoke. (Story on page two)
Draft resisters stage protest on Common

by David Bright

The Boston Common was busy as usual on Wednesday morning, April 3rd, with business as usual across the towns, merrily Beacon Hill ladies walking their poodles, and pigeons always underfoot. But one end of the Common buzzed with an excess of activity. By ten-thirty the side of the hill below the place where old tanks used to stand in memory of World War I was covered with people, TV men heretofore set up cameras on high platforms.

Two large speakers arrived to join the crowd, waving signs and ex-orted by police. Someone got hold of a microphone, harassed the or-ganizers for their American ways, and started singing “God Bless America” until he was interrupted by one of the protest leaders who sang the “Star Spangled Banner.” Everyone rose to their feet for the song and when it was over they were asked to sit down and the whole thing began.

The draft became the main topic of the day when Harvard teaching fellow Cohen spoke to the effect that an end to the war is not enough. Before America can be called a democratic society, the draft with its channeling and forcing young men into jail and exile would have to end. “The draft,” Cohen after he helped plan the six day demonstration at the Oakland Ind-uction Center, told not only of the war in Vietnam but of siege wars which he said our country is running. He talked of South American employees of United Fruit who got paid 1c an hour, and of grape pickers in California who get 32c an hour. He said there is also that white middle class America should be ashamed of but that often it is hard to put a finger on the exact cause. As Cohen saw it, the job of the educated person in the U.S. today is one of “administering the ratmack of the world.”

MIT professor Noam Chomsky spoke about the Vietnam war and what it is doing. He ended by quoting Einstein who once said he bad no idea what weapons would be used in WW III, but he was sure WW IV would be fought with clubs and stones.

The list of speakers was impres-sive, their words short and to the point. Professor Stoughton Lynd ad-vised people to go beyond simply being a college radical and to dedi-cate their lives to the philosophy of “not with my life you don’t.”

Harvard history professor Everett Mendelsohn, who talked has the Tet offensive from a bunker in Sai-gon, related the winter of discontent throughout the country and talked of the escalation of the war and the neglect of poverty.

People gathered on Boston Common last Wednesday to participate in the anti-draft demonstration. Prominent speakers discussed the Selective Service System, America’s role in world politics, and the philosophy of “just with my life you don’t.” Although anti-protester protesters appeared, the two factions were content to assault each other with renditions of “God Bless America” and the “Star-Spangled Banner.”

Big. This year even bigger. Some Chevrolet Tri-Lev-els are longer. Some wider. Some with move cargo room. Size up Impala. Nothing in its field comes as big. For instance, in many others you wouldn’t dare try laying a 4 x 8-foot mirror flat in the main cargo level. (Especially if you’re superstitious.) In Impala, no problem. The hidden storage compart-ment on the lower level also takes more of your gear than any of them. The roof rack you order should take care of the rest. For your comfort, there’s extra hip and shoulder room.

We make our Tri-Lev-els lots more attractive in other ways, too. With such exclusives in Chevrolet’s field as an ignition warning system. You’ll get a buzz out of it if you ever leave your key in the ignition. There are rocker panels that clean themselves with every shower you go through. Inner fenders that protect the outer ones from rust. And hidden windshield wipers on many models. Even with all these advan-tages, Impala and Chevelle Concours are the less priced luxury wagons in their fields. And if that’s what you like to hear, hear this. Senate postpones course evaluation

The course evaluation program will be postponed until the week of April 29 through May 4. A lack of student volunteers to distribute questionnaires to classrooms necessitated the date change. Questionnaires will not be distributed to students before a class period to be filled out during their free time, as was planned by the Course Evaluation Committee originally. "If a teacher does not allow class time for questionnaires to be filled out, that course will not be evaluated," according to Bob Fen-derson, committee chairman.

The committee plans to recruit more student workers during the three week postponement.

The results of the course evaluation program will be published in a booklet and sold for 25 cents a copy early next fall before the November pre-registration period for spring semester.

Candidates nominated

Tuesday evening at the general Student Senate meeting, two more people may be nominated for each office. Anyone interested in running for a position and who is not a member of the Senate must submit a petition, containing signatures equaling ten per cent of the votes cast in the last election. Election of new officers will be held April 24.

Debaters go south

Four University of Maine debaters will be at Morris Harvey College, Charleston, W. Va., Wednesday, April 11, 1968, to participate in an invitational for all members of the Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic society.

Two U.M. teams will debate both sides of the topic in six rounds of debate. Representing Maine are the teams of Larry Cole, Calais, and Joseph Pietrskki, Rockland, and Mary Kus meltdown, Ellsworth, and John Staples, Rockland.

In addition to debate the U.M. students will participate in several other events, including original oratory, extemporaneous speaking. Pietrski and Cole, and after dinner speaking. Cole. Dr. Wofford G. Gardner, head of the speech department, will accompany the group and will serve as chairman in charge of the extemporaneous speaking event.

Provincial meetings are held every year, and in the alternate year national meetings are held. At last year's national meeting the new Province of the Northeast, which includes Maine, was formed from some of the membership of the Province of the Lakes. In addition to Maine other members of the new province are the University of Southern Connecticut; Townsends State College, Baltimore, Md.; State University of New York at Geneseo; Ithaca College, N. Y.; Norwich University, Northfield, Vt.; and the following Pennsylvania institutions, Bloomsburg State College, California State College, Clarion State College, East Stroudsburg State College, Geneva College, and Grove City College.

Old Bomb.

It's true this sleek new Honda Scrambler 125 would cost you the same money as the old used bomb, but the low price isn't the whole Honda story. Far from it.

When you ride any of Honda's 23 models, you can forget high insurance, upkeep, and maintenance costs. Forget parking problems too.

And look at the Scrambler 125 styling: new candy colors, chrome fenders, trim new forks, upswept pipes. And performance: the 125's dependable 4-stroke parallel twin OHCl engine delivers an impressive 13 hp at 10,000 rpm; up to 153 mpg.

political species

The following appeared in a national magazine about three years ago. Since then it has made the rounds in the campus Political Science Department. For those of us who have not heard it and wish to be able to distinguish Republicans from Democrats, here are some hints which should result in positive identification.

Democrats buy most of the books that have been banned somewhere. Republicans form censorship committees and read them as a group.

Democrats post all the signs saying NO TRESPASSING and THESE DEER ARE PRIVATE PROPERTY and so on. Republicans bring picnic baskets and start their bonfires with the signs.

Democrats name their children after currently popular sports figures, politicians and entertainers. Republican children are named after their parents or grandparents, according to where the most money is.

Republicans tend to keep their shades drawn, although there is seldom any reason why they should. Democrats ought to but don't.

Democrats watch TV crime and Western shows that make them clench their fists and become red in the face. Republicans get the same effect from presidential press conferences.

Democrats study the financial pages of the newspaper. Republicans tend to keep their shades drawn, although there is seldom any reason why they should. Democrats ought to but don't.

Democrats eat the fish they catch. Republicans hang them on the wall.

Democrats have governesses for their children. Republicans have household help.

Democrats purchase all the tools—the power saws and mowers. Republicans select cards containing a spray of holly or a single candle.

Democrats have guest rooms. Republicans have spare rooms filled with old baby furniture.

Republicans have guest rooms. Democrats have spare rooms filled with old baby furniture.

Democrats raise Dahlias. Dalmatians and eyebrows. Republicans raise Airdales, kids and taxes.

Democrats make up plans and then do something else. Republicans follow the plans their grandfathers made.

Democrats have guest rooms. Republicans have spare rooms filled with old baby furniture.

Republicans raise Airdales. Dalmatians and eyebrows. Democrats raise Airdales, kids and taxes.

Democrats purchase all the tools—the power saws and mowers. A Republican probably wouldn't know how to use a screwdriver.

Democrats build their houses somewhere. Republicans form censorship committees and read them as a group.

To the Editor:

I am writing in the hopes of introducing you to the many facets of black history.

To me the dressing of a black man is as significant as that of a white man. It is a part of his cultural heritage. It is a way of life, a way of expressing his personality and his individuality. It is a way of saying, 'I am not like you.'

The chess game has reached a crisis. Black's King has fallen. As in any game, the prominent piece is always in jeopardy. The other men tried to protect the King, to anticipate the opposition's next move. But, they didn't reckon on the White pawn in the corner.

Democratic girls date Republican boys but feel they're entitled to a little fun first. Republican boys date Democratic girls. They plan to marry with the pieces fall where they may. Maybe White will force the move; maybe it already has.

Black advances in a haphazard manner. Now, it's your move.

Ah, Spring! The warm sun, budding leaves, green grass. An infectious time, when the languor of the season slips unnoticed into one's system. A coup of the spirit—initiative ousted by indolence. Now, to just lie back and take it easy. . .

Not now. There's one more thing: the Student Disciplinary Code.

The Student-Faculty Committee will meet on April 15. By that time, the Disciplinary Code should have achieved final approval by the Student Senate. The Student-Faculty Council must approve the Code at that time. Because, on April 17, the Board of Trustees, who also must accept the Code, will meet for the last time.

After that date, the new Board of Trustees, created by the Megaversity Bill, will be involved in more mundane matters. It could conceivably be years before the new Board gets around to discussing the Disciplinary Code.

Before the Council and Trustees get too wound up over verbiage, style, and punctuation, they should remember the old adage: 'Half a Code is better than none.'

Unfortunately, the Campus staff is neither omnipresent nor omniscient—but we're working on it. Until that time, we welcome contributions from anyone. Got an interesting picture? News story? Feature? If so, bring it to the Campus office in Lord Hall.

money: the story of an engineer

We all know, of course, that in this age of technology every engineering senior is receiving fabulous offers of employment, but do we realize just how fabulous these offers are? Do we comprehend just how keenly industry is competing? To illustrate, let me cite the true and typical case of E. Pluribus Ewbank, a true and typical senior. One day last week while strolling across the M.I.T. campus, E. Pluribus was hailed by a portly and prosperous man who sat in a yellow convertible studied with precious gem stones. "Hello," said the portly and prosperous man, "I am Portly Prosperous, president of American Xerographic Data Processing and Birth Control. Incorporated. Are you a senior?"

"Yes, sir," said E. Pluribus.

"Do you like this car?" said Portly.

"It's yours," said Portly.

"Thanks, hey," said E. Pluribus.

"Do you like Personna Stainless Steel Blades?"

"What clean living, clean shaven American does not?"

"E. Pluribus.

"Here's a pack," said Portly. "And a new pack will be delivered to you every twelve minutes as long as you live."

"Thanks, hey," said E. Pluribus.

"Would your wife like a mink coat?" said Portly.

"I feel sure she would," said E. Pluribus, "but I am not married."

"Do they want to be?" said Portly.

"What clean living, clean shaven American does not?"

"Yes, E. Pluribus.

Portly pressed a button on the dashboard of the convertible and the truck opened up and out came a nubile maiden with golden hair, rayy, a perfect disposit-

"Congratulations," said Portly. "And for the happy bride, a set of 300 monogrammed prawn forks."

"Thanks, hey," said Svetlana.

"Of course you do," said Portly. "And if you'd like the job, my offer still stands."

"Well, it certainly seems like a fair offer," said E. Pluribus. "But there is something you should know. I am not an engineer. I just walked over here to admire the trees. I am at Harvard, majoring in Joyce Kilmer."

"Oh," said Portly.

"Now then," said Portly to E. Pluribus, "let us get down to business. My company will start you at $75,000 a year. You must retire at full salary upon reaching the age of 26. A student magazine

Labyrinth is closer

A new 52-page student news and opinion magazine, the Labyrinth, will be published May 1 by a group of journalism students at the Orono campus of the University of Maine. The magazine, which will contain in-depth articles on matters concerning the student and his university and the surrounding communities, will go to press Friday, April 12. Editor of the new publication is Terry McCann, a senior journalism major from Westboro, Mass.

The Labyrinth will contain a color photographic art section of student works, and articles written entirely by students on student power, the Super University, off-campus housing, drinking on campus, the class system, concert crowds and an article on the Orono campus' chief of security, Stephen Gould.

The student editors hope the magazine will be entirely self-supporting from advertising revenue and sales. Some 200 parents of students have already subscribed to the magazine which will be mailed to them for 75 cents, according to McCann. Students hope the circulation might reach 4500 copies. The magazine's staff includes nine students, most of whom are journalism majors.

Whether or not the publication will be attempted next year will depend on the acceptance of the May 1 issue, according to staff members.

Subscription or advertising inquiries may be addressed to the Prism Office, Lord Hall, University of Maine, Orono.

Agnes Moorehead to perform

Agnes Moorehead, who has just added the role of Endora in television's "Bewitched" to her already illustrious career in legitimate stage, motion pictures and radio, will appear in the University of Maine's Hauck Auditorium Sunday, April 14, at 8 p.m.

Miss Moorehead, who has received five Academy Award nominations, will present dramatic monologues, readings, and will discuss acting, its techniques, the great performers, and the history of the theatre in general. The program is open to the public without charge as a presentation of the Spring Arts and Activities Committee.

Miss Moorehead grew up in St. Louis, where she worked with the St. Louis Municipal Opera Company while going to school. She was graduated from Muskingum College and received a master's degree in English and public speaking at the University of Wisconsin.

After replenishing her savings she went to New York City for further training and was graduated with honors from the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. Her first New York stage appearances were in "Marco's Millions," "Scarlet Pages," and "All the King's Men."

One of radio's most active performers, she was heard on thousands of programs, including March of Time where she was the voice of some 40 people. Miss Moorehead's first performance of "Sorry, Wrong Number" was on Suspense in 1943, and after repeating the drama over 20 times on radio, she recorded the play on an album.

With Joseph Cotten and Orion Wells, she was a founder and charter member of the famed Mercury Theater Players. She made her screen debut in "Citizen Kane" in 1941, followed by "The Magnificent Ambersons" which brought her the New York Critics Award for Best Actress of the Year and her first Academy Award nomination. Her other Oscar nominations were for "Johnny Belinda," "Mrs. Parkington," "All That Heaven Allows," and "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte."

Her television credits include many guest roles and an Emmy Award in 1967 for her role of Endora in Bewitched.

In the theatre Miss Moorehead has toured the country in "The Fabulous Redhead," a one-woman show presented in legitimate and college theatres. She has also appeared in a concert recital of George Bernard Shaw's "Don Juan In Hell" in the U.S. and Europe with Charles Boyer, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Charles Laughton.

Her spare time is devoted to instructing young talent in drama. She and director Richard Whorf recently established a theatre and film institution school in Los Angeles.

Lecture

Professor H. E. Farnsworth of the Brown University Physics Department will speak on "Solving Surface Problems With Low Energy Electron Diffraction" Friday, April 19, at 4:10 P.M. in 140 Bennett Hall.

Youthful Daniel Domb
Cellist to perform at Maine

by Tracy Bronson

Daniel Domb, not much older than the average university student, has established a solid reputation in the music world. Winner of the most promising young cellists in the world. Winner of the 1963 Town Hall Debut at 19, The New York Times said, "It is not often that one hears the sort of virtuoso cello playing that filled Town Hall last night." The Christian Science Monitor calls him, "One of the most promising young cellists in the world."
The University Orchestra has a more student members this year than in the last few seasons. A "town and gown" orchestra, the group also includes adult instrumentalists from the faculty, Orono, and Portland Symphony Orchestra. The concert with Mr. Domb will not be a long one and the music it is to be selected to appeal to students who don't always enjoy heavy orchestral works. The Little Symphony) by George McKay, a work that expresses the cheerfulness and determination of the American Pioneers. Frescobaldi's "Toccata," "Oriental March" and "Neger-Tanz" from "Aladdin" will be getting from the orchestra. Administration is free to students showing I.D's. Tickets may be picked up in the Lord Hall music office during the week before the concert.

Peace Corps recruiting shows sharp increase

(CPS) The Peace Corps, which was having trouble with its recruiting program on college campuses last fall, has reported a sharp increase in the number of applications received during the first three months of 1968.

Peace Corps officials say more than ten thousand applications were received from January through March this year, compared to about eight thousand during the same period in 1967. The best month was February, when the Corps received over four thousand applications, compared to two thousand in February of 1967, for a 77 per cent increase. Agency director Jack Vaughan said most applications, as before, are coming from the nation's college campuses. Recruiting figures for the Peace Corps showed a sharp reduction last fall, and there was widespread speculation that the Corps was losing its appeal to college students. In November, the Corps showed a 30 per cent decline in November "was inaccurately interpreted as a longrange trend, but represented only the month of November as compared with a year earlier.

November, 1966, was the largest month for applications in Peace Corps history. Vaughan explains the Corps held a major recruiting drive in the fall of 1966, but did not in the fall of 1967. The recent increase in applications will more than meet current plans to put 8,000 persons into training during the current program year which ends August 31. Corps officials said the trainee total was determined by a Congressional appropriation of $107.5 million for the current fiscal year.

If you don't agree that business destroys individuality, maybe it's because you're an individual.

There's certain campus talk that claims individuality is dead in the business world. That big business is a big brother destroying initiative.

But freedom of thought and action, when backed with reason and conviction's courage, will keep and nurture individuality whatever the scene: in the arts, the sciences, and in business.

Scoffers to the contrary, the red corpuscles of individuality pay off. No mistake. Encouraging individuality rather than suppressing it is policy in a business like Western Electric—where we make and provide things Bell telephone companies need. Because communications are changing fast, these needs are great and diverse.

Being involved with a system that helps keep people in touch, lets doctors send cardiograms across the country for quick analysis, helps transmit news instantly, is demanding. Demanding of individuals.

If your ambition is strong and your abilities commensurate, you'll never be truly happy with the status quo. You'll seek ways to change it and—wonderful feeling!—some of them will work.

The University of Maine basketball team in the 1967-68 season was the second highest scoring club among University Division schools in New England, yet was seventh of 24 contests. This was revealed in a compilation of statistics on 15 New England colleges and universities rated in the University Division in basketball.

The statistics show that although Maine finished second to Boston College in offense with 79.3 points per game, the Black Bears were 16th in defense, allowing 84.8 points per game. In a comparison of freshman teams, the University of Maine Fresh posted the second best record in New England with a 13 and two percentage. Dennis Stanley of Mexico, U-M's 6-6 freshman, ranked 10th among freshmen scorers in New England with a 17.5 points per game average.

Two Buck varsity hoopers ranked high in several categories among the University Division schools in the region. Jim Stephenson, Maine captain, and an All-Maine selection, was the second highest scorer in New England with 533 points. Top scorer was Jim Hayes of Boston University with 565. Stephenson also finished sixth in free throw percentage with a .769 mark. Keith Hochstein of College Fresh was first with a .807 percentage.

Hugh Campbell, U-M center, ranked eighth in New England in rebounds with an average of 11 rebounds per contest. Art Stephenson of Rhode Island led the way in rebounds, averaging 16.2 per game.

Campbell finished sixth in field goal percentage with a .484 mark. The leader in this category was Jim Haynes with a .572 mark.

Schools listed in the University Division were Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Yale, Harvard, Brown, Dartmouth, Boston College, Boston University, Holy Cross, Fairfield and Providence.

Good Friday

There will be an inter-faith "Sala-ions of the Cross" held at the Cat-tory Chapel on Good Friday, April 12, at 4:15 p.m. The service represents the joint efforts of all the Christian faith groups on campus to reach a better understanding with one another and to plan a service interesting and open to all. Its scope is modern and its experimental nature dealing with contemporary themes promises to be rewarding as well as penetrating.
Students play games Intramural program active

by Russ Potter

Although the intercollegiate sports program gets more publicity, the intramural athletic program of Maine actively serves a far larger segment of the student body. Nearly 85% of Maine's male students—the highest percentage in the East—participate in one of the many events in the intramural program.

Intramural sports at Maine are designed to promote athletics while encouraging physical fitness and in-suring sound health for the general student body. The university sponsors wide-ranging programs for both men and women.

Women students have an opportunity to participate in a varied recreational program, designed to offer something of interest to each coed. Competition is offered in such team sports as basketball, field hockey, volleyball, and lacrosse. Women more inclined to individual play may engage in tennis, roller skating, table tennis, badminton, archery, skating, and skiing. Additionally, fencing, modern dance, and square dance events can be arranged for interested students. The women's program is centered in Loring Hall.

Memorial Gymnasium, center for intramural athletics, also houses the headquarters for the men's intramural athletic program. The program, regulated by the Intramural Athletic Association, recognizes three divisions: the fraternity league, the dormitory league, and the independent league, representing off-campus and graduate students as well as faculty members. Students compete in basketball, basketball free throws, volleyball, indoor and outdoor softball, touch football, track, wrestling, handball, paddleball, tennis doubles and bowling. Generally, the Memorial Gymnasium facilities are available for all open play evenings and on weekends.

As new interests develop, and when facilities can be made available, new sports are added to the intramural program, so that "athletics for all" may become a reality at Maine.

SPOTS Go-Round

Gerald and Harold Thibodeau. when an engine trough sky high in a stock-car race, usually in 1/100 of a second, spectators often wonder what happened and why. A lot of the failures in stock cars on the track are due to a rearend spill, or a blowout. But if you're in a wall or another car, or a sudden spin in oil dropped on the track by a competitor damages his car—or costs him so much time that it's unacceptable, team owners will do whatever they can to anticipate their own breakdown.

THE "Spotlight" features Dave Bemis, the chairman of Maine's record-breaking, Yankee Conference champion relay team.

A graduate of Dexter HS, Dave spent two years at the University of Maine in Portland during which he did not participate in track.

This year, as a first semester junior majoring in Agricultural Business and Economics, Dave worked hard to overcome the effects of his lay-off and became one of the best middle distance runners on the Bear's indoor squad.

"This spring we look forward to Dave giving Maine outstanding performance in the quarter mile, half mile, and relay," Assistant Track Coach Jim Ballenger says of the lean Portland native.
