Parents and students to arrive June 20 for frosh orientation

Beginning Monday, June 20, the first of twelve groups of students and their parents will arrive on campus for freshman orientation. The program is designed to give the 1539 incoming freshman and 2677 visiting parents and guests a glimpse of campus life, both academic and extracurricular, prior to the students arrival on campus this fall.

The first day of orientation students will register at West Commons in the morning, have lunch at West Commons with their parents and guests, and then at 1:15 p.m. at Hauck Auditorium attend an Introductory Session where they will be welcomed either by the acting president of the university, or Dr. James Clark, assistant to the president.

From 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. students will have individual meetings with their advisors, the athletic department, ROTC department, and take tours of the library and campus. Buses for the campus tours will leave Hancock Hall approximately every 30 minutes between 3:15 p.m. and 5:15 p.m.

After dinner at West Commons the freshman women and their parents will meet with Dean of Women Mary S. Zink and male freshman will meet with the student assistants. Following these meetings there will be a mixer for all students at Corbett Hall. While students are attending the mixer the parents will be given a tour of the educational television studio and hear an address by Alumni Executive Director, Dr. T. Russell Woolley, "University of Maine—Past, Present, and Future."

At 8:30 a.m. of the second morning freshmen will attend a program "Student Life and Student Activities at the University of Maine" presented by the student assistants. Following the activities program male students and their parents will meet with Dean John E. Stewart, Dean of Men, and freshman women and their parents will discuss "Activities and Programs for Women," presented by the orientation staff.

Following lunch at West Commons on the second afternoon of orientation, students and their parents will be given an opportunity to observe the facilities at the university's Dow AFB South Campus.

During the two-day orientation periods female students will be lodged at Hart Hall, male freshmen at Corbett Hall, and the visiting parents and guests at Hancock Hall.

Assistant Dean of Men Linwood L. Carville, Director of the Orientation Program, will be assisted by Chief Student Assistant Philip Cheney and student assistants: Frederick Whittaker, Wilfred Butterfield, Robert Scribner, Eveleen Seavern, Charlotte Dupont, Pamela Livesay, and Joan McIntosh.

Committee to help select president

A new president for the University of Maine in Orono and a chancellor for the Multiversity system must be chosen this summer. But how is a president or chancellor chosen? In this case the Multiversity Trustees have asked professors, students and administrators to assist with the choices. There is agreement among all the groups on qualifications of a prospective chancellor; and information regarding requirements are being sent to college presidents and foundations.

A Student-Faculty committee chosen last month by the Faculty Council is working with a group of administrators to select a new president for the Orono, Portland and Augusta campuses. Faculty on the committee are: Carleton M. Brown, L. Morrill Burke, George R. Cooper, John D. Coupe, George A. Prescott, John A. Spanogle, Jr., Benjamin R. Speicher and Samuel H. Talley.

Students on the committee are: Stephen T. Hughes, President of the Student Senate; Marcia L. Due, Editor of the Maine Campus; and James M. Turner, Ex-President of the Student Senate; Gary W. Libby represents the Portland Campus; and Robert J. L'Heureux represents Augusta.

Administration members are James M. Clark, W. Stanley Devino, Franklin P. Eggert, David R. Fink, Jr., Edward S. Godfrey, Richard C. Hill, John J. Nolde, Bruce R. Poulton, and Mark R. Shibles.

Two committees have been formed to assist the Trustees in their selection of a chancellor. Presidents and chief administrators from the eight campuses comprising the Multiversity met Monday to decide on qualifications needed by the chancellor. At the meeting were President Kenneth T. H. Brooks and Dean Robert York of Gorham; President Melvin G. Scarlett and Dean Harland C. Abbott of Farmington; President Lincoln A. Sennett and Business Manager Richard Mawhinney of Washington State; President Joseph M. Fox and Nathaniel Crowley of Ft. Kent; President Clifford O. T. Wieden and Albert W. Purvis of Aroostook; and President Edwin Young and Merton E. Libby of Orono.

Lord Caradon keynote Commencement speaker

"There is a new dimension in the dangers of the world, dangers arising from poverty, population and race—all part of one problem," said Lord Caradon, Permanent United Kingdom Representative to the United Nations, at the 133rd Commencement of the University of Maine here Friday.

"There is the danger that the gulf will grow with the poor and discontented and overcrowded, the colored people of the young nations, on one side, and the affluent, complacent, comfortable, the white people of the older nations, on the other," the British diplomat added.

"There is a further danger that we of the affluent nations will be so much obsessed with our own selfish concerns and our own comforts that we shall fail to see the danger in time, and so forfeit the respect and the leadership of the world," Lord Caradon told the 1123 candidates for degrees and their guests at the Orono campus ceremonies.

Among the 1123 candidates for degrees were 17 husband and wife combinations, three brother and sister combinations and two sisters.

Honorary Doctor of Laws Degrees were presented to Lord Caradon; Donald P. Corbett of Clayton, Mo., corporate vice president and director of Ralston Purina Company; Sumner Pike of Lubec, a member of the Maine House of Representatives and former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission; and Paul W. Gates, a graduate of Colby College and now a professor of history at Cornell University.

An honorary Doctor of Science Degree was presented to Frederic A. Soderberg, a graduate of Bangor High School and the University of Maine and for 40 years a top executive in the pulp and paper and allied industries.

Lord Caradon, in speaking of the international dangers of today, told the audience that "present dangers are far too great to be dealt with by the action of one nation alone, however rich and powerful. They are dangers which challenge the world and cry out for international action."

Lord Caradon, in elaborating on the issues of poverty, population and race, told graduates that, "Of these great issues we need not only new understanding but new motive. It is my hope and belief that on these issues we can confidently look for new initiative to the new generation."

"The new generation furiously looks for a cause. I believe that this is the cause which will enlist their energy and their idealism. The hope of the world is that they will recognize the dangers in time, and decide to deal with them not in a spirit of racial supremacy or narrow nationalism but by the new instruments of international action. Those instruments may be put to use just in time," Lord Caradon concluded.

The citation accompanying the honorary Doctor of Laws Degree for Lord Caradon noted his long and highly significant services in presiding at and aiding in the emergence of many new nations in Africa and elsewhere and "in appreciation of your diplomacy and inexhaustible patience in illuminating the issues in the U.N. debates."

Corbett, a native of East Parsonfield, was cited in recognition of his success in a fast-growing industry and "to honor you for devoted service to community, state and nation as well as this university."

Pike, a graduate of Hebron Academy and Bowdoin College, was cited in recognition of his useful and fruitful career in public service and "in special appreciation of the example of progressive thinking and youthful enthusiasm and energy which you have set for young graduates in your native state."

Dr. Gates, who has taught at UCLA and Harvard as well as Cornell and who specializes in agricultural history of the United States, was cited in recognition of his many original contributions to the understanding of land development and use in the United States in the past, and the value of such work as warning and as guidance for the future.

Dr. Talley has been presented a check for $1,500, made possible through the generosity of Nicolas Salgo, president of a New York investment banking firm, a Washington (D. C.) real estate development company, and chairman of the board of Bangor Punta Corporation.

The recipient of the award was determined by the vote of the eight highest ranking junior and senior majors in either business or economics in the College of Business Administration and the highest ranking junior and senior majors in economics in the College of Arts and Sciences. the College of Business Administration were the faculty representatives.

Fogler Library policy announced for summer

Within the past year, several changes have been instituted in the structure—both physical and administrative—of the Fogler Library. Should confusion arise during the summer session, the following statement of library policy may help illuminate current booklending machinations:

checking out books

No books may be checked out unless a student identification card is presented by the borrower. Books are chosen in the stacks by library patrons. If one needs help in the stacks, help may be requested from a staff member or an attendant at the Circulation Desk. The book is then taken to the Charging Desk in the lower lobby where it is presented with identification to the attendant. The book is then charged by machine and the identification is returned to the borrower. The guard at the exit is expected to examine all books and magazines the borrower may be carrying or have in his brief case. The patron's prompt cooperation will be helpful in keeping people moving quickly through the exit.

Most books in regular circulation may be borrowed for a period of four weeks. When the book is one week overdue the borrower will be sent a notice. If he does not respond to this notice after one week, he will be sent a bill for the price of the book plus a two dollar minimum fine. If the book is returned within thirty days after the date of the bill, the borrower will pay only the fine and the bill will be cancelled. After thirty days, the bill will be sent to the Treasurer's Office and no refunds will be approved by the Librarian. If the book is returned, the Librarian will recommend to the Treasurer that one-half the bill be cancelled. If a book is lost, the loss should be reported to the Circulation Division at once so that special arrangements for its replacement can be made.

curriculum materials

The Curriculum Materials Center of the library is a division of the Department of Reference Services, and is an increasingly important facility for the main library. The large body of material is maintained, for the most part, in vertical file arrangement under subject headings derived from those used in the Education Index.

Information relating to all phases of professional education is located here. In addition to the vertical file of general information, a file of educational tests is maintained for use by faculty and students engaged in the study of testing, measurement, and evaluation. A third part of this division is a file of vocational information arranged by occupational titles. This file is of importance not only to students in professional education, but to all students and faculty members interested in vocational information. A very complete collection of college catalogs is maintained as part of this vocational information file.

film room

The library has large holdings in microfilm, microcards, and other microforms. These are located in the Film Room, in the west wing of the third floor. Access to film is through the card catalog, periodical indexes, and newspaper indexes. The New York Times Index and the Wall Street Journal Index are located in the Film Room. There is an attendant in the room at all times to assist in the location of films and the use of readers.

Are you willing to go as low as $1776* for a new VW?

We don't sell status. Just a car. One that gets up to 27 mpg, hardly uses oil between changes, and goes a long way on a set of tires.

Of course, the fact that it's practical is no secret. And everybody is going to know that you're saving money. But that's the price you pay for a Volkswagen.

U of M selected for study of air pollution

The University of Maine has been selected to study the location and magnitude of air pollution in the State of Maine through a $38,108 grant funded by the Maine Air and Water Environmental Improvement Commission, it was announced Tuesday by U-M President Dr. Edwin Young.

The State University, through its chemistry and civil engineering departments, will study the factors contributing to the problem of air pollution in Maine and will determine goals for corrective action which will include suggested legislation for the Maine Legislature in January 1969.

The first phase of the project will be completed by December 1, 1968, when a report will be filed with the Air and Water Environmental Improvement Commission. The principal investigators for the project are Prof. Irwin Douglass of the U-M's department of chemistry and Prof. Otis Sproul of the department of civil engineering. Project director is Dr. Franklin Woodard of the department of civil engineering.

The first phase of the study actually started this week with sampling of air in the Bangor-Brewer-Old Town area.

Other areas where sampling for contaminants will take place this summer include, among other communities, the Portland area, Lewiston-Auburn, Waterville-Fairfield, Presque Isle, Caribou, Rockland, Biddeford-Saco, Sanford, Brunswick and Augusta-Gardiner.

Speaking about the study, Prof. Sproul noted that it has been established that certain areas of Maine have a severe air pollution problem.

The first phase of the study will include actual monitoring of air quality and the collection of data on meteorological elements such as wind velocity, direction and temperature.

Collecting much of the data in the field will be five student assistants from the graduate and undergraduate programs in sanitary engineering at the university. They are Arthur Crouse of Orono, Peter Drotar of Livermore Falls, Thomas Mills of Bangor, James Weaver of Orono and Paulo Silva of Belem Para, Brazil.

Field data will be collected at the chosen sites at two different intervals, each of which will be for three-day periods. Air will be pumped electrically into tubes filled with chemicals which will allow the separation of the various elements found in the air such as carbon monoxide, hydrogen sulphide, sulphur dioxide, methyl mercaptan, nitrous oxide and nitrogen dioxide.

Data will also be collected on odor and on suspended matter. Odor measurement will be made with the human nose, according to Prof. Sproul, while suspended matter will be collected on filter paper and measured for weight.

The second part of the study will see members of the project staff contacting municipal, industrial and state officials to gather basic data on the magnitude and scope of the air pollution problem in Maine.

According to Prof. Sproul some on-site determinations of studies will be made while others will come from analysis of collections in the university's laboratories. The grant includes both federal and state funds.

Other U-M faculty members involved in the study are Dr. Wayne Hall, assistant professor of civil engineering; Dr. Orlando Delogu, associate professor of law at the university's law school; and Prof. Frank Todd, associate professor of physics.
