Prof. Hartgen holds annual art exhibit

Fifty aquarelle paintings by Prof. Vincent Hartgen will be on exhibit August 2 at his annual Studio-Terrace Exhibit. This outdoor art exhibition has become a tradition in the University of Maine Summer Arts Festival, attracting several thousand students, faculty, staff, artists, critics and collectors.

All the paintings for this 3 to 5 p.m. exhibition are executed in aquarelle watercolor on hand-made rag paper. Most of them have never been shown publicly before, but they will soon travel into national shows and exhibitions this fall. A few "repeats" from last year's exhibition are included.

Prof. Hartgen, who holds the John H. Huddilston Professorship Chair at the university, is Head of the Department of Art and Director of the University Art Gallery. Several years ago he was chosen a Distinguished Professor by the students, last fall he was awarded the Governor's State of Maine Art Award for his service throughout the state in his management of the university's traveling art exhibition.

tions. He has also served on the State of Maine Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania School of Fine Arts, Prof. Hartgen served with the Camouflage Corps during World War II, prior to his appointment to the "Maine" faculty in 1946. In that same year he had his first New York one-man exhibition at the George Binet Gallery. Since then, more than one-hundred and fifty exhibitions of his work have been held throughout the country and abroad, in private and public museums. Currently, he is on the roster of artists at the Chase Gallery in New York.

As an elected member of the American Watercolor Society and the Audubon Artists, Hartgen exhibits his art annually in their exhibitions. His paintings of Maine have been included in Watercolor U. S. A.; Campus Art, U.S.A.; American Federation of Arts Traveling Exhibition; Oklahoma Art Center; Grumbacher Hyplar Traveling Exhibition; Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts; U. S. Joseph Fuchs will perform July 30

Joseph Fuchs, who has long been recognized as one of America's pre-eminent violinists, will appear Tuesday, July 30, at 8 p.m. in Hauck Auditorium. Internationally known and acclaimed, Fuchs has been described by Harold Schonberg in the New York Times as "a violinist of superior musical and technical endowments." The Bell Telephone Company devoted an hour-long television special to Fuchs in the fall of 1967 in a program titled "The Virtuoso Teacher."

The program Tuesday will consist of three selections: Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, op. 12, #3; Cesar Franck's Sonata in A major; and, Brahms' Sonata in D minor which Fuchs performed to great praise in Carnegie Hall with pianist Artur Balsam, who will accompany him here.

In less than twenty years, Fuchs has made a record of over 85 appearances in New York City alone in addition to his annual tours of this country and Europe. As well as making personal appearances, Fuchs is noted for his interpretations of the classics and promotion of contemporary works, his co-founding of the Musicians' Guild, his tour of Latin America for the State Department, and his recording of a sizeable portion of the violin literature for several record companies. In 1965-66 he performed his now famous series of four concerts at the Metropolitan Museum, surveying four centuries of music for the violin. Composer-critic Virgil Thompson once remarked, "Hearing Joseph Fuchs make music is one of the privileges of New York life."

CBS newsman to visit campus

Richard C. Hottelet, CBS News correspondent to the United Nations, will speak on "World Peace and America's Price" on Tuesday, July 30, at 9 a.m. in the Memorial Gymnasium. Hottelet's experiences in the newspaper field include a wide variety of domestic and foreign assignments.

Before his U.N. assignment, Hottelet served as Bonn (Germany) correspondent from 1951 to 1956—the second of two extended tours of duty in Germany. After graduating from Brooklyn College in New York, Hottelet entered Germany in 1937 as a graduate student at the University of Berlin.

He broke off his studies prior to World War II to join the United Press Bureau in Berlin. Soon he was trudging beside Nazi troops goose-stepping into Czechoslovakia; next he entered Poland with the first wave of war correspondents after Hitler's legions crossed the border.

The out-spoken Hottelet was arrested by the Third Reich in 1941 on a trumped-up charge of espionage. After 4 months in solitary confinement in the Alexander-platz and Moabit jails, he was exchanged for a Nazi newsman held by the U. S. Justice Department. He spent the next two years working for the Office of War Information in London, Africa, and Italy.

Hottelet joined the CBS London bureau in January, 1944. Shortly afterward, flying in a Ninth Air Force bomber that attacked Utah Beach six minutes before H-Hour, he emerged with the first report of the seaborne invasion of Normandy.

Later in the war, while assigned to the U. S. First Army to cover the Battle of the Bulge and make the Rhine crossing, he parachuted to safety when his plane was struck by enemy flak.

Since being assigned to the U.N. for CBS in 1960, he has covered such newsmakers as the former Soviet Premier Khrushchev's tumult-stirring appearance and the diplomatic struggles over Cuba, the Congo, Kashmir, and Vietnam.

There will be no classes during Hottelet's convocation. Instructors are expected to dismiss classes about ten minutes before the convocation. Second period classes will begin as soon as the convocation is over.

To speak

Richard C. Hottelet, CBS newsman and veteran war correspondent, will speak July 30, at 9 a.m., in the Memorial Gym.

These and other cultural artifacts are on exhibit in Dr. Emerick's anthropology museum, third floor South Stevens, open weekdays from 8 a.m. to noon. The museum is closed afternoons because the extreme heat (often 100°) not only makes the room intolerable, but also harms many articles on display.

HARTGEN ART

State Department Embassies Abroad Program; Maine State Art Festival, and many other national and regional shows.

A large Katahdin Mountain painting of Hartgen's is included in the International Platform Association Exhibition in Washington. Last year, a similar painting was selected for the Metropolitan Museum's exhibition, "Two Hundred Years of Watercolor Painting in America." Another painting from the same series is owned by the International Tel and Tel Corporation, New York.

Hartgen's paintings hang in the collections of the Boston Museum, the Wadsworth Athenaeum, Brooks Memorial Museum in Memphis, Reading Museum, Everhart Museum, Smith College, Howard University, Colby College, Bates College, International Tel and Tel, Norma and John Marin Collection, Phoenix Art Museum, State Univ. of New York, Nylander Museum, Auriel Sands in Bermuda, and many others.

Recently, American Artist Magazine carried a picture-story on Hartgen's art, dwelling on his particular style and technique in connection with his teaching skill.

Upward bound

Sixty-five youngsters and teachers attending a Summer Institute successfully launched a rocket at Orono High School Monday morning. The scarlet rocket climbed to 3000 feet before parachuting to earth — some 500 feet away from the launching site. Leighton Sewall, Old Town science teacher, was the leader of the rocketeers, made up of the teachers, staff, and boys and girls attending the university's 6-week Institute for Advanced Study for Teachers of Rural Youth, which closes August 16. The Institute is financed by a grant from the U.S. Office of Education under the National Defense Education Act.

UM to sponsor property tax conference

The bureau has been conducting a study of property tax administration in the state for the legislature.

A series of speakers will address the conference, followed by small group discussions. Background papers will be prepared by authorities in the field of state and local finance for distribution in advance to conference participants.

Funds acquired from Title VIII of the Housing Act of 1964 are being used to cover the major costs, making it possible to offer the program with only a modest charge for meals and housing. Those interested in receiving registration material or more information may contact the Bureau of Public Administration, 29 North Stevens Hall, U. of M., Orono.

More than 250 people are expected on the University of Maine's Orono campus Sept. 9 through 11 for a property tax conference developed around the theme, "The Three R's of Property Taxation in the 1970's: Revitalization, Reform and Relief."

The program is being organized by the university's Bureau of Public Administration in cooperation with the Office of the Governor, the State Bureau of Taxation, the Maine Municipal Association and the Maine Association of Assessing Officers.

The first of the three topics, revitalization of the tax base, will deal with exemptions, wildlands, personal property and real property. Reform of the assessment function will be concerned with professional assessors, certification, larger assessment districts, intergovernmental cooperation, statistics and public reporting, technical assistance, Boards of Review, and appeals.

An office of local government, local autonomy, municipal income taxes, user charges and benefit zones, state income tax, and church-owned property will be discussed under relief to the taxpayer.

Both public and private organizations, as well as interested citizens, are expected to attend the conference which was planned because "there is a real need to bring together concerned persons to discuss the substance of the tax and the administration of the system," according to Dana R. Baggett, director of the Bureau of Public Administration.

In addition, Baggett said, the program is intended to generate informed opinions on various alternatives to the property tax, to allow the participants to express themselves as a group, to arrive at some recommendations, and to lay the foundation for reform.

Final Examinations Schedule

Final examinations for the six-week courses, June 17 to July 26, also are optional with the instructor. Classes will be held as usual Thursday, July 25, and Friday, July 26, in those courses which do not require examinations.

Examinations are held in regular classrooms as assigned, and they should not exceed the allotted time of one and one-half hours.

The final examination schedule for the first six-week courses, June 17 to July 26, is as follows:

Final Examinations for three-week courses, July 8 to July 26, are optional with the instructor and are held Friday, July 26 in regular classroom as assigned. Classes are held at the usual time Friday, July 26, in those courses which do not require examinations.

Time of Class Meeting, 7:45 a.m., Time of Examination, Thursday, July 25, 7:45 to 9:15 a.m. (No class Friday).

Time of Class Meeting, 9:15 a.m., Time of Examination, Friday, July 26, 9:15 a.m. to 10:45 a.m. (No class Thursday).

South Campus joins multiversity

Rockland Hall, and Ellsworth Hall. The dining hall will be named Brewer Hall, the two classroom buildings will be named Caribou and Eastport Hall, the auditorium, Portland Hall; and the administration building, Bangor Hall.

The campus library, formerly the base chapel, will be named Dow Hall in honor of Lt. Frederick Dow of Oakfield, for whom Dow Field was named in 1942. Lt. Dow died in 1940 in a mid-air collision over Queensborough, New York.

Although plans are not yet definite, eventually South Campus might become a two-year campus for Orono. Initially there will be approximately 12 two-year programs offered there, and in the future such two-year programs as general education, dental hygiene or assistants, law enforcement, and aeronautical technology may be added.

Although the first year South Campus will only have 600 students, within a few years enrollment will be about 1500. It is here that the university plans to grow, since no extra dormitory space now exists or is planned for the Orono campus.

Change of command

Dr. Bruce Poulton (center), Dean of The College of Life Sciences and Agriculture, and Winthrop Libby, acting president of the university, accept title to The South Campus from Col. John Booth.

The proposed South Campus is now a reality with the acquisition of 200 acres of the former Dow Air Force Base through transfer from the federal government and a leasing arrangement with the city of Bangor.

The University of Maine's newest campus has 50 buildings with 500,000 square feet of space located adjacent to Interstate 95 in Bangor. The 17 buildings on the new campus include 8 dormitories capable of housing 1200 to 1500 students. Other facilities include two dining halls, classrooms, a gymnasium, a student union building, a chapel and a library—most of which are new, brick constructed structures.

Six-hundred freshmen will attend South Campus this fall, half of them in two-year programs and the other half in four-year baccalaureate programs. The students, representing all five colleges at the Orono branch, will have most of their classes at South Campus, although there will be some commuting to Orono. To alleviate the commuting problem at South Campus freshmen will be allowed to have cars and also buses will run between Bangor and Orono every half hour up to 7 p.m.

The buildings on the new campus are named after Maine communities. The five dormitories will be called Belfast Hall, Augusta Hall, Lewiston Hall,

Health Center makes big move

The University of Maine Health Center on the Orono campus has bridged some 135 years with a three-tenths of a mile move across campus to its brand new $600,000 quarters east of the Memorial Gymnasium.

When health center personnel moved into the new building June 10 they swapped it for the 135-year-old structure which had been the university's infirmary since 1949. Prior to that date the Health Center had been called North Hall, constructed in 1833 and one of the original farm buildings on the property when the university was established, as home.

The move to new quarters for the Health Center had been planned since 1962.

Dr. Robert A. Graves, director of the center, believes the work of his staff can be carried out much more efficiently in the new quarters.

"One thing that will be better is that there will be considerably less waiting. This is something that has always annoyed students. Our new laboratory facilities will enable us to carry out a number of tests ourselves that we previously had to send away and the reading of x-rays will be done on a daily basis, rather than waiting for them to be sent to Bangor, read and then returned," Dr. Graves said.

The new center will employ one more full-time doctor, one more full-time psychologist and one more nurse than were available in the old quarters.

The singly story building of brick construction gives the appearance of a broad-based T. The base of the T is the west wing and includes out-patient facilities such as three clinics, a records office, a conference room, library, x-ray department, minor surgical area, laboratory, mental health clinic and director's office.

The out-patient clinics each contain a suite of four rooms which are used as a doctor's office, two examining rooms and a nurse's screening area. The mental health clinic includes a waiting room, two psychologists' offices and two interview rooms.

The crossbar of the T is the east wing and contains the in-patient section. Included are 16 two-bed rooms, a nurses' station, a patients' lounge, first aid clinic and nurses' lounge. Six of the bedrooms are unfinished but when they are completed the center will have an in-patient capacity of 44 persons compared to 25 in the old building.

The two wings are connected by the dining room and kitchen. The dining room can feed 32 persons at a sitting and during the academic year the center will have its own cook, a kitchen maid and two house maids.

The idea of a dining facility for both patients and staff personnel was advanced by Dr. Graves who feels that "about 80 per cent of the students treated here are well enough to eat in a dining room rather than have to be fed in their rooms." He says this system will cut down considerably on the work-load of hospital personnel.

Under the west wing is a basement area which will include space for a physiotherapy room and storage area.

The building has been constructed so that it can be expanded in the future to meet increased student enrollment. The west wing can be expanded laterally and a second floor can be constructed over the east wing, according to Dr. Graves.

When current areas in the center are finished, the structure will be adequate to care for the needs of 10,000 students on campus. With the outlined expansion, it could care for 20,000 students, Graves added.

This fall some 7,500 students are expected at Orono and at the South Campus in Bangor. A dispensary-type operation will be maintained by the Health Center at South Campus with students there given in-patient and emergency care at Orono.

As of September 1 the staff of the Health Center will include four full-time physicians, two full-time psychologists, a surgical consultant who will visit four times per week, a psychiatric consultant who will visit one day a week, seven full-time nurses, four part-time nurses, an x-ray technician, a laboratory technician, and a receptionist. Radiologists from the Eastern Maine General Hospital will visit the center daily to read x-rays.

Since the new center opened there have been five in-patients and an average sick call of 30 students daily, according to Dr. Graves. This will expand greatly when the regular school year begins in September.

Assistant director of the center is Martin Prendergast.
