Summer art

A student works on a paper mache sculpture which will be part of an exhibit of art work and experimental films to be held Thursday, August 15 from 1-2 p.m. in Carnegie Hall. The exhibit is the product of six weeks work by the 65 students (aged 7-17) enrolled in art instructor Michael Lewis' summer art classes.

White Mountain forester to receive award

A University of Maine alumnus who is now forest supervisor of the three-quarter million acre White Mountain National Forest in New Hampshire and Maine, Gerald S. Wheeler, will receive the University of Maine's Outstanding Achievement Award during dedication ceremonies at the Orono campus Thursday, August 22, for the new School of Forest Resources Building.

The dedication will be held as part of a Forestry Field Day which will include a lumberjack lunch, field trips to the University Forest, a tour of the just-completed building, and talks by prominent forestry spokesmen.

Wheeler, who has spent over 40 years in the U.S. Forest Service, attended public schools in Bangor and received his B.S. degree in forestry from the U. M. in 1926. He earned his master's degree at New York State College of Forestry the following year, and began his career in the federal service as a junior forester.

After serving as district ranger and assistant forest supervisor in the White Mountain National Forest and the George Washington National Forest (Virginia) and as forest supervisor of Vermont's Green Mountain National Forest, he was assigned in 1942 to the regional forester's office in Philadelphia as assistant chief of the Division of Operation. In 1945 he returned to the Green Mountain National Forest until 1954 when he was transferred to his present assignment as forest supervisor of the White Mountain National Forest.

A former chairman of the New England Section of the Society of American Foresters, he was the recipient this past March of that group's Outstanding Forester of the Year Award. This award has only been presented three times.

Dr. Shedd to give Commencement address

Dr. Mark R. Shedd, superintendent of schools in Philadelphia, will be the commencement speaker for the University of Maine's summer graduation exercises Friday, August 16, Winthrop C. Libby, acting president of the university, said Sunday.

The exercises are scheduled to be held in the Memorial Gymnasium at 7:45 p.m.

Honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws will be presented to Dr. Shedd and to Dr. Samuel E. Morison, professor emeritus of Harvard University, a noted historian. In addition, the university's Distinguished Achievement Award will be presented to David H. Stevens, chairman of the Maine State Highway Commission.

Dr. Shedd attended schools in Bangor, received his A.B. and Ed. M. degrees from the University of Maine, and his Ed. D. degree from the Harvard Graduate School of Education. He began his career in education as a social studies teacher in Bangor, and later was an elementary principal and supervisor in Caribou, supervisor of elementary education in Auburn, and rural district superintendent in Westbrook, Conn. He was elected superintendent of schools in Englewood, N.J., in 1962, and in 1967 he became superintendent of Philadelphia schools.

In his present position Dr. Shedd is head of a school system with 12,000 teachers and 260,000 pupils.

Dr. Morison was born in Boston, graduated from Harvard College in 1908, and received his Ph.D. from Harvard in 1912. He is the biographer of Columbus, author of the monumental "History of U.S.

David H. Stevens

Naval Operations in World War II," and chronicler of his state, his college, and his nation.

A member of the Harvard faculty for 40 years, he retired in 1955 and is now Jonathan Trumbull Professor of American History Emeritus. During World War II, he served in the U.S. Naval Reserve, and rose from the rank of Lieutenant Commander to Rear Admiral. He has received many honors for his work as an historian including the Presidential Medal of Freedom and two Pulitzer prizes. He has spent his summers at Northeast Harbor for some 30 years.

Stevens was born in Guilford, and received his B.S. degree from the University of Maine in civil engineering in 1928. He served as an instructor in civil engineering at the university following his graduation and later worked for the New York Telephone Company.

He returned to Maine to become town manager of Ashland at the age of 25. Later he was town manager of Guilford and of Milo. He was named State Tax Assessor in 1942 and in 1947 he was appointed Commissioner of Health and Welfare. In 1954 he was appointed to his present position, chairman of the Maine State Highway Commission. He was the first person to hold this post and he is now serving in his third seven-year term.

Dr. Samuel E. Morison

U.S. Artists exhibit works in Alumni Hall

The University Art Department, in keeping with its tradition of providing not only classroom instruction in art, but also exhibits by nationally known artists, is sponsoring several such displays this summer. The lobby of Alumni Hall presently houses a variety of paintings, including casein, watercolors, etchings, serigraphs, intaglio, mezzotint, acrylic-intaglio, offset lithograph, and offset embossing; all by the California Group.

The artists included in this show have studied extensively with such art schools as the Chouinard Art Institute, the University of California, the School of Fine Arts in San Francisco, Laguna Beach School of Art, Chicago Art Institute, Minneapolis Institute of Art, and Pomona College.

This exhibit is at the University courtesy of the Old Bergen Art Guild of Bayonne, New Jersey.

Summer construction — progress amid the dust

Construction is quite prevalent during the summer months on the "Maine" campus, and this summer is no exception. Several buildings, including Alumni Hall, Winslow Hall and Crosby Laboratory are undergoing renovations. Fernald Hall will soon be added to the list.

A storeroom on the first floor of Alumni Hall is being converted into offices for accountants, who are now crowded into the front of the building along with the Treasury offices. Another phase of the Alumni renovation, scheduled for completion in mid-January of 1969, calls for the conversion of Little Theatre into executive offices.

In Crosby Lab, where work should end in mid-summer, old equipment used by the Mechanical Engineering department is being replaced by up-to-date machinery. A new front is being constructed on the building also, so that the entrance will be from the East Annex side of the building instead of from behind Little Hall.

The plans for Fernald Hall are now being revised and work should begin soon. Downstairs the old coffee shop will be enlarged and supplied with new equipment, and upstairs new offices will be constructed for the personnel Deans. This latter move is a continuation of the long-range objective of moving all offices not directly connected with the library out of the library. Thus, increasing space for library facilities.

The Alumni offices and Graduate School will also move out of the library; the former will go to North Hall (the old infirmary) and the latter will move to Winslow Hall when renovations are completed there.

Face-lifting

Crosby Laboratory undergoes an about face—so that it now fronts toward East Annex—prior to receiving up-dated mechanical engineering equipment in its newly designed interior.

ETV — from small beginning to big educator

The State of Maine Educational Television Network, composed of three non-commercial television stations and one translator station, was established in 1962 to provide televised instructional services to the public schools of the state to supplement and enrich the curriculum at the elementary and secondary levels.

Since going on the air in the fall of 1963, the instructional program has been of great value to the many remotely located rural schools of the State currently unable to offer the variety of instruction and often depth of instruction pertinent to competitive education.

The State of Maine Educational Television Network was established by an enabling act (Chapter 247 of the Private and Special Laws, State of Maine) and a million and one-half dollar bond issue passed in referendum by the Maine citizens in 1962. The four stations are: WMEB-TV, Channel 12, Orono, Maine; WMEM-TV, Channel 10, Presque Isle, Maine; WMED-TV, Channel 13, Calais, Maine; and WO4AR (Translator), Channel 4, Madawaska, Maine. These stations are interconnected, by a 700-mile microwave system, with WCBB, Channel 10, Augusta, Maine; WENH-TV, Channel 11, Durham, New Hampshire; and WGBH, Channel 2, Boston, Massachusetts.

WMEB-TV, Channel 12, Orono, was the first station in the Network to begin broadcasting. It was followed six months later, in February, 1964, with WMEM-TV, Channel 10, Presque Isle. WMED-TV, Channel 13, Calais was operating by September 1964, bringing television to this area for the first time as the eastern-most television station in the United States.

WO4AR, translator went on the air in November, 1966 to service an area of the St. Johns Valley not covered by the signal from Channel 10, Presque Isle.

Educational Television in Maine is concerned with three specific areas of program material. During the morning and early afternoon, the Network presents instructional programs for use in the schools of the State as part of the daily classroom work.

During the evening hours, the Network offers an alternative television service to the general public. This service includes programs of a cultural and informative nature, generally not available on commercial channels. A number of programs are for children out of school.

From time-to-time, programs aimed at specific interest groups are presented. This type of program includes such examples as supervisory training telecourses broadcast in 1965, 1966, and 1967 for supervisory and management personnel in Maine industry, and other community service programs. It is hoped that this area of broadcasting will be expanded in the future.

The State Department of Education is charged with the responsibility of selecting the in-school television programming, while the University of Maine provides an evening educational television service. During 1966, the University of Maine Continuing Education Division offered its first college credit course via television over the Maine ETV stations.

One hundred eighty thousand students attend some 320 public and private elementary and secondary schools in the viewing areas of the three stations of the State Network. In 1966-67, thirty-five telecourses were presented, more than any other New England state.

The network in-school schedule of programs is also transmitted by the privately owned Colby, Bates, and Bowdoin station, WCBB, Channel 10, Augusta. Thusly, the majority of the schools in Maine are in ETV viewing areas. The Department of Education pays a fee to WCBB for this program service.

The southern portion of the State receives an educational television program service from WENH-TV, Channel 11, Durham, New Hampshire, licensed to the University of New Hampshire. The in-school television service available from this facility to southern Maine is not the same, but similar to, the program service offered by the State of Maine Educational Television Network and WCBB. It is proper to note, however, that all but 2% of the population of the State live in areas served by one or more educational television stations. Both WCBB and WENH-TV broadcast evening schedules much the same as the State of Maine ETV Network.

Some of the programs presented both as part of the in-school and evening service are produced in the Network's University of Maine studios. Other programs are supplied by two ETV network affiliations, the Eastern Educational Network and the National Educational Television Network.

The Eastern Educational Network is a cooperative association of 27 ETV stations in the Eastern United States. These stations exchange programs with each other, making the programs of one station available to all stations without fee.

The National Educational Television network produces programs of national and international scope for its 117 member stations across the United States. These programs deal with cultural and informational subjects of national interest and provide the local station with programs they would not ordinarily be able to present on their own. NET operates under a six million dollar grant from the Ford Foundation and supplies each network affiliate with 5 hours of new programs weekly. Besides this, programs originally produced by NET are available for replay.

The State of Maine Educational Television Network has 29 full-time employees, most of them professionally trained in television production or engineering. Students from the University of Maine also work for the Network on a part-time basis.

Five hundred and twenty-eight thousand Maine residents live in the viewing areas of the three State of Maine Educational Television Network Stations. A recent audience survey of the Network's Orono station indicated that 1 out of 2 TV viewers have watched ETV, and 1 out of 4 watched ETV in the week prior to the survey and could remember programs by title or subject. This is equal to the latest national average for ETV viewing.

The Network operation is financed in its entirety by legislative appropriation which for the fiscal year 1965-66 was $298,526. The total budget for 1966-67 is $311,500.

'The Knack'—last summer production ends Saturday

"The Knack," which will play through Saturday at the University of Maine Summer Theatre, is dedicated to the proposition that almost any girl can be seduced by a reasonably attractive man who applies a mere modicum of guile and persistence to the game.

However, before the women of Maine rise up in wrath at this imputation of gullibility in their sex, they had better take note of the fact that "The Knack" was written by a woman.

The author is Ann Jellicoe, an Englishwoman of unimpeachable family background (she is related to the Admiral Jellicoe who commanded the British fleet in World War I), who has been an actress, producer, director and adapter of plays by Ibsen and Chekhov in the art theatres and main West End theatres of London for 14 years.

If outraged women want to sneer at her imputation of women's easy seductibility, Miss Jellicoe has the answer that she herself fears that her plays give away a bias against men, not against women. Certainly "The Knack" contains evidence of anti-male prejudice. Miss Jellicoe drew the character who slanders women's virtue so glibly as a pretty uncouth fellow, with a good deal of boasting exhibitionism and sadism in his make-up.

Regardless of what pops up in her plays, in her own life Miss Jellicoe doesn't seem to hate men, being married to Roger Mayne, a successful London photographer.

"You know," she told the interviewer, "women can do without men, physically I mean. The race can continue through chemistry. The only trouble is, all the children would be female."

The interviewer naturally asked if she wanted to do without men.

"You bet I don't," was her quick, emphatic answer.

It might appear that Ann Jellicoe wasn't trying in "The Knack" to express hostility to men or to women, but merely to write a funny comedy. This she did.

Lobster Picnic is planned

Dr. William Daphiede heads Speech Clinic

Dr. William R. Dopheide, whose special research interests are voice disorders, aphasia, and clinical training, has been named director of the University of Maine's Speech and Hearing Clinic, and associate professor in the department of speech.

Dopheide has assumed his duties at the clinic which is open through August 16 for diagnostic help and therapy. The clinic reopens for the academic year in mid-September.

A former faculty member at Western Michigan University Dopheide received his doctorate this year at Michigan State University. He has been particularly involved in speech pathology, audiology, clinic psychology and counseling.

A former University of Maine football star and Waterville resident, Huard divides his time between professional football and his work as a probation and parole officer for the state. Huard will appear as one of the guests on the ETV program which will deal with the problems of teenagers.

Penobscot County District Court Judge Ian MacInnes will join Huard and program host Philip Rice for a discussion of the court's relationship with the teenager in trouble. The program will also consider such areas effecting teenage life as poverty, employment, and the law.

Other distinguished guests to appear on the half-hour report will be Walter Benzie, Maine Employment Security Commission; Brewer High School Guidance Director Edward Revello; and Mrs. Marilyn McInnis of the Children's Opportunity Center in Brewer. Teenager Skip Maddocks, a product of the Upward Bound Program at Gorham State College, will offer some views on the rural way of life. Maddocks, a resident of Hollis Center, was recently seen on a network ETV program, the "Visual Generation," broadcast in Maine and throughout the northeast last May.

"Community Compass" is a weekly feature of the Maine ETV Network designed to highlight the work of social service agencies in Maine. The series is produced in cooperation with the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Maine. Brad Peters is producer-director.

Director of Admissions James A. Harmon and Professor Maurice O. White interview an applicant for the University's Martin Luther King Scholar Program.

University starts Martin Luther King Scholarship program

Seven Negro students who did not receive a letter of acceptance from an American college last Spring will spend four years at the University of Maine. They will attend because a student, faculty, and administration committee decided this would be the most fitting memorial for the slain civil rights leader, Martin Luther King.

James A. Harmon, director of admissions, and Professor Maurice O. White of the College of Education interviewed applicants for the King scholarships in Washington, D.C., July 19. The interviews were held at Federal City College, which had 2000 more freshmen applications than it could take. The 2000 places available were filled by lottery and the school's director of admissions, Luther McManus, has been trying to find colleges for the other 2000. Sixty expressed interest in Maine's program and of the 21 interviewed, seven were accepted by Harmon and White for this fall's freshman class.

The program, Professor White explained, will be concerned with "living on a day to day basis. First the first semester, then the first year." Tutoring and remedial work will be provided as needed, but the students will be enrolled in regular classes and treated as other students.

Educators hope the program will grow to include black students from all the United States and students from other disadvantaged and minority groups. Of the several possibilities open to Negro students, this program was chosen because educators believe the interaction of these students with Maine citizens will be beneficial to both.

Are you willing to go as low as $1776* for a new VW?

We don't sell status. Just a car. One that gets up to 27 mpg, hardly uses oil between changes, and goes a long way on a set of tires. Of course, the fact that it's practical is no secret. And everybody is going to know that you're saving money. But that's the price you pay for a Volkswagen.
