By Haak Moody

Students to six as members of the Disciplinary Committee were selected last Sunday by Student Senate interviews.

Seniors appointed for one year were Judie Bowie, Bob Cauth, and Steve Williams. Juniors appointed for two years were Fred Hodgkins, Jim Nolich, and Mark Wettlaufer.

The Serenaders will play at a dance in the Men's Gym following Saturday evening's concert. No admission will be charged.

Senate chooses code committee
Some people have a hard time communicating with youth. Not us. We just bring the '69 Camaro, then tell it like it is. It is: Restyled inside and out with a new grille, new bumpers, new parking lights, new instrument panel, new steering wheel, new striping, and new colors including Hugger Orange, which is wild.

It is: Full of new features including bigger outlets for the Astro Ventilation, a 210-lp stand-by V8, and a lock for the steering column, ignition and transmission lever.

It is: Available with a little device that automatically washes your headlights when you hold the windshield washer button in.

It is: Still wider and weightier than the rival sportster we’re too fond of, remarked Mr. Frederick Turner, resident advisor in Scott dorm.

You should drive a '69 Camaro, then tell it like it is.

Ask the kid who owns one.
Parietals still before student life committee

The open housing or parietal house question debated last spring by the Student Life Committee now faces possibly resolution.

The hope for approval of the recommendations failed to appear last semester. Differences in interpreting systems used by other colleges and as a request by the student body. The present 1968 regulations do not satisfy the present yardstick of Student Senate. The proposal will be brought to the Senate as soon as the present regulations are made.

Members of this year's committee include: Oct. 18 - 1968. The committee is under the direction of Robert Reedy, Director of Student Services, and James M. Clark, Vice President for Academic Affairs, all of whom served on last year's committee, which was divided into two sections: Those interested in Parities and Those interested in open housing. The committee is divided into two sections: Those interested in Parities and Those interested in open housing.

The five students on the committee include: Jim Turner, Moscato, Don, editor of The Maine Campus; Mike Shrews, president of the Student Senate; Derek Moore; and Steve Hugon, Student Senate president.

All members of the committee agree there will still be problems to be solved. Dorrance stated he "hopes that within a couple of weeks we'll be set on the committee and that we'll have a decision about this thing." He noted however that there is still a committee split on the issue and possibly a unanimous opinion will not be reached.

While student members were in favor of the proposal, he said, some committee members and the present deals seemed to be against the action. If, after several meetings, he believes the proposal should be approved, Dorrance believes a majority and minority opinions must be presented to the University president for his decision and approval.

Each side will probably have new points to bring up after studying the proposal during the summer.

North Campus has become one of the most obvious problems since the original proposal states that the system is only for the Orono campus.

Turner pointed out that the open house problem was included in order to eliminate all the state colleges new part of the University. Only those students living under the dormitory system of Orono and represented by the Student Senate are included under the regulations. Since the North Campus is actually an extension of the Orono campus, Turner foresees little trouble with this point.

The report itself authorizes a maximum of six four-hour open houses which can be held on week-ends or days before vacations. The committee recommends that the months of September and January be open, though it does not specify how "open" is to be interpreted.

The 76-page report consists of a study of 36 pages dealing with various student problems and issues. The remaining 20 pages are in the form of research done by the committee to document the various classes. The report is required to work out its own system of guest registration. The report states that more doors of participants will remain open, though it does not specify how "open" is to be interpreted.

ADU installation

Alpha Delta Upsilon fraternity, the new addition to the University of Maine Greek system, will be inducted at 2 p.m., at the Maine Christian Association Building on College Avenue. The installation will be conducted by representatives of the Delta Upsilon national fraternity.

Thanks, but they're just not our type.

Young engineers who join us are expected to move in on some rather formidable programs... with acuteness and lots of guts. And a willingness to assume early responsibility on demanding assignments is an attribute which we welcome warmly. It's the kind of engineering aggressiveness that has brought Sikorsky Aircraft to dominant stature in a new world of advanced VTOL aircraft systems.

If our criteria parallel your outlook, you'll find an excellent career environment with us. You would enjoy working (with a select group) on exciting, full-spectrum systems development. And you can watch your talents and imagination assume reality in such diverse forms as Heavy-Lift Skycrapers—Tilt Rotor Transports—High-Speed VTOL Commercial Transports—and much more for tomorrow.

Does this responsibility sit your imagination? Then you probably should be with us. There's ample opportunity for innovation in aerodynamics • human factors engineering • automatic controls • structures engineering • weight prediction • systems analysis • operations research • reliability/maintainability engineering • automation systems • computer technology • manufacturing engineering • information systems • marketing and more.

And your career advancement can be materially assisted through our corporation-financed Graduate Study Program—available at many outstanding schools within our area.

Consult your College Placement Office for campus interview dates—or—for further information, write to Mr. Leo J. Shaver, Professional and Technical Employment.
Fernald to hold deans' offices

Fernald Hall, the "Old Bookstore," is undergoing complete remodeling to provide offices for the Deans of Men and Women and also include improvement of the old snack bar area. Nicholas and O'Day are the contractors. May 31 has been set as the completion date.

Previously housed in Fernald Hall are the International Department, Campus office and offices for the University Bookstore. The only exterior change will be a new office entrance on the south side of the building and an improved main entrance. Director of Engineering Services Richard A. Etiene said.

Dean Stewart added, the offices would be more accessible to students in the building beside Wingate Hall.

On the second floor Fernald, Dean Stewart will have four offices and a conference room. There are also several rooms that can be used as offices in the future.

New art course offered for Continuing Education

"As an exploitation of the art of architecture, how it functions throughout history, and how its principles prevail in the proper planning and design of modern-day homes are the subjects of a community service course taught by Prof. Hans Christian Rademacher of Art Vincent A. Hartgen at the University of Maine's Orono campus.

The course, 'Masterpieces of Architecture, Office of Art Education Division, M.E.C.,' will begin Sept. 11 at 11 a.m. Oct. 15 through Dec. 17 in Room 202 of Carnegie Hall.

The new course is an outgrowth of previous ones offered last year by Prof. Hartgen. Students in previous courses on the visual arts and the art of painting occasionally chose the subject of architecture for continuing study, Prof. Hartgen said.

Registration for the course may begin Friday, Sept. 1, and will continue until Oct. 22.

Further information and registration materials may be obtained by contacting the university's Continuing Education Division, 14 Northworth Hall, Orono, or by calling 866-7339.

Engineering and Science at IBM

"You're treated like a professional right from the start!"

"The attitude here is, if you're good enough to be hired, you're good enough to be turned loose on a project," says Don Feistamel.

Don earned a B.S.E.E. in 1965. Today, he's an Associate Engineer in systems design and evaluation at IBM. Most of his work consists of determining modifications needed to make complex data processing systems fit the specialized requirements of IBM customers.

Depending on the size of the project, Don works individually or in a small team. He's now working with three other engineers on part of an air traffic control system that will process radar information by computer.

Says Don: "There are only general guidelines. The assignment is simply to come up with the optimum system."

Set your own pace

Recently he wrote a simulation program that enables an IBM computer to predict the performance of a data processing system that will track satellites. He handled that project himself. "Nobody stands over my shoulder," Don says. "I pretty much set my own pace."

Don's informal working environment is typical of Engineering and Science at IBM. No matter how large the project, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people.

Don sees a lot of possibilities for the future. He says, "My job requires that I keep up to date with all the latest IBM equipment and systems programs. With that broad an outlook, I can move into almost any technical area at IBM—development, manufacturing, product test, space and defense projects, programming or marketing."

Check with your placement office

If you're interested in engineering or science at IBM, ask your placement office for more information.

Or send a resume or letter to Paul Koslow, IBM Corporation, Dept. C, 425 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. We'd like to hear from you even if you're headed for graduate school or military service.

The politics of 1968 has touched the college student as never before, and the new deal liberalism of the 60's is being challenged. The question stands: does an alternative exist? Thirty candidates vie for the presidency. George Wallace is an American tragedy. His entire campaign is emotional appeal to fear and hate. However, differences in conviction and outlook do exist between Richard Nixon and Vice Pres. Hubert Humphrey. Neither candidate belongs to the school of "new politics," but one of them manifests a lead in that direction—Hubert Humphrey.

Humphrey has superior claims to the presidency in three critical areas: domestic policy, foreign policy, and the quality and emphasis of his political leadership. Over the past 21 years he has been an effective liberal proponent and fighter for some of the most progressive social legislation in this century. The Job Corps, Medicare, and much domestic civil rights legislation were Humphrey's ideas. In contrast, Richard Nixon's career has been pathetically void of new ideas and new programs.

In foreign policy, Humphrey ideals such as the Peace Corps, Food for Peace Program, and the Peaceful Coexistence of Ideologies, have not been蟲

The light-hearted, satirical attacks on Wallace done in the past were based on the premise that the readers of the Campus are sufficiently intelligent to see Wallace as he is: a racist, right-wing extremist seeking power. It was also supposed that people would recall the Wallace show trials of the last eleven years which would not need pointing out. Apparently this contemporary context for Campus readers is irrelevant.

So! Wallace claims he wants to make the streets safe for Americans through a program of law and order. His solution for law and order: "I would keep the peace if I had to keep thirty-thousand troops standing in the streets with two-foot-long bayonets." Interesting.

In 1964, the U.S. Bureau of Roads charged that in exchange for contracts, Wallace was requiring road contractors to hire as "agents" of the friends of the administration—including Robt. Shelton, grand dragon of Alabama's Ku Klux Klan. Wallace later settled out of court.

With liberty and justice for all...

Is this the kind of law and order Wallace advocates? Also, Wallace settled out of court a case brought against him in 1960 at the College of William and Mary. It is a much more com-

Music Dept. selects Chamber Singers

Musicanship, flexibility and "portability" are descriptive of the University of Maine's newest and smallest singing organization, the Chamber Singers, whose 18 student members, selected by audition, have just been announced.

Eugene Davis, a music faculty member, will be the director and will work actively to complement the two larger singing groups sponsored by the music department: the 35-voice Choral Society and the University Singers.

The nine men and nine women who will make up this group are among the first people to attend advanced training in the fall semester. Members were selected on the basis of voice and musicianship (reading ability).

Members are: Carolyn Fletcher, Caribou; Carol Greenway, Houlton; Carol Hambly, Andover; Dorothy LaVesser, Fort Fairfield; Elizabeth Moore, Ellsworth; Virginia Newell, Orono; Kathrine Needham, Portland; Donald Searle, Fort Fairfield; Norman Nebous, Rockham, N.Y.; and Danna Stevens, Fort Fairfield.

Sidney S. Suntag said the problem of fraternity systems is facing today's college students.

"Whether the term is used in the mind of students or in regulation, it will be a "fraternity" when they become middle-class capitalists (something they themselves have come to recognize as a solution to "their" problem). It applies to Richard Nixon, who when he calls himself a "Nixon" will be "equal" when they become middle-class capitalists (something they themselves have come to recognize as a solution to "their" problem). It applies to Richard Nixon, who when he calls himself a "Nixon" will be "equal" when they become middle-class capitalists (something they themselves have come to recognize as a solution to "their" problem)."}

"A summer rush program where-by the freshmen and his parents would compete with the dormitory system, sell fraternalism."

Our recent visitor, Julian Bond, refused to give a lecture at the University of Tennessee because students there had been forbidden by the university's chancellor to invite Dick Gregory as the campus as a part of a student speakers' program.

Chancellor Charles H. Wesser would not allow Gregory to speak unless the university's board of trustees, in its majority, had "nothing to say to the university community" and that his appearance would "be an outrage and insult to many citizens of the state."

When Bond found that he had been invited to replace the rejected Gregory he said, "If the chancellor of the university thinks the students are too simple-minded to hear Greg- ory, they are obviously too simple- minded to hear me. I certainly don't want to poison student minds."

"It's not a matter of Gregory him- self," Bond went on, "It's a matter of students being allowed to make their own decisions. We wouldn't disagree with it were Harry Truman or George Wallace being denied permission. The issue would be the same—freedom of choice."

The question of an open speaker policy is one of the hot topics at U.T.

Further north at the University of Mississippi, university trustees put a ban on allowing Charles Evans to speak on campus. Evans is the brother of slain civil rights worker Medgar Evers.

On Miss students write to federal justices, asking for an injunction against the trustees. They pointed out that the boy was being used indiscriminately against the campaign workers for the Black Power movement and for the member of the Legislative delegation to the Chicago convention 22% of the students are allowed to Speak on campus earlier this year.

The report recommends that the faculty be given responsibility for the disorders at the university community and that his appearance would be "an outrage and insult to many citizens of the state."
