Biographical / Historical

Following a pilot project in Aroostook County, Maine in 1992, the Maine Center for Student Journalism was established in 1993 to stimulate and assist the study and practice of journalism in Maine secondary schools. The Center provided students with an opportunity to work with, speak to and learn from professionals in the field of journalism. The Center hosted an annual student journalism conference and regional roundtables that supported high school teachers and students journalism projects. The Center also organized an annual statewide newspaper conference and published a quarterly newsletter.

The Maine Center for Student Journalism was supported through financial assistance of the Maine Daily Newspaper Publishers Association and was housed in the Department of Communication and Journalism at the University of Maine. University of Maine Professor Kathryn J. Olmstead was director of the Center from 1993-2003, as well as being the Department of Communication and Journalism representative and advisory board member for the Association. The advisory committee was made up of journalism professionals. In 2003, Shannon Martin took over as both the representative/board member for the Maine Press Association and Director of the Center. There is no record of the Center being operational post-2008.
