Biographical / Historical

The University of Maine's Peace and Reconciliation Studies (formerly known as Peace Studies) was established in the 1987/1988 academic year, with an interdisciplinary, global perspective with the goal to infuse concerns for peace into the campus community and beyond. The program is currently a part of the College of Education and Human Development having formerly been in the Division of Lifelong Learning.

The program provided training in conflict resolution, campus mediation, maintained a lending library, and organized Peace Week events and special events on campus. Emily Markides served as the first interim director of the Peace and Reconciliation Program from 1988-1991 and then became the co-founder and president of ESTIA, the International EcoPeace Community in Maine, which served as an educational NGO cultivating EcoPeace: Permaculture, Ecovillages and Ecocities, and Ecological Design in Cyprus and Maine. Dr. Markides taught the courses PAX 370 Building Sustainable Communities and PAX 380 Ecovillages and Eco-cities: Models of Global Transformation.

Scope and Contents

The records contain material created and curated by the University of Maine's Peace and Reconciliation Studies (formerly known as Peace Studies).

The record series Digital Photographs of Peace Studies Posters contains photograph images of posters promoting Peace Week events at the University of Maine and other special events organized by the Peace Studies Program. The photographs were taken by University Archivist Matthew Revitt in Hugh Curran's office.

The record series Course and Program records contains a copy of the Fall 2001, Volume 5, Issue #2 of the "Changing Ways/Building Skills" publication which was published twice annually by the University of Maine's Peace Studies Program, with support from the Division of Community and Family Health, Department of Human Services. The series also includes curriculum material for the Peace Studies courses: PAX 370 Building Sustainable Communities, PAX 398/598 (869) Earth Education through Film, and PAX 495 Global Ecovillages, material from an EcoPeace, Sustainability, Training, and International Affiliations (ESTIA) workshop and presentation, and reference material curated in support of the peer mediation program.
