

The University of Maine

DigitalCommons@UMaine

---

Social Justice: Diversity, Equity, & Inclusion

Special Collections

---

12-15-1920

Co-eds Mourn Death Of All Male Students

The Maine Campus

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.library.umaine.edu/social\_justice

Part of the Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies Commons, Higher Education Commons, and the United States History Commons

---

Repository Citation

The Maine Campus, "Co-eds Mourn Death Of All Male Students" (1920). Social Justice: Diversity, Equity, & Inclusion. 573.

https://digitalcommons.library.umaine.edu/social\_justice/573

This Opinion Piece is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@UMaine. It has been accepted for inclusion in Social Justice: Diversity, Equity, & Inclusion by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@UMaine. For more information, please contact um.library.technical.services@maine.edu.

Co-eds Mourn Death Of All Male Students

—M—

Many of the Maine co-eds enjoyed the feeble protest against coeducation in last week's Campus. From a secure hiding place behind Cornell's broad shoulders some brave Maine man, or it might have been men, hurled a bomb of defiance at the unwelcome females. Wait just a minute while we co-eds laugh!

We've heard a few tales of the good old days when women were not here, so we have some idea of the times you are regretting. Those were the happy days when the boys never needed a shave and a hair comb was a luxury. A smoking jacket or a bath robe was as good as a top coat, and a sleep in class was quite the usual thing. The Maine men were an energetic-looking crowd in those days. It's too bad we co-eds came and interrupted the old customs, but you fellows were drifting toward barbarism so we led you back to the paths of civilization. It was hard work and you're still woefully dead, we all agree on that point, but at least you comb your hair and shave once in awhile. The co-eds have started you going, but you were almost hopeless after your years of seedy hermitage so we can't expect you to be as "up and coming" as you should be. Some of you protest against the co-eds because you're not used to mixing into society. You'd rather go back to the "good old days." If you would, there's don't want the co-eds around, it's besomething the matter with you. If you cause you don't care for them, and if you don't, it's because none of them like you well enough to give you a smile. If you're sighing for the good old bachelor days at Maine you're not normal and you need to shake yourselves for you're dying fast. If you learn to look upon the co-eds as fellow students who are here because this is the most convenient place to come, or because they wish to graduate from their own state university, you will not be narrow minded. If you run around acting like primitives who never saw a woman, you'll never have any social poise, and when you leave college to mingle with the larger world you'll be labelled as odd specimen and classified as dead.

—M—