Please mention that you are following "A Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine"
Just a Few Words of Explanation

EVERYONE has heard of Maine's coastline and many are familiar with the fact that its length between Kittery and Calais is approximately 2500 miles. Next they are told that the entire Atlantic coastline within the borders of the United States is only about 5000 miles and that the airline distance from Kittery to Calais is only about 220 miles. Is it any wonder that they look incredulous and ask for an explanation of this paradoxical statement?

The reason is that from one end to the other Maine's coastline is a constant succession of great bays, long narrow inlets extending for miles back from the sea and almost numberless little coves. All of these increase what should be the normal length of this remarkable section of ocean frontage to 11 times that length.

But while all America, and many in foreign lands, know of the Maine Coast, and literally millions have visited its far famed resorts, only a comparatively few are acquainted with its picturesque peninsulas, its fascinating bays and coves, its charming villages, and its delightful people to be found off the State's great arteries of regular tourist travel.

It is to these quaint and interesting places, many of which are the scenes of never to be forgotten history, as well as to the widely known resorts, that this Maine Coast Tour takes the motorist, and in almost every case over excellent modern highways.

For convenience the Tour has been divided into six sections. This arrangement makes it possible for one to cover all of it or, if time forbids, any part of it.

The distances are actual odometer, or what are commonly called speedometer mileages, and are, therefore, subject to the variations which may develop in connection with mileage figures registered by different cars over the same routes. Because of this fact it is recommended that the speedometer of the car be re-set to correspond with the Tour mileage every 75 or 100 miles. However, the various landmarks are given in sufficient detail so as to make the routes easy to follow.

The six divisions of the Tour are:
SECTION 1 — Maine-New Hampshire State Line at Kittery to Portland.
SECTION 2 — Portland to Bath.
SECTION 3 — Bath to Bucksport.
SECTION 4 — Bucksport to Ellsworth.
SECTION 5 — Ellsworth to Mount Desert Island and back to Ellsworth.
SECTION 6 — Ellsworth to United States-Canada Boundary at Calais.

Section No. 1
MAINE-NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE LINE AT KITTERY TO PORTLAND

THIS SECTION of the Maine Coast Tour covers a district supposed to be one of the best known in America, but, as a matter of fact, this is far from being the truth. It is true that the York County coast resorts are tremendously popular and are visited annually by hundreds of thousands of tourists from every section of the United States and Canada, but this great throng in traveling to and from these Internationally known watering places use only the regular routes. At least 90 percent of them blindly follow that superb thoroughfare, the Atlantic Highway, Route 1, either from Kittery, Maine, and Portsmouth, N. H., on the West, or from Portland, on the East. Not ten in ten thousand deviate from it — mainly because they know of no other route to reach their destination.

Yet paralleling this great No. 1 thoroughfare for almost its entire distance is a connected series of some of the most interesting and charming dustless highways to be found anywhere in New England. These roads, known only to the local people who use them daily and to a comparatively few Summer residents with a pioneering spirit, are really the original routes of the early settlers of this section and are, therefore, the roads of romance and historical interest, as well as beauty.

The wonderful broad and smooth cement highway running in an almost straight line between Kittery and Portland is the road of business and of speed; it is designed to meet the exacting requirements of the motorist, and he also may be a tourist, who wishes to get to his destination in the shortest possible time and with the maximum of comfort.

Section No. 1 of the Maine Coast Tour keeps the motorist within sight of the coastline and the ocean every minute it is possible to do so, and on excellent roads. And it also takes him to all of the historic and romantic spots and tells him much about them — which are completely missed by the tourist who follows the crowd on the popular cement highway which traverses this delightful section from West to East.
KITTERY

.0 KITTERY. (Probably more events of world interest have transpired in this town than in any other in Maine, and very few in the entire country can boast a more remarkable record. Settled in 1622, it was the first in the District of Maine to receive a charter from Massachusetts Bay Colony. It is the only town in the State to be visited by Washington. It was the birthplace and home of Sir William Pepperell, conquerer of Louisburg in 1747, the loss of which marked the beginning of the end of French dominion in America. Here on Badger’s Island, directly at the Eastern end of the great Maine-New Hampshire Inter-State Memorial Bridge spanning Portsmouth-Kittery Harbor, and on Route 1, was launched May 10, 1777, the Ranger, commanded by John Paul Jones, the first ship to fly the Stars and Stripes, the first to receive the first salute to the Stars and Stripes (from the French fleet, February 14, 1787), and the first to carry dispatches across the Atlantic telling of the surrender of Burgoyne. In Kittery, also, was built the famous Kearsarge whose battle with the Alabama is one of the most thrilling pages in American history. In Kittery is located the Portsmouth Navy Yard, until recently officially called the Kittery Navy Yard. This was established in 1806 and it has been the scene of outstanding World events. Here in 1905 the Russo-Japanese Peace Conference was held and the treaty of peace was signed in the Supply Department Building still standing. Here in 1898 Admiral Cervera and his men captured at the Battle of Santiago, Cuba, were held prisoners. Here General A. W. Greely and the survivors of his ill-fated Arctic expedition were brought back to their native soil. Here are built the great submarines of the American Navy. The yard is located upon several small islands, is a spot of great beauty and visitors are welcome. Just a short distance after going across the wooden bridge at Kittery Point is located the Congregational Church and across the street from it is a very old cemetery in which Celia Thaxter is buried. The church was established in 1730 and is the possessor of a silver service presented to it by Lady Pepperell.)

1.2 Navy Yard across water on right.
2.1 Cross wooden bridge.
2.5 Sparhawk Hull, fine old Colonial mansion, formerly in Pepperell family, some distance back from street, on left.
2.7 Fort McClary on right. A stop should be made here for it is one of the beauty spots of the region. The fort was first started by the Province of Massachusetts in 1715. It was a military garrison during the War of 1812 and was rebuilt, but never completed, in 1864. From it can be seen the entrance to Portsmouth and Kittery Harbor and the Isle of Shoals, far out to sea, made famous by Celia Thaxter. The islands are partly in Maine and partly in New Hampshire.

3.1 KITTERY POINT. (Sir William Pepperell’s birthplace and old home, built in 1682, and one of the most historic houses in New England on right. Memorial to Sir William and to his illustrious father Col. William Pepperell, on left, and in grove some distance back from the memorial is the grave of Sir William. Three houses beyond the Pepperell house, on the right is the Bray House, said to be even older than that built by Sir William Pepperell.)

3.7 At sign, York Village 5½ miles, turn left.
8.3 Cross historic Sewell's Bridge. This wooden structure spanning the York River was the first pile drawer bridge in America. It was designed and built by Major Samuel Sewell in 1761 and was the fore-runner of several other notable bridges of similar design built by Major Sewell. His old home is still standing on the left, just before going onto the bridge. At end of bridge at marker, turn sharp right and continue with York River, on right.
9.1 At fork with cemetery, bear right.
9.2 Old York Jail on right. One of Maine's oldest and most historic structures. Called in its early days, "the Gaol," it was built in 1653 and remained in use as a jail until 1860. It is one of the best preserved buildings of its kind in America and is now a museum, open to the public, and should be inspected by all who visit York.
9.3 JENNEY SUPER-SERVICE STATION, Stop here for solvenized gasoline.
9.3 YORK. (This is York Village, the principal year round business center of the town.) York has many claims to fame. It was the first chartered English city in America, under the name of Gorgeana, having been endowed with its charter by Sir Ferdinando de Gorges, April 10, 1641. Thomas Gorges was its first Mayor. In 1652 it was reorganized as a town and named after York, England. It was the second organized town in the State. It was settled about 1624 and its Indian name was Agamenticus. A high hill, with this name, in the town is the highest elevation up to this point, directly on the seacoast North of South America. York is a great Summer resort and York Harbor, one of its villages, has a distinguished Summer colony. Mark Twain, William Dean Howells, and Thomas Nelson Page are but a few of the noted group who made York Harbor their Summer home during the years they were alive, and it is still the mecca of modern writers, artists and leaders in the affairs of the Nation. The first troops to leave the District of Maine to volunteer in the American Revolution marched from the Village Green of York on April 21, 1775.)

Keep straight up hill and follow winding tarred road along a picturesque coastline. Pass Episcopal Memorial Stone Church and immediately on left Ogunquit Cliff Country Club Golf course.

OGUNQUIT. (This village is in the town of Wells. It is a delightful Summer resort and is very popular with artists. It also has a colony of widely known actors and actresses. It has a superb bathing beach. Ogunquit is Indian for "A Beautiful Place by the Sea.") Ogunquit was the locus of the estate of Sir Thomas Gorges, bordering the ocean along Ogunquit Beach and extending back far enough to make up 5,000 acres. Gorges was the first mayor of the first English city in the United States of America. He chose Ogunquit as his estate from a grant of land extending from the Cocheco to the Kennebec. Massachusetts Bay Colony made claim to the Gorges grant and in a lawsuit in England in 1678 the crown sustained the Gorges heirs and Massachusetts then purchased Ogunquit Beach with other land still remaining to the Gorges heirs and later in 1820 conveyed a half interest in these public lands to the State of Maine and later granted the other half. The State of Maine later made a grant of Ogunquit Beach to one Charles Tibbetts but later gave Ogunquit the right to take the beach by eminent domain and Ogunquit Beach is one of only two beaches in the State of Maine, owned by the municipality.)

End of road. Bear right onto Route 1, a wide cement highway. Continue through business section of village.

At Bourne Avenue, on right, at Moody P. O., turn sharp right, leaving Route 1. (If desired motorist may omit this side trip by keeping straight ahead on Route 1 to 25.7 and re-set speedometer at that point.)

25.7 End of road, turn right onto Route 1, a cement highway.
26.1 Small park and tablet, on right, marks the site of the Stover Garrison battle between the English settlers of the town and the French and Indians. It was fought in 1692 and was the final major attempt of the French and Indian allies to regain the territory of what is now Southwestern Maine. They were defeated and the colony was not seriously disturbed by its enemies again. The battle was one of the bloodiest in Maine's early history.
27.0 WELLS. (First settled by people from Exeter, New Hampshire, about 1640. In early history, Webhannet. Named for Wells, England, and originally included Kennebunk.) Keep straight through on Route 1.
27.7 Tablet marking Wheelwright Garrison, 1642, on left. This was also the end of the King's Highway up to that time and only forest trails existed from this point Eastward.
28.8 Straight ahead 2.8 miles for JENNEY GASOLINE STATION. Stop here for solvenized gasoline.
28.8 At sign Kennebunk Beach, 3 miles and railroad underpass ahead, turn right off concrete onto tarred road and follow Route 9.
31.7 At four corners, at sign Kennebunk Beach, turn sharp right, leaving Route 9. Continue along delightful seacoast highway.
32.6 KENNEBUNK BEACH. (A beautiful summer resort, with a fine beach and an exclusive list of summer residents. Its most distinguished citizen makes it his home and, in fact, was born in Kennebunk. He is Kenneth Roberts, who has immortalized this section with his great novels, "Arundel," "The Lively Lady," and "Rabble in Arms." The Nasons who are the central characters of these thrilling but historically accurate stories, were ancestors of the author.)
34.5 At four corners with traffic beacon and lighthouse gas station, ahead, turn sharp right onto Route 9.
34.7 KENNEBUNKPORT. (This is one of the finest examples of a typical New England seacoast town. Scores of old Colonial houses still remain intact and practically unchanged along its fine elm shaded streets. Three of America's outstanding celebrities spend the greater part of the year here—Booth Tarkington, world renowned author; Margaret Deland, noted novelist, and Abbott Graves, Internationally famed artist. Their beautiful homes are the mecca, annually, of thousands of their admirers; their stories and paintings deal with the village and its people. Hugh MacNair Kahler, the author, is another Summer resident. The town was originally named Arundel and is the Arundel of Roberts' novel. Its name was changed to its present one in 1821. The spot was first visited in 1602 by fishermen and was first settled by Richard Vines in 1629. The town is of commanding beauty and was a great shipping center in the early days of America and well along into the last century. This route through the town does not give the visitor an opportunity to see many of the best of the old homes. A special tour of the village should be made. The quality of air for about 30 miles along the coast at this point is not excelled by any other section in America, according to the opinion of a noted specialist of New York City.)

OLD ORCHARD BEACH. (This is one of America's greatest beach resorts and possesses one of the finest sand beaches in the World. The entire crescent from Prout's Neck, on the East, to Biddeford Pool, on the West, is approximately 17 miles of almost continuous fine sand, several hundred feet in width and extremely free from ocean undertows and other undesirable features. The water is also very agreeable in regard to temperature. While Old Orchard Beach has a good sized Winter population, in Summer it becomes like a great city to which daily travel thousands upon thousands of people from all over the United States and Canada to enjoy its wonderful bathing and its scores of amusements. It also has a very large number of excellent hotels. Old Orchard Beach is now internationally known as the starting point of many of the great Transatlantic flights, several of which were successful while others have added to the list of those aviators who started out full of hope in an effort to seek fame and fortune by the hazardous stunt but who were never heard from again. The resort received its name from an old apple orchard which was planted in the town about 1638. The town was first settled about 1631. Old Orchard Beach is especially popular with Canadians, thousands of whom spend their Summer vacations or "holidays" as they call them, at this most interesting spot. In the past many great auto-90.4 FORT WILLIAMS. (This modern military post, one of the most spectacular and beautiful in the United States, is the Army headquarters for Maine and New Hampshire. Here the commanding officer of this vast district resides. It is located directly at the entrance of Portland Harbor and from the high elevation at the Fort's flagpole, accessible to automobiles, may be obtained a superb view of the entire Cape Elizabeth shoreline as far West as Cape Elizabeth Lighthouse. To the right the broad Atlantic stretches without interruption of intervening land for approximately 3,000 miles to Europe; in the right foreground and within the limits of the Fort reservation is Portland Head Light, one of the oldest and most famous lighthouses in North America, and one of the most photographed because of its spectacular location and outstanding beauty; built in 1791 when Washington was President, its first keeper was appointed by the Father of His Country and the original tower still stands as solidly as when erected regardless of the fact that some of the biggest coast defense guns in the World have shaken its foundation for many years — lighthouse open to the public during certain hours each day; directly opposite is Ram Island Ledge Light, marking the Eastern side of the entrance to Portland Harbor; still farther to the left may be seen Casco Bay with its hundreds of islands, many of which are but a short distance away; the nearest island is Cushings, on which is located Fort Levett and famous White Head, one of the highest promontories on the Atlantic Coast; to its left is Peaks Island, a popular Summer resort as well as all the year-round residential section; still to the left, and in the foreground, the small island with an old fort partially concealed on it, is House Island, where in 1623 Christopher Levett built the first house within the present limits of the city of Portland; still to the left, Great and Little Diamond Islands; again to the left is Portland Harbor, with the Falmouth Shore, (Mainland) in the background; left again, a section of the city of Portland may be seen, and finally to the extreme left, and in the foreground, is the shore line of the city of South Portland and the town of Cape Elizabeth.)

90.4 At first entrance to Fort Williams, on right, and officers’ houses on right, turn right and continue through Officers’ Row to the Fort’s flagpole, (90.7 miles). At this point bear right to elevation from which the view already described may be obtained. To continue tour proceed left down grade with guns and harbor entrance on right. Follow concrete road past bakery and jail, on left, back to main highway.

93.4 SOUTH PORTLAND. (A populous and flourishing city, located directly across Portland's inner harbor and formerly a part of Cape Elizabeth. Connected with the larger city by Portland Bridge, an immense structure nearly three-quarters of a mile in length, over which the tour goes, and by Vaughan's Bridge some distance to the left, over which passes the main highway between Portland and Old Orchard Beach, Biddeford, Kittery, and Boston. South Portland's population is mostly employed in Portland.)

93.4 American Legion Square, Knightville, South Portland. (Curve right through broad street and cross Portland Bridge, following electric car tracks.)

9.47 PORTLAND, Longfellow Square. Longfellow Monument ahead.

(Portland is the metropolis of Maine and in the opinion of the renowned Edward Everett Hale is one of the two most beautiful cities in New England. It has a rich historical background and is internationally famed for the great number of noted men and women it has produced.)
Among its outstanding scenic points of interest are its two great parks, the Eastern Promenade, from which may be obtained an unsurpassed view of the harbor, the ocean, Casco Bay and its hundreds of islands, and the surrounding mainland. Western Promenade, with its spectacular panorama out over the land and including Mount Washington, highest in the Northeast, and the White Mountains of New Hampshire; Deering Oaks, great Indian battle ground, haunt of Longfellow, and now a city park; Baxter Boulevard, superb scenic drive around Back Bay; and the islands of Casco Bay, many of which are within the city limits. The Maine Automobile Association Information Bureau, Falmouth Hotel, Middle Street; the State of Maine Publicity Bureau, St. John Street; and the Chamber of Commerce Information Bureau, Free Street, will all gladly furnish full information for a sight seeing tour around Portland as well as for trips by motor, rail, water, bus or airplane to all points in its vicinity and throughout Maine.

SECTION NO. 2 of a Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine, which takes the tourist through an extremely beautiful and historical region, to Bath, including the remarkable Sebascodegan, Orr's and Bailey Islands Trip, nearly 16 miles out to sea over islands connected by bridges, begins at Lonffellow Square, Portland, where this route ends.

26.1 BRUNSWICK. (This is another town which has brought international renown to Maine. As the seat of Bowdoin College, founded in 1794, one of the oldest and best known institutions of higher education in America, it has been the home at different times of some of the outstanding leaders of the World in thought and in deed. Bowdoin's graduates include Henry W. Longfellow, America's best beloved poet; Nathaniel Hawthorne, declared by many to be our greatest American novelist; Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole; Franklin Pierce, 14th President of the United States; Elijah Kellogg, noted author; General O. O. Howard and General Joshua L. Chamberlain Civil War heroes—it was Gen. Chamberlain who saved the day at Gettysburg with his defence of Little Round Top and who later was designated by General Grant to carry out the details of the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox—one of Maine's most distinguished citizens, he was also Governor of the State and President of Bowdoin. He lived and is buried at Brunswick. Other famous graduates were Thomas B. Reed, noted American parliamentarian and Speaker of the National House of Representatives where he originated the rules of that body which are still in force today; Melville W. Fuller, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; William Pitt Fessenden, Secretary of the Treasury under Lincoln; Senator William P. Frye.

one of the Senate's greatest leaders; Lieut. Commander Donald B. MacMillan, noted Arctic explorer, and in addition, about a dozen Governors of other states, many United States Senators and over 30 members of Congress. Longfellow was both a student and a Professor at Bowdoin, living for many years in the fine old town.

The event which has given Brunswick the greatest renown throughout the length and breadth of America is the fact that in it Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote the immortal "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mrs. Stowe was the wife of Prof. Stowe, of Bowdoin, and the house in which she lived when she wrote the story is still standing on Federal Street. It was while she was attending communion service in the First Parish Church, or "Church on the Hill" as it is also called, that the vision of the story of Uncle Tom swept over her. Deeply moved she hurried from the edifice to her home and wrote down the scenes of the mental picture which had flashed across her during the service. She began the actual work on the remarkable novel immediately and when published it swept the country and, in fact, the World. Mrs. Stowe was the sister of the famed Henry Ward Beecher. It was also in the First Parish Church that Longfellow, at the 50th anniversary of his class in 1875, read his immortal poem "Morituri Salutamus" which he had written especially for the occasion.

John S. C. Abbott, celebrated historian, and George Palmer Putnam, founder of the publishing house of George Putnam's Son, were born in Brunswick. The town was settled in 1628 and was originally called Pejepscot.

26.1 Corner Maine and Pleasant Streets. Turn sharp right onto Maine Street.

IMPORTANT—SIDE TRIP TO MERE POINT WHERE AROUND THE WORLD
AVIATORS MADE FIRST LANDING IN UNITED STATES — Mere Point, a peninsula in Brunswick extending out into Casco Bay, achieved international renown when the American Navy Around the World squadron of airplanes, in 1924, landed in the quiet waters off the point, after making their epoch making globe encircling tour of 28,183 miles. It was their first landing place in the United States after virtually completing their trip. A tablet marks the spot.

ROUTE — Keep right at First Parish Church, mileage 26.5, leaving Route 1, and continue on Main Street, with Bowdoin College on left; 27.9, keep left on tarred road; 33.2, end of road. For Around the World marker, keep straight on for a few hundred yards through private grounds. Return to Brunswick over same route. Re-set speedometer at 26.5, at Route 1, at First Parish Church.

26.6 First fork on right beyond church, Bowdoin College on right, sign Harpswell, bear right on Route 123.

IMPORTANT — Motorists will notice under a window in a nearby dormitory a white tablet. This marks room Longfellow occupied when a student at Bowdoin. A stroll through the college grounds is intensely interesting. The Walker Art Museum is filled with priceless articles and the Hubbard Memorial Library has many valuable exhibits.

27.1 At fork, bear right on Route 123.

33.2 NORTH HARPSWELL. (The town of Harpswell is very largely made up of islands and many of them abound in romance and fascinating history. The principal bit of mainland within its limits is Harpswell Neck on which are the three Harpswells on the present route. In addition the town includes Great, or Sebascodegan, Orr’s, Bailey, Eagle and many other islands. It was first permanently settled in 1720 and its Indian name was Merriconeag. Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, had his official residence in Harpswell, on Eagle Island, which he owned and of which he once said, “We pass the Winter months in Washington; but we LIVE at Eagle Island.” Mrs. Peary and her daughter, Marie Ahnighoto Peary Stafford, the name “Ahnighoto” meaning “Snow Baby” because she has the distinction of having been born farther North than any other white child, still occupy the Eagle Island home in Summer. Mrs. Peary living in Portland in Winter. Harriet Beecher Stowe spent her Summers on Orr’s Island and in her famous story, “The Pearl of Orr’s Island,” gives true but touching account of the life of these people who obtain their livelihood from the sea. The home of the “Pearl” has been visited by thousands of tourists. John Greenleaf Whittier’s widely known poem, “The Dead Ship of Harpswell,” is founded on an old Orr’s Island legend and the scene of it is pointed out. Clara Louise Burnham, another popular writer of a generation ago, spent every Summer on Bailey Island and the scenes of nearly all of her finest stories are laid in Harpswell. Two of the most popular ones are “Dr. Latimer” and “The Opened Shutters.” It is an interesting fact that the shutters of the mill at Basin Point, South Harpswell, around which the latter story is laid, actually did open as described. Ragged Island, which lies within plain view just East of Bailey Island, is declared to be the “Elm Island” of Elijah Kellogg’s popular boy hero, “Lion Ben.” The island has been purchased by the famous American poetress, Edna St. Vincent Millay, also born in Maine, for her Summer home).

35.1 Harpswell Center. (This is the scene of the major part of the activities of Elijah Kellogg’s long and useful life. Kellogg’s stories are still being widely read. His famous oration, “Spartacus to the Gladiators,” is known to almost every boy and girl in school. It was here in his home that Kellogg died, but he is buried in Western Cemetery, Portland, the city of his birth. On the left is the beautiful old Congregational Church, built in 1843, of which he was pastor when he died, while just ahead, on the right, is his old church which is now being preserved as a memorial.)

39.3 Another beautiful coastline view. On the left is Bailey Island. Straight ahead and far out at sea, may be seen Halfway Rock Lighthouse, located on a romantic, storm battered ledge halfway between the entrance of Portland Harbor, to the West, and Seguin Island, at the mouth of the Kennebec River, to the East. Halfway Rock Light is the first to be sighted by transatlantic liners bound into Portland. One of the islands ahead, but somewhat to the right, is Eagle Island. In close proximity to Eagle Island is Jewell’s Island, reputed haunt of Captain Kidd, Dixie Bull and other pirates of earlier days.

63.4 BATH. (The name of the city of Bath is known in every port of the World for it was, for many years, the greatest shipbuilding center in America and one of the greatest anywhere. Here were launched the historic ship William P. Frye, first United States craft to be sunk by Germany in the World War; the battleship Georgia, when built the most formidable fighting craft in the U. S. Navy; Scout Cruiser Chester, then the fastest ship afloat; schooner Wyoming, largest wooden ship; J. Pierpont Morgan’s yacht Corsair, one of the largest and finest pleasure craft in the world. In all, Bath has put out approximately one and one-third million tons of shipping including nearly every type of vessel known to the Atlantic Ocean. Today Bath is still a great shipbuilding city and is constructing U. S. torpedo boat destroyers besides other types of craft. Bath was first visited by George Weymouth in 1605. The Kennebec River has been identified with shipbuilding since 1607 when the Virginia, the first vessel to be constructed in America, was launched at Popham, at the mouth of the river. The city also has another claim to fame in that between it and Woolwich spans the great new Carlton Bridge, carrying both highway and railroad traffic over the Kennebec on that immense thoroughfare, the Atlantic Highway, or Route 1. An illustrious daughter of Bath is Emma Eames, famed prima donna.)

63.4 BATH, Soldiers’ Monument.

NOTE — This is an intensely interesting trip but it has the drawback of a very poor road from Phippsburg to Popham. Good roads feature the remainder of the route. It was at Popham that Sir George Popham planted his colony in 1607 and it remained there for about one year. During a very severe Winter many of the colonists died, including Sir George. The first vessel to be built in the New World, the Virginia, was launched at Popham and made many trips to Europe. The story of this attempted colonization of America makes thrilling reading. Popham is at the mouth of the Kennebec River and just off its ocean-side are Pond Island and Seguin Island, two lighthouse stations with fascinating histories.

SECTION NO. 3 of a Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine, which takes the tourist through the nationally famed Penobscot Bay resort region, to the beautiful Boothbay Harbor and Bristol sections and to historic Pemaquid begins at Carlton Bridge, Bath, where this route ends.

Section No. 3

BATH TO BUCKSPORT AND BANGOR

This section of the Maine Coast Tour is better known than that previously covered because it includes the popular Boothbay Harbor region and the far-famed Western shore of Penobscot Bay from Rockland to Stockton Springs. Route 1, the Atlantic Highway, is followed without deviation between these two latter points.

However, this section of the Tour does take the motorist into some tremendously delightful and interesting territory which always escapes those who follow the regular lanes of travel. Included in this list are Pemaquid, one of the most historic spots in New England and the fascinating Christmas Cove and Friendship sections.

Altogether the more than 200 miles which the route covers offer a variety of attractions which will strongly appeal to all lovers of beauty, history and romance.

KENNEBEC RIVER. (This is one of the great historic waterways of America. At its mouth was established Popham, 1607, sister colony of James town, Virginia, but which was able to exist for only one year. Here, also, was launched the Virginia, first craft to be built by white men in the New World. It was up this river that Benedict Arnold, in 1775, made his famous but ill-fated attempt to capture Quebec, so splendidly described in Roberts' "Arundel." The Plymouth Company in 1628 established on its banks on the site of the present city of Augusta, now the State Capital, one of its earliest trading posts. Fort Western, built in 1754, is located on this identical spot. As previously stated some of the most famous ships of the past century were built at Bath. The river rises in Moosehead Lake in Northern Maine, one of the largest bodies of water wholly within the limits of a single state. Into the Kennebec, just above Bath, flows the Androscoggin River, equally as long and quite as important from an industrial standpoint, the source of which is the great Rangeley Lakes chain of Northwestern Maine. Lewiston, Maine's second largest city, and Auburn, on the opposite bank, are on this latter river.)

1.0 WOOLWICH. (This town is directly across the Kennebec from Bath. Its greatest claim to fame is the fact that it is the birthplace of Sir William Phips, 1650, the first native born American to be Knighted by England and, also, the first Royal Governor of Massachusetts Colony, which included much of the present coastline of Maine. He achieved fame and fortune by locating a Spanish treasure ship in the Bahama Islands from which he salvaged $1,135,000 of gold, silver and jewels which had been under water for over 50 years. Phip's share was about $70,000, a great fortune in those days. The expedition was financed by English noblemen.)

10.3 WISCASSET. (This is another of Maine’s famous towns and is especially noted for its wonderful Colonial homes. Formerly part of the ancient town of Pownalborough the settlement of which was commenced in 1663. One of the romantic incidents in the history of America is associated with Wiscasset. A plan was arranged to save Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, from being beheaded during the French Revolution in 1793. Stephen Clough, a Wiscasset sea captain, working with friends of the Queen in France, were to smuggle her out of prison and onto Captain Clough’s ship and she was to be brought to his home town. The plot was discovered and she was immediately guillotined. However, many of her personal belongings had previously been placed on the vessel and these Captain Clough brought to Wiscasset and several are still in existence. A house had been fitted up for the Queen and this still stands today across the harbor of Wiscasset in the town of Edgecomb and is still known as the Marie Antoinette House. When the great Tallyrand and Louis Philippe, later King of France, were compelled to flee from France, it was to Wiscasset that they came for refuge. Wiscasset has been the port of departure and return of Lieut. Commander Donald B. MacMillan’s famed Arctic expeditions. The Governor Smith House is a fine example of charming Colonial architecture.)

Route No. 1, one mile east of Wiscasset, turn right onto Route 27, turn right at soldier’s monument at Boothbay Center for Trevett and Sawyer’s Island. Turn first left at Boothbay Harbor for Back Narrows, East Boothbay and Ocean Point. Trevett and Sawyer’s Islands are noted for their scenic beauty, located on the east side of Sheepscott Bay, where many fine summer homes are located on the many islands and shores. This region also has many fine fresh water ponds where boating and fishing may be enjoyed. Back Narrows is famous for its rustic location and has one of the finest swimming pools in New England. East Boothbay has ever been noted for its shipyards and here anyone with a love of the sea and boats, will always find something of interest in this typical Maine coast village. Linekin and Ocean Point, located on the east side of Linekin Bay and the ocean, is, with its scores of summer homes, one of the beauty spots of the State of Maine.

22.9 BOOTHBAY HARBOR. (One of Maine's greatest yachting centers, and the heart of a region famous as "the most broken coast line in the world." Blue water here invades one's very door-yard, and one lives neighbor with the ocean. Salt arms of the sea reach in and rock headlands reach out, to make a sea and shore combination which many travelled people say has not its match the world around. Boothbay Harbor is historical; this country of the pointed firs has Indian lore on every trail. From its hills men watched the great sea-fight between the Boxer and the Enterprise. It is rich in traditions, which it has not lost; it is quaint, yet modern, its hotels and stores are abreast of the times; golfers find a sporty course in a perfect setting. There are schools of art, of painting, of the drama, of physical education, conducted by men eminent in their respective professions; and there are retreats for those who want merely to bask and dream. There are deep-sea fishermen who know how to put their clients "on the grounds" where fish abound; fresh-water fishing is close at hand. There are the trails grown up with birch and spruce for those who love the woods; there are horses to be had for those who enjoy riding; launches, cabin cruisers, ply between the many islands and over the summer seas. Here one may feel ocean's magic touch, "recapture, that first fine careless rapture" which these rugged natural beauties yield; and another interesting feature is that these woodland intimacies, these blue water horizons are only a step away from Boothbay Harbor itself — the business and social centre of a summer population of over 20,000 people.)

25.1 SOUTHPORT. One of the most beautiful islands that dot the Maine Coast; it is six miles long and three miles at its widest part. It is centrally located in this well known Boothbay Region and connected by bridge and good motor roads to the mainland. Follow Route 27 through the Village and along the winding shores of Boothbay Harbor about 2 miles to this beauty spot, with its rough and rugged shoreline merging into the deep pine and spruce growth which covers the island.

Entering Southport over the bridge, one follows Route 27 through beautiful woods and past many coves and inlets which afford a lovely view of the water and distant islands to West Southport with Post Office on right, and continues down the island to Newagen, which is the southern extremity. This is one of the oldest settlements on the Coast of Maine, antedating the Plymouth Colony.

There are a number of hotels and Inns of the better class on the island which enable the tourist to remain over night, or a few days to enjoy the scenic beauty of this spot or one of the many boating or deep-sea fishing trips which may be taken.

Motorists in this vicinity should not fail to include Southport in this trip as it is one of the most attractive parts of the Boothbay Region.

SIDE TRIP TO DAMARISCOTTA MILLS:

One of the most quaint and Historical villages in Maine is Damariscotta Mills which is reached by turning left before crossing the bridge at Newcastle. It is about two miles to Damariscotta Mills on Route 215. One of nature’s wonders is Elwive run at the Mills. Each season they come up the river by the thousands and this spectacle draws many visitors to the Mills to see it. Also the first Catholic Church in New England was established in this section, and thousands of Tourists of that Faith visit the old Church which is still standing yearly. Damariscotta Mills is really a part of Nobleboro which is situated on the main highway whereas the Mills are a little off Route 1. The History of all four places, Newcastle, Damariscotta, Damariscotta Mills and Nobleboro is very closely connected, all four Towns having a perfect right to claim a part of this distinctive History. Damariscotta Lake may be seen on this side trip which is another of Maine’s beautiful scenic attractions. Settled in 1640 and Incorporated in 1787 and named for Arthur Noble one of the first settlers, the combined towns of Nobleboro and Damariscotta Mills may well take their place in the Historical interest of the Maine Coast.

45.3 DAMARISCOTTA. (Settled about 1640 and originally a part of Nobleborough, Home of Captain William Vaughan, who induced the Colonies to organize the successful expedition against Louisburg which was led by Sir William Pepperell. Site of the remarkable oyster shell heaps the origin of which are of the deepest interest to historians and scientists and which evidently date back to prehistoric times. In Damariscotta was established the first permanent Catholic church in Maine and the second in New England. To it came Cheverus, afterwards the distinguished Cardinal Cheverus, Archbishop of Bordeaux. He first preached in one of the Irish settler’s barns and later a store was fitted up for a church. Finally, in 1807, St. Patrick’s Church was dedicated and is still a revered shrine for all followers of that faith. Damariscotta and Newcastle are both at the head of one of the long bays extending in from the ocean which feature this section of the Maine coast.)

78.1 PEMAQUID. (This is easily one of the outstanding spots of historic interest in New England as well as one of the earliest settled in America. Like Monhegan Island, directly off the coast at this point, Pemaquid was a flourishing Summer rendezvous for fishermen from Europe long before the idea of establishing a colony in the New World was definitely attempted. The restored tower of Fort William Henry marks the site of the original settlement and not far distant is the old cemetery where are graves dating back for nearly 300 years. Between the cemetery and the fort was located the old town, once so prosperous, and if one should dig around on the point today one would find the remains of old paved streets and of old buildings. The settlement had a trying existence. It was constantly harassed by Indians and its people killed and its homes burned. In 1678, when Sir Edmund Andros was appointed Governor of New York and Sagadahoc, he erected a strong fort on the spot which he called Fort Charles and which replaced one built in 1631 and destroyed in King Phillip's War. In 1687 when Andros was also made Governor of New England he visited Pemaquid on his way to Castine to bombard the settlement there. Baron Castin was so incensed by this act that he incited a reprissal attack on Pemquid with the result that Indians surrounded it and massacred the greater part of the inhabitants. It was nearly 30 years before colonists returned to the spot. In 1692 Sir William Phips, then Royal Governor of Massachusetts, determined to build an impregnable stronghold at Pemaquid and coming from Boston with 450 men he personally superintended its construction. This new stronghold was Fort William Henry and cost approximately $100,000. Again, in 1697, Castin sought vengeance on the Post and under the leadership of de Iberville, with three armed vessels, two companies of French soldiers and 250 Tarratine Indians in canoes, the stronghold was captured and the fort destroyed. It was now 20 years before another attempt was made to settle the spot. This time another fort was built and named Fort Frederick and this stood until the American Revolution when the residents fearing it would fall into the hands of the British, tore it down. Finally, during the war of 1812 a British frigate visited Pemaquid but the courageous residents fired at the crew as they were about to land and the latter retreated.

It was at Pemquaid that Sir William Phips' parents landed when they came to the New World from England, and then later moved to Woolwich where their distinguished son was born. Today the old fort at Pemaquid is a State Park and just outside the reservation is the Old Fort House, probably built at least 200 years ago, and still owned by descendants of the original family. But foreign foes were not all of Pemaquid's troubles. Its hardy colonists had to defend themselves against the raids of pirates who infested the Maine coast during its early days. One of these was the famous Dixie Bull whose favorite pastime was to sneak into the harbor, get behind an island lying just off the little settlement and bombard the latter from behind one of the island's sheltering points. When he had driven the settlers back he would come ashore and make off with whatever he found there that he wanted. Today this little island is the Summer home of Gene Tunney, famous former American heavyweight boxing champion. Another picturesque and very delightful spot in Bristol is New Harbor, a fishing community directly on the road to Pemaquid.

One of the quaintest old towns in New England, originally named Broad Bay, Waldoboro was settled in 1748 by German emigrants who were encouraged to come here by Samuel Waldo for whom it is named. Here may be found the first Lutheran Church in Maine, a structure now 160 years old. Ten miles from the ocean on tidal water, the town was once a great shipbuilding center. The first three masted schooner ever built, the “American Eagle,” was launched here in 1865 by Joseph Clark. The “Governor Ames,” the first five masted schooner, was built and launched here in 1888 by Leavitt Storer. The old ship yards and wharves may be seen on both banks of the river.

THOMASTON. (One man has made this beautiful old town known all over the United States. This was General Henry Knox, Washington's loyal friend at Valley Forge, through the American Revolution and until his death, his Chief of Staff and later the first Secretary of War of the United States under the Father of His Country. Today his remains rest in the village cemetery and his great mansion, Montpelier, has been restored.
as a lasting memorial to his outstanding service and devotion to his country. General Knox married Lucy Fluker, granddaughter of General Waldo, who was the original owner of all of the country in this section, and became heir to his vast estate. She was a brilliant woman and a true friend of Mrs. Washington. Among their host of distinguished guests at Thomaston were Tallyrand and the future King of France, Louis Philippe. Another building of great historic interest is the North Parish Meeting House, located beside Montpelier. This was erected in 1796 by public subscription and it was here that General Knox worshipped. The bell in it was cast by Paul Revere. The settlement of the town was commenced about 1719 but it suffered greatly from Indian raids. It has today some of the finest examples of Colonial homes in Maine. The Way-

MONHEGAN ISLAND. Famous Monhegan Island, several miles out at sea is a popular artists' colony, but is best known as one of the first points on the North American coast to be a rendezvous for fishing fleets from the Old World. Scores of these vessels made the island their headquarters during the Summer seasons, as early as 1605; Captain John Smith made it his base during the many weeks he was on the Maine Coast in 1614. Between Monhegan and Pemaquid, was fought the famous engagement between the American warship Enterprise and the British warship Boxer in September, 1814. Both Captains were killed in the bloody engagement and both lie buried side by side, in the old Eastern Cemetery at Portland. They were given a great public funeral by that city. Undoubtedly every explorer who visited America by the Northern route paid a visit to this "lonely sentinel of the sea."

The warwhoops of the Wawenocks and Tarratines no longer resound in the highways and byways of the city which was once known as East Thomaston or "The Shore Village," but Indian names are still adhered to by the natives, as seen in the case of Chickawankie Lake, the beautiful body of water nesting at the foot of picturesque Rockville, and one of Rockland's sources of water supply.

harbor which has been called "The Bay of Naples," and as a background she provided a series of lofty hills known in olden times as Mt. Bettox, now Dodges Mountain.

The harbor no longer carries its 200 sail of vessels, for sail craft have had their day, and in their place have come huge barges, drawn by ocean-going tugs, carrying vast cargoes up river or on the long haul down the coast. Just outside the harbor stretches the mile-long Naval Trial Course where practically all of the ships built on the Atlantic Coast have their standardization tests. From the piazzas of many summer resorts and cottages every movement of the speedy ships is visible as they go through their paces.

Varied industries help supplement Rockland's prosperity as a trading center for 30,000 Knox, Lincoln and Waldo county residents. The manufacture of lime has long been one of the city's mainstays, while in the suburbs stands "New England's Own and Only Cement Mill." Several sardine factories are busy throughout the summer season and the port does a very extensive general fish business. Rockland is the largest shipping port for lobsters on the Atlantic Coast. The Chamber of Commerce is angling for new factories, with reasonably good prospects. A city with a tidy population, a wealth of scenic attractions, and citizens of a cosmopolitan but thrifty character — that is the story of Rockland in a nutshell.

It sent forth to the legitimate stage two very famous actresses — the beautiful Maxine Elliott, who became a favorite with royalty; and her sister, Gertrude Elliott, who became Lady Forbes-Robertson. It sent forth Major General Hiram G. Berry, a Civil War hero, slain at Chancellorsville; and Major General Herbert M. Lord, who became Director of the Bureau of the Budget. It also contributed to the world of literature the internationally famous poet, Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Sightseers always view the limerock quarries, largest in the world.

ROCKPORT. Approximately 87 miles east of Portland on Route 1 lies Rockport, one of Maine's most charming seaport towns, while across Penobscot Bay is the Dark Harbor colony of Islesboro and neighboring islands, and on the line between Rockport and Rockland is the Samoset Hotel, the famous resort at Rockland Breakwater. Thus, Rockport is located in the center of one of Maine's great summer residential sections. Among these being Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Mary Louise Bok, Mrs. Charles W. Henry, Mrs. A. H. Chatfield, T. Charlton Henry, John Gribbel, C. Wolcott Henry, Donald Dodge and William Chatfield. It was her love of beauty that inspired Mrs. Bok to restore Rockport's waterfront to its original beauty. Here many acres of shore property were transformed into an area of graded lawns dotted with native trees and threaded with gravel walks. Adjoining this on the west side is Amesbury Hill, where minerologists are much interested in the excavation of a very remarkable rock formation, found where the work on an alpine garden now is in progress. A number of rocks of great interest are dug out from there that reveal that volcanic action has taken place. Amesbury Hill has outside of its wonderful views also something for tree lovers, namely the largest and oldest of the only two hemlock spruce (Tsuga Canadensis compacta) in existence. This tree, which is cone shaped, is eight feet in height and the same in diameter and is estimated by the late Professor.

Rockport affords nearly everything that might be desired from a recreational standpoint. Its harbor affords excellent opportunity for small boating, while outside Penobscot Bay presents a yachting course that is not excelled on the Atlantic Coast. Inland are countless streams and lakes that offer good fishing. Mountain ranges with elevation up to 1500 feet and miles of wilderness trails for those who care for tramping. Megunticook Golf Club offers an 18 hole well kept course, several tennis courts and a spacious club house.

Excellent Hotels, Camps and Stores where moderate prices prevail. Be sure to call at the M. C. T. A. Information Bureau for complete information about what to see and where to stay.

Salt Water Fishing is particularly good along this section of the coast — Just an hour’s cruise from Camden to the deep sea fishing grounds. Boats available for pleasure or business. Many veteran fishermen make their homes here.

A cozy Yacht Club here — every facility for the convenience of the yachtsmen.

On the shores of this beautiful lake are many cottages to be rented — for a week, month or season. Come! Enjoy Summer here. Trout, Salmon, Perch, Pickerel and Black Bass are caught in abundance — fly casting and trolling.

169.4 CAMDEN. (One of the most beautiful summer resorts in America, it has the unique combination of striking coast line, backed by spectacular mountains and some of the most charming lakes in Maine. It is the Summer home of a very notable group of musical celebrities, including Josef Hoffman, pianist. Here again Mrs. Bok has shown her great civic interest by developing at tremendous cost one of the most beautiful park and garden centers of any place in the United States. This is just a few steps off, on right, the main route through the town and should not be missed. The Public Library is its center.

Other Camden attractions are its up to date stores, garages, banks and varied business establishments. It has an excellent hospital, an enterprising weekly newspaper, and numerous churches. It is located directly on the Atlantic Highway, Route No. 1, and is only 88 miles from Portland and 195 miles from Boston over the very finest of roads. It has motor buses from distant and local points and nearby railroad and airplane services from all sections. It has the great advantage of being very accessible but so located as to be free from the obnoxious features so often found in resort centers. Its climate is superb, possessing the rare combination of sea and mountain air. Its municipal drinking water has been declared by chemists to be the purest supplied to any Summer resort.

Camden is unique in that it offers in a single community the delights of the ocean, the thrill of a mountain region and the unique pleasures of a lake district.

SUMMER HOME OF WORLD CELEBRITIES
ISLESBORO. See page 64. No side trip offered by the tour is better worth the time and comparatively small expense to the motorists than that which takes him to Islesboro. Leaving Route 1 at Lincolnville Beach he is conveyed by ferry across picturesque Penobscot Bay to this 12 mile long island, which has 43 miles of improved highway traversing every section of this, one of Maine’s beauty spots.

Islesboro has recently been made easily accessible by establishment of the Islesboro-Lincolnville ferry service. Motorists may drive their cars aboard a commodious boat commanded by courteous officers, at Lincolnville Beach and, without leaving their comfortable seats, view the beauties of the bay crossing during the twenty minutes required to bring them to Islesboro.

Here they disembark and come at once to one of Islesboro’s most attractive landmarks, Grindle’s Point Lighthouse, the old white tower of which marks the point of land on which the ferry terminal stands. Erected in 1850, for more than eighty years this light served as a beacon to numerous ships passing up and down Penobscot Bay and river, to and from the sea. It was discontinued by the government about two years ago since, with the falling off of shipping it was deemed no longer necessary, and has been purchased by Islesboro to be preserved as a historic landmark.

Approach to Islesboro through Penobscot Bay has been likened by travelers to scenes in the Swiss mountain country. The bay, dotted with dozens of islands, of which Islesboro is the largest; surrounded by the Camden Hills on the west, with Blue Hill looming in the distance in the east, gives those who have seen both an impression of those famed hills and lakes in the little Republic across the Atlantic. All this varied scenery can be seen from high points on Islesboro.

A nine-hole golf course, with club house complete, offers attraction to those who enjoy the sport. Its name, Tarratine, is that of a tribe of Indians, who, before Islesboro dropped the name Islesborough Plantation and became Islesboro, sailed their canoes on Penobscot Bay waters, made their camp fires on Islesboro’s shores.

180.5 NORTHPORT. (Another beautiful Penobscot Bay resort and celebrated as a religious camp ground.)

188.2 BELFAST. (A fine old city at the head of Penobscot Bay. It was settled by Scotch-Irish from Londonderry, New Hampshire, in 1770, and was named for Belfast, Ireland.

In 1779 the British attacked the town and drove the settlers away and it was 1784 before another attempt was made to re-establish it. It was again invested by the British in 1815.

Belfast has given to the state two Governors, the Honorable Hugh J. Anderson, 1843–46, and the Honorable William G. Crosby, 1853–58.

It is famed for its beautiful old homes, erected by retired sea captains, and honorbuilt by Yankee workmen.

Outstanding among these is the present home of Belfast’s first citizen, Admiral William V.

BANGOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

229.1 BANGOR. Corner Main, Hammond and State Streets. Known as the “Queen City” of Maine, it well deserves the title because it is one of the most beautifully located large cities in Maine, is a great commercial and financial center and is the gateway to Eastern Maine and the rich agricultural County of Aroostook, and Northern Maine. Bangor has many other claims to fame. It is the mecca of thousands of sportsmen bound on fishing and hunting trips into the Maine woods; within its limits is the World renowned “Bangor Salmon Pool,” of the Penobscot River, where the first great fish caught each year is sent to the President of the United States; it is the center of the lumber industry in Maine, and about 50 years ago was the World’s greatest lumber market. Being the trading center for an area extending for hundreds of miles about it, it has stores, railroad, air and boat services, hotels, theatres, newspapers, banks and other business enterprises of a size that would do credit to a community many times its size. It is also the gateway to Mount Desert Island and to the vast Moosehead Lake region.

In a near-by suburb is famed University of Maine, whose college song Rudy Vallee has made known in every civilized country of the Globe. Many famous people have lived in Bangor including Hannibal Hamlin, Vice-President with Lincoln during his first term. He is buried at Bangor.

Bangor has the outstanding advantage of being a city which can be made a center from which to make one day or longer trips to many of Maine's best known resort sections. It is famed for its hospitality to strangers. Bangor has the unique distinction of having been named for a hymn, and it was one of the earliest settled spots in New England history. The mast of the ill-fated Battleship Maine, sunk in Havana Harbor, and the cause of the Spanish-American War, is on this route into Bangor, which is over Main Street. SECTION No. 4 of a Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine which takes the tourist along the beautiful and romantic, but little known coastline between Bucksport and Ellsworth, and which includes historic Castine, begins where this route ends.

BUCKSPORT TO ELLSWORTH

This section of the Maine Coast Tour is entirely off the beaten path. While the regular route between Bucksport and Ellsworth is only 18 miles in length, this one is over four times longer — but it is a hundred times more beautiful and interesting. It also takes one to Castine, one of the most romantic and historic towns in America.

Not many years ago this route was almost impassable at times because of poor road conditions. Now, however, all this is changed and the progressive towns through which it goes have built fine modern highways, nearly all of which are dustless, and which closely follow the sea-coast, with wonderful views from lofty elevations at many points along the way.

It is easily one of the most fascinating motor trips that can be taken anywhere.

During the war of 1812, it was again captured by the British and occupied by them for nearly a year. Richelieu and Mazarin of France intended Castine to be the great French metropolis of the New World. Many World leaders are identified with the history of Castine. Here Paul Revere, fought the French, here the renowned Sir John Moore, whose memory will always be kept alive by the poem, "The Burial of Sir John Moore," had his first experience in battle; here General Peleg Wadsworth, famed ancestor of Longfellow, made his thrilling escape from old Fort George, still standing on the highest point of land in the town; to Castine came nearly all of the great men who made history for America in its early days of colonization and exploration; here on every hand is romance and thrilling adventure much of which is made available to the tourist by the great number of tablets marking the large number of historic spots in the town. All of these should be carefully read by the visitor for it is possible to mention only a few of the highlights in this short summary. On Route 175 Write to Fred G. Sargent, Prop.

DEER ISLE. (Incorporated 1789) — reached by crossing Eggemoggin Reach at Sargentville over the new Deer Isle-Sedgwick Toll Bridge, the first town entered in what was originally the Deer Island group district composed now of Deer Isle, Stonington and Isle au Haut. This district, because of its enchanting scenery, innumerable coves and beaches, proximity to good fishing, clams, lobsters and other sea products within reach of the very doors of the first settlers, tempted them to settle this region as early as 1760, it being the most advantageous stopping place for immigrants spreading Eastward of the Kennebec.

Deer Isle first attracted the outside world through the universal publicity given to the expertise of its navigators who sailed to every quarter of the globe and, as a consequence, was canvassed for the first crew that ever manned a contender in the famous international races for the American Cup.

A most attractive feature of this island territory is the accommodations afforded the visitor in the many hotels and summer resorts along its rugged shores and sandy beaches. Here may always be found an abundance of fresh sea food direct from local waters, or the visitor may participate in the thrill of "deep-sea" fishing and thus catch his own dinner.

Next to the wonders of the sea visitors marvel at the extensive granite formation at the southern area of the island. Because of this fact a granite industry has been developed to such an extent as to give rapid rise to the building of the town of Stonington, incorporated, February, 1897.)
STONINGTON. (This town has a wonderful harbor bounded on the south by a massive elevation of granite called Crotch Island. Much time may be passed on Crotch Island where several hours can be well spent in seeing the world's two greatest granite quarries handle 100-ton blocks of granite and swing them through the air by gigantic derricks as easily as a milk maid swings her pail. Not only is granite sawed here, like wood with the largest gangsaw in the world, but, as a sample of some of its granite carving and chiseling, anyone happening in Tarrytown, N. Y., may see the largest fountain bowl in existence, on the John D. Rockefeller estate, cut from one block of granite. This is nearly 21 feet across, and is in the shape of a giant wash basin.

A distinctive feature of the town of Stonington is its high hemispherical granite backing from which elevation, one of the picturesque spots along the Maine coast, as one looks southward, is the miniature mountain peak across the islet studded water, one of Explorer Champlain's early landmarks, Isle au Haut, another summer resort reached by mail boat from Stonington. Stonington has all of the essential modern conveniences of a city, including fine dustless highways over which glide more automobiles per capita than in any other section of the State, electric lights and power, telephones, excellent steamboat and ferry facilities, frequent mails, an athletic field, golf course, tennis courts and country club. Her people, descendants of a hardy seafaring race, are known for their graciousness and hospitality.)

82.5 ELLSWORTH. (3,577 pop.). 26 miles from Bangor at the junction of U. S. 1 and Maine 3, is the only city in Hancock County and is the county seat. Its sections, east and west separated by the Union River, are connected by a concrete bridge. Ellsworth is the trading center for the county, which includes Acadia National Park on Mount Desert Island. First settled in 1763 and called New Bowdoin for Governor Bowdoin of Massachusetts, it was incorporated as a city February 6, 1869, and named for Oliver Ellsworth, one of the delegates to the National Constitutional Convention. The first inhabitants of its site were Indians of Algonkian stock.

Although razed by a destructive fire in 1933 the city has recovered and new buildings replace many of the old ones. The new courthouse is one of the finest in the State, and Ellsworth now has a new post office completed July, 1936. Municipal government is of the city manager-council form. There are five churches.

Within 25 miles of Ellsworth is Acadia (Lafayette) National Park, first national park east of the Mississippi and the only one on the Atlantic seaboard.

The newly organized Ellsworth Yacht Club is situated at Contention Cove, in Surry, Maine, on Patten's Bay about five miles from Ellsworth. The clubhouse is located in an attractive spot with a fine view of the water and the Mount Desert hills. The harbor affords good anchorage and all visiting yachtsmen are welcome to use the club landing.

SECTION NO. 5 of A Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine, which takes the tourist on an inspiring trip around Mount Desert Island, including Acadia National Park, the Cadillac Mountain drive, Bar Harbor, Northeast Harbor, Seal Harbor, and Southwest Harbor, begins where this route ends.

ELLSWORTH TO MOUNT DESERT ISLAND
This section of the Maine Coast Tour takes the motorist from Ellsworth on a complete trip around Mount Desert Island, one of America’s most beautiful and spectacular regions. In it is included the remarkable ride to the top of Cadillac Mountain, the highest point of land on the Atlantic Coast North of Brazil, South America. It also includes a comprehensive trip through wonderful Acadia National Park. The motorist is brought back to Ellsworth to continue his tour along the romantic coast of Eastern Maine.

Mileage

MOUNT DESERT ISLAND. (This island is a scenic wonderland of ocean, lakes and mountains and it has been declared by noted travelers to be one of the World's outstanding beauty spots. It is also said that with the exception of Rio de Janeiro, South America, there is no place on the Atlantic Coast of the Western Hemisphere that possesses a similar type of scenery. Having an area of about 100 square miles, it is one of the largest islands on the Atlantic seacoast. It is one of the very few great insular bodies to be connected with the mainland by a bridge. Its crowning glory is the vast area which comprises Acadia National Park and which will be described later. There is every reason to assume that the island was first sighted by white men when Leif Erick-son, the Norseman, is believed to have visited the Maine coast about the year 1000. However, until more complete proof is brought to light it will be John Cabot, the Englishman, who will be given the credit when he discovered that America was a continent in 1498, and, of course, no one can sail along the Maine Coast and keep within sight of it without passing Mount Desert. During the next 100 years several famous explorers crossed the Atlantic by the Northern route and there is every reason to believe that a majority of them entered some of the fine harbors which are a part of the island's coastline. It remained, however, for the great Champlain to direct attention to the island. This was in 1604 when as a member of the ill-fated Sieur de Monts Colony in the St. Croix River at Calais, he made a voyage of exploration along the Maine Coast. It was he who named the island "L'Isle des Monts Desert," or Mount Desert, because of its barren mountains. The Journal of Champlain's Voyages published in Paris in 1613 described it and created much interest in it. As a result of Champlain's glowing description, Madam de Gurcherville, a Lady of Honor to the Queen of France, organized a missionary colony to promote the Catholic Faith in the New World. This was established on Fernald's Point, at Southwest Harbor, in 1613, and was the first of its kind in the New World, and here was erected the first Catholic Cross in the United States. Everything went along exceptionally well with the colony until it was discovered by an English ship sent out from Jamestown, Virginia, in the name of King James, to expel intruders on what he claimed as his domain. The little settlement on Mount Desert was discovered; after a battle the French had to surrender and the spot was given by Louis XIV to Cadillac, founder of Detroit, and over a century later his granddaughter, Marie de Cadillac established her claim to a large part of it, through the influence of her friend, Lafayette, and she and her husband moved to what is now Hull's Cove. They lived their entire life there and are buried there.

Mount Desert Island, as well as all of Maine as far West as the Penobscot River, was a part of the original domain of French Acadia, immortalized by Longfellow, and it is from this fact that the National Park gets its name. In 1713 the whole of Acadia was taken over by the British and about 1761 the first permanent settlement on the island was established at what is now Somesville (Mount Desert Post Office), in the town of Mount Desert. There are four towns on the island, Bar Harbor, internationally famed resort; Mount Desert, in which are the beautiful and exclusive summer colonies of Northeast Harbor and Seal Harbor; interesting Southwest Harbor and Tremont.

A system of superb dustless highways covers all of the scenic section of the Island and visitors may spend days in this wonderful spot constantly seeing something new and something beautiful or historic.

9.4 Fork of two concrete highways. IMPORTANT — Right is No. 198 direct to Northeast Harbor. The beginning of the same road is also numbered Route 102 and leads direct to Southwest Harbor. The third is the continuation of Route 3 and goes to Bar Harbor. In this tour of the island the left fork is used but motorists may easily reverse the route and come around to Bar Harbor last.

IMPORTANT — This is a winding road of excellent width, perfectly safe and can be negotiated by any motor car in high gear. Drive carefully, however. The views from this road as one climbs upward are superb. Really more opportunity to enjoy them is possible on the trip down the mountain. This has been declared to be the most wonderful scenic roadway to be found anywhere.

24.9 SUMMIT OF CADILLAC MOUNTAIN. (World travelers declare the panorama from the top of this mountain to be one of the finest in all the world. Its only rival in the Western Hemisphere is the view from one of the mountains in the Bay of Rio de Janeiro, South America. Cadillac Mountain is the highest elevation on the Atlantic seaboard North of Brazil. Eastward for miles may be seen the coastline and islands of Eastern Maine. In the foreground, looking toward the mainland, is Bar Harbor and the other towns in the vicinity, together with superb Frenchman's Bay, while to the Westward is another long stretch of coastline, with the Camden Mountains and the islands of Penobscot Bay in the background. A National Park official is almost always on duty at the summit to point out the different places which may be seen from it. There is a wonderful walk around the summit which should not be missed.)

ACADIA NATIONAL PARK. (Cadillac Mountain is within the limits of Acadia National Park, the only National Park on the Atlantic seaboard, and the first to be established East of the Mississippi River. It comprises about 15,000 acres, with several thousand additional acres held in trust for future expansion of this great scenic playground, but many of the latter are even now open to the public, although not publicly owned. It is the only park comprising ocean, lake, and mountain scenery. There are many superb lakes within its boundaries and many mountains. Across the bay on the mainland, at Schoodic Point, is located another section of the park containing about 1500 acres. The park is made available to motorists through a network of superb highways, the great majority of which cannot be covered in this Tour. There are many miles of bridle paths and almost numberless trails for the hiker. One of the remarkable features of the Park is the Sieur de Monts Spring. Visitors are urged to ask for a free booklet on the park at the National Park Service house on the top of Cadillac Mountain at the Park Service head office in Bar Harbor, and at the Sieur de Monts Spring House. It contains a wealth of information of tremendous interest, as well as pictures.)

It is a great yachting center and lists the largest number of sailboats on the Maine Coast. It has golf and tennis clubs, a swimming pool, riding stables, four high class hotels, and it is the largest business center in the town of Mount Desert. Its shops are famed for their exclusive wares. The harbor is completely landlocked and safe in all weather. SIDE TRIP TO SOUTHWEST HARBOR. This is a beautiful ride to another delightful section of Mount Desert Island. In due course of time it will be possible to go to Southwest Harbor and continue back along the Western shore of the island to the bridge connecting Mount Desert with the mainland. At the present time, however, the road is improved only as far as Southwest Harbor, Manset, McKinley and Tremont. Beyond West Tremont the road is unimproved. When completed this will be another beautiful ride. The trip to Southwest Harbor is well worth taking for it was at Fernald's Point, as previously told, that the first Catholic Cross in the United States was erected and the missionary colony of Madam de Gurcherville was established and later destroyed by the English.

ROUTE — At fork at sign "Somesville and Southwest," turn left onto Route 102 at mileage 55.4, 55.7, SOMESVILLE (Mount Desert Post Office), keep straight through 57.7, Echo Lake on right. 61.7, SOUTHWEST HARBOR. SECTION NO. 6 of a Motor Tour of the Coast of Maine, and the final section, takes on through the remarkably historic and most unusual Washington County territory stretching East from Mount Desert Island to the Canadian boundary at New Brunswick and includes a trip to the Summer home of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Section No. 6

ELLSWORTH TO UNITED STATES — CANADA BOUNDARY AT CALAIS

Direct route, Ellsworth to Calais, 127 miles. This is the final section of the Maine Coast Tour and for those who would turn back at this point with the thought that they have seen about everything that is worth while, let us hasten to correct that impression at once.

There is a distinct difference from here on. The Canadian influence begins to be felt; the motorist is getting farther from the great centers of population and the people are less affected by the modern trends. The Tour becomes even more interesting if that is possible, with a continuation of the beautiful scenery through which the motorist has passed, but of a different type, while the historic and romantic features are outstanding and include not only the Summer home and the early haunts of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, but Machias, where the first naval battle of the United States was fought; St. Croix Island, where the first settlement North of Florida was made by Champlain and De Monts; Jonesport, the renowned home of "Seth Parker"; the great blueberry plains; the heart of the sardine industry; the wonderful tides of Passamaquoddy Bay where the United States is building its great tidal dam for the development of electric power, the Perry Indian Reservation and a host of other intensely thrilling and interesting spots.

If you do not continue to the end of the Tour we feel sure you will really miss a great deal which you will agree, after seeing it, equals the features which you have enjoyed from this point West.

105.2 JONESBORO. (Settled 1763. Named for John C. Jones, one of its original proprietors. The motorist is now entering another section of the Maine seacoast where some of the most thrilling events of early American history took place. Just East of the river which flows through this little village may be seen in a field, back of a house on the right at about 105.7 speedometer mileage, a small cemetery with a fairly conspicuous monument in its center. This monument marks the grave of a woman who performed one of the most heroic acts in the history of Maine. Hannah Weston, then only 17 years old, collected through the scattered frontier community, 40 lbs. of powder and lead and then with her young sister-in-law, Rebecca Weston, carried the heavy load through an almost trackless wilderness to Machias, many miles distant, facing dangers of foe and wild animals. They undertook this desperate exploit in order to give Captain Jeremiah O’Brien and his daring crew the necessary ammunition with which to fight the first naval engagement in which the United States participated. The story of the battle is told under Machias.)

112.9 MACHIAS. (One of America’s most historic towns, as well as the territory surrounding it. Just below Machias was fought in June, 1775, the first Naval engagement between the present United States and a foreign foe. James Fenimore Cooper, noted author, called it “The Lexington of the Seas.” The British armed schooner Margaretta had brought to Machias two sloops to load lumber to use in building British barracks at Boston to defend British troops from the American Army. The idea did not please the Machias patriots and under the command of the heroic Jeremiah O’Brien, whose name is now linked with John Paul Jones, Admiral Preble and other early American naval heroes, in the hastily armed sloop Unity, they gave battle to the British warship, captured her and won America’s first naval victory. Several were killed, including the captain of the British ship. The victims were brought to Burnham Tavern in Machias, still standing and open to the public, where they were cared for. The complete story of the event is a thrilling one. The first Liberty Pole in America was raised in Machias and later when the British sent an expedition under Sir George Collier to re-capture the Margareta and punish the Machias patriots for their act, it was also defeated in its purpose by the townpeople in a lively engagement. As early as 1633 a trading post was established at Machias and it had a stormy and bloody career. Residents of Scarborough, adjoining Portland, settled the town. Another outstanding patriot in all of its Revolutionary War events was Benjamin Foster, whose log cabin at East Machias was the most Eastern habitation in the United States. The famous Foster Rubicon at Machias received its name from him. Tablets mark a number of the interesting spots in and around the town and these should be read to get details of the thrilling events which they commemorate. After a tour about the town re-set speedometer at 112.9 At fork with tri-angular park and new concrete bridge ahead, turn right.

113.1 Cemetery in which Captain O'Brien is buried, on left.

113.2 Site of home of Captain O'Brien.

113.3 Site of Foster Rubicon. Be sure to read tablet on left, on small bridge, over which highway passes.

115.5 Bear right.

116.6 MACHIASPORT. (Formerly a part of Machias and actual scene of the Battle of Machias. Made a separate town in 1826. A Maine coast village romantically situated.)

Continue through village and curve right up hill.

117.4 At sign Fort O'Brien, on left, turn sharp left into State Park comprising historic old reservation and all that remains of the old fort. A sign in center of reservation gives some of its history. Superb view of bay where Battle of Machias was fought, and of surrounding seacoast.

117.6 Return to main road and turn sharp right. Return to 118.4 MACHIASPORT. Continue through main street of town.

119.1 At fork, bear right and cross old wooden bridge over the head of Machias Bay.

119.9 Cross railroad at Machiasport station.

120.2 Turn right onto Route 1.

121.5 EAST MACHIAS. (Set off from Machias in 1826.)

121.8 Cross railroad and bridge over river and immediately turn sharp left following Route 1. Tablet in front of large white church ahead, before turning left, marks site of Benjamin Foster's cabin, at that time most Eastern habitation in U. S.

IMPORTANT — SIDE TRIP TO CUTLER. This is an interesting ride over roads not wholly improved, to a typical Maine fishing village snuggled away out of the path of tourist traffic, on a charming little harbor. A part of Cutler known as "Little Machias Bay," is famous for its gorgeous sunsets — Tourists from all over the world have travelled many miles to see their beautiful colorings and also Cutler's moonlit bay. There is also fresh and salt water fishing here as well as large and small game shooting.

Follow Route 191 which starts at speedometer mileage 121.8. Distance 13.2 miles. Return over same route and re-set speedometer.

124.4 Gardner's Lake, on left. Massachusetts Institute of Technology Civil Engineering Camp may be seen on opposite shore.

134.5 WHITING. (Incorporated 1825). At sign Lubec turn sharp right, onto Route 189.

140.4 WEST LUBEC.

145.1 LUBEC. (Most Eastern town in the United States. West Quoddy Lighthouse near Lubec is the most Eastern lighthouse under the Stars and Stripes. A picturesque fishing community of considerable size located on a high hill and commanding a wonderful view of Passamaquoddy Bay and its islands, some of which are in the United States and others are in Canada. Directly opposite on an island is the city of Eastport, Maine, only three miles distant by water, but 40 miles by highway. Approximately 500 yards from Lubec across the Narrows, is Campobello Island, New Brunswick, now internationally known as the site of the Summer home of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Directions for reaching it are given later. Lubec is a great sardine center and the water all about it, on the left, is what is to be impounded by a great dam, known as the "Quoddy Project," conceived by Dexter P. Cooper, famous engineer to establish a salt water tidal project to develop electric power through utilization of the ebb and flow of the enormous tides, approximately 30 feet, of Passamaquoddy Bay. Lubec was formerly part of Eastport but separated in 1811.)

145 At fork bear right.

IMPORTANT — SIDE TRIP TO CAMPOBELLO ISLAND, N. B. AND SUMMER HOME OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT — At this point, 145.7, is located the ferry to Campobello Island. It is only a five minute run across Lubec Narrows to the island and only 1.2 miles from the ferry landing on the island to the President's house, a large red structure located directly beside the highway, on the left, and in plain view of it. From its grounds and veranda may be obtained a wonderful panorama of Eastport, in Maine, directly opposite, and of Passamaquoddy Bay. The next house beyond, also large and painted red, is the Summer home of Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's Mother. There are about 30 miles of excellent gravel roads on the island and much beautiful scenery. The ferry operates without schedule and carries automobiles across as fast as they arrive. The trip from Lubec to President Roosevelt's house and back can easily be made in half an hour, but more time is desirable in order to look around. Customs officers of both the United States and Canada make the trip an easy one for visitors to the President’s Summer home. Upon returning to Lubec re-set speedometer at corner at ferry at 145.7.

145.8 Turn left just beyond Campobello Ferry and then turn right up hill to where 146.0 Three churches are located. Visitors are urged to leave their cars here and go out onto the ledge, where they will obtain a wonderful view of Campobello Island, on the extreme right; Eastport, a little farther to the left, North Lubec, on the left, and Passamaquoddy Bay as far as the eye can see in almost every direction. The water on the left is what is to be impounded by the great Quoddy Dam project. Upon returning to the automobile, continue straight ahead.

151.4 WEST LUBEC. Continue on Route 189.

156.8 WHITING. End of road, turn right onto Route 1.

166.3 DENNYSVILLE. (Settled 1786 by Gen. Benjamin Lincoln. Named for Denny’s River, which flows through village, and which got its name from an Indian named “Denny” who had his hunting ground in this vicinity. Just below the town is a famous sea salmon pool. Just below the a favorite spot of the great Audubon and the house in which he stayed is still standing.

Dennys river, from it source in Meddybemp Lake, 20 miles to its mouth provides excellent salmon fishing from the middle of May to the first of July and again in September. The Den- nys River Salmon Club has been active in promot- ing the fishing along this river, cutting trails, re- moving obstructions in the river, regulating flow of water and getting Federal and State coopera- tion in the planting of hundreds of thousands of small salmon in the river and Cathance Stream a tributary. Some wonderful catches have been re- corded, the last two years; salmon running from eight to fifteen pounds. Boats on the stream are unnecessary, the width varying from two to six rods, with rapidis and pools the whole 20 miles. Trout are caught in the upper reaches. Cathance Lake provides excellent trout and landlocked salmon fishing.)

171.6 WEST PEMBROKE.

172.5 PEMBROKE. (Settled in 1774. Formerly part of Dennysville.)

177.5 At sign, Eastport, turn right onto Route 190.

178.2 End of road, turn sharp right.

180.3 Cross bridge onto Eastport Island.

183.5 Curve right.

184.3 EASTPORT. (Most Eastern city in the United States and one of the very few located on an island. First settled in 1780. Formerly called Moose Island. Received its name from the fact of its location. Captured by the British in 1814 and remained for about four years in their posses- sion. A great fishing center and in the past a rendezvous for smugglers. Authorities have de- clared that Eastport has one of the most even climates in the United States for it is rarely hot in Summer on the island and the temperature seldom goes exceptionally low in Winter. The fact that the city is completely surrounded by ocean water is responsible for this desirable condition. Visitors are urged before leaving Eastport, to climb to the top of one of the rock knobs back of old Fort Sullivan for from this point they will view one of the most expansive and striking panoramas that can be found anywhere along the Atlantic Coast, barring, of course, such outstanding an elevation as Cadillac Mountain on Mount Desert Island. The wharves are always fascinating to the visitor. Eastport is to be the headquarters for the Quoddy Dam construction project.) After a tour of the city return to four corners at 184.3 and re-set speedometer mileage. Return to mainland over same route as that followed in coming onto the island.

190.5 At fork, keep right.

191.3 PERRY. (Formerly Plantation No. 1 it was sold by Massachusetts to General Lincoln about 1784 and soon after settled. It is of special interest to the tourist because at Pleasant Point, in the town, is the Passamaquoddy Indian Reservation, one of the very few Indian colonies in the East. Perry also has the unique distinction of being exactly midway between the North Pole and the Equator and a monument in the town, erected by the National Geographic Society proclaims this fact.)

At fork, keep right over railroad and follow Route 1.

197.7 SOUTH ROBBINSTON.

199.2 ROBBINSTON. (Beautifully situated on the St. Croix River and Passamaquoddy Bay. Across the intervening water is Canada all the way to Calais.)

202.7 RED BEACH. (This community is within the city limits of Calais. It is of outstanding interest to the tourist because just off its shores, in the middle of the St. Croix River, may be seen St. Croix Island. The latter may be distinguished by its lighthouse and white buildings and high banks. It was on this bit of land that De Monts and Champlain, in 1604, attempted the first settlement in the United States north of Florida. It survived for one year after terrible hardships and great loss of life.

211.9 CALAIS. (First permanently settled in 1779, it is known as the Border City. It has beautiful streets and is extremely progressive. Directly across the International Bridge spanning the St. Croix River, which is the International Boundary between the United States and Canada, is another equally large city, St. Stephen, New Brunswick. The inhabitants of both communities are on the friendliest of terms and carry on joint movements for the betterment of the entire district on both sides of the line. Harriet Prescott Spofford, the authoress was born in Calais. Visitors to Calais should not fail to visit St. Stephen with its true British atmosphere, even though within a stone's throw of the United States.
