Maine Campus February 28 1980

Maine Campus Staff

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.library.umaine.edu/mainecampus

Repository Citation
https://digitalcommons.library.umaine.edu/mainecampus/1065

This Other is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@UMaine. It has been accepted for inclusion in Maine Campus Archives by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@UMaine. For more information, please contact um.library.technical.services@maine.edu.
Spectators feel close to Olympians

by Todd Clough
Staff writer

Richard Wardwell said he felt he was almost a part of the Winter Olympic games when he took his short weekend trip to Lake Placid Feb. 15.

Wardwell, who works with the Department of Civil Engineering, said the games resembled a high school varsity competition more than one of the Athletic League. The only event Wardwell attended was the men's 5,000 meter speed skating competition, where he saw Eric Heiden win his second of five gold medals. He said Heiden was four seconds behind the leader in the beginning of the race. However, after the crowd's cries of "Eric! Eric!" the American speed skater pulled out in the last few laps to win the event.

Wardwell said the crowd was "great." He said he could "feel the patriotism" of American spectators with their shouts of "USA! USA!" Wardwell also said the spectators were friendly and enthusiastic to all competitors involved.

Wardwell said he saw a unique "participation sculpture" during his visit to the games. The "sculpture" consisted of four or five one and one half to two story structures composed of silver down-filled plastic sheets laced to tubular metal framing.

Upon entering the structure, he saw two rocking horses. After going through a doorway, Wardwell said there was a phonograph playing rock and roll music and an easy chair. Four or five pinball machines occupied the next room, he said. Beyond the next doorway, there was a bar. The bartender, also dressed in silver plastic, held the bar with a mallet. You're guilty!" and invited the tourists to sit down and have a drink. The man then hit the bar with a mallet, said, "You're guilty!" and invited the tourists to sit down and have a drink. The man then hit the bar with a mallet, said, "You're guilty!" Wardwell thought the decorations were "tacky" and invited the tourists to sit down and have a drink. The man then hit the bar with a mallet, said, "You're guilty!"

Richard Wardwell was impressed with the fun enthusiasm and patriotism while observing the Winter Olympics. (Photo by Donna Sotomayor)

Professors form non-union group

by George W. Roche
Staff writer

Barring an eleven hour compromize, it appears that the union/non-union controversy will be settled in court.

The non-union forces have formed an organization called the Association of Independent Professionals and chairperson Dennis McConnell said, "We are ready to go to court and are quite comfortable in our position. We might not make all our points, but neither will they."

The assistant professor of finance added, "We just want to make sure that people are aware that we have legal and financial resources that can be used if needed."

However, according to James Wolfhagen, professor of chemistry and president of the Orono chapter of the Associated Faculties of the University of Maine (AFUM), the state executive board of the union voted Saturday to proceed with legal actions to see whether the contract that has been negotiated between the union and the university is enforceable as it presently stands.

"We're going to take someone to court and find out," stated Wolfhagen.

The bone of contention is that the contract agreed to last fall establishes an "agency" shop within the university system. The legal problems seem to stem from the difference between the normal procedure of establishing an "agency" shop (30 days to pay dues or loss of job) and the contractual agreement negotiated last fall.

The contract only allows for the disciplining of non-paying individuals by court actions taken by the union.

Article 13 of the contract offers three options of payment to satisfy dues obligations. Those involved can either join the union and pay yearly dues of $153, or pay a "representation fee," equaling 95 percent of the dues, or pay the same amount into an educational fund.

"So far, it's a friendly dialogue. I am just interested in maintaining academic freedom," McConnell said. Last week, a committee forwarded to the union's executive board a series of recommendations outlining the general purpose of the educational trust fund and the composition of the overseeing board of trustees.

The recommendations will be presented for approval or amendment at the April delegate assembly of the union. The Board also authorized the drawing of up to $5,000 of the trust fund.

Wolfhagen noted that funds presently being collected would be set aside in a "safety fund" and not used until necessary.

Cabinet votes against extra FAROG funding

by Glen Chase
Staff writer

The UMO Student Government Cabinet, working with $14,528 for the rest of the semester, recommended that a total of $1,280 be allocated to the Panhellenic Council and the Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship as Wednesday nights meeting.

In other action, the cabinet voted not to approve any additional funding for the Franco-American Research Opportunity Group (FAROG).

FAROG, which produces a monthly news magazine, has already been funded $2,500 this year.

While turning down FAROG's request of $2,562, the cabinet said the group needed to develop more funding on its own.

Worries were voiced that additional funding would make student government a major contributor to a publication where less than a third of its distribution is on campus.

The FAROG Forum has a circulation of 6,500 of which 2,000 are distributed on campus.

The cabinet members also felt too many issues were being supplied to non-members of the UMO community and this wasn't serving the best interests of activity-fee paying students.

"I respect their attempts to get the information out," said cabinet member Bill Randell.

"But we too much money for any one group in which only 11 people participate," according to Tin President Pam Burch. FAROG has come before the cabinet asking for money every semester, saying that their fund gathering has "fallen short of expectations."

According to Student Government President David Spellman said he felt a complete cut was too drastic, but was outvoted 8-0-2.

The Panhellenic Council request of $2,760.04 was cut to $1,103, as the cabine members felt their budget was over estimated as to the amounts they would need.

Also, the council decided not to fund any group for next year before the 80-81 budget is completed.

The final vote was 9-1 in favor of approving funding for the group.

The Inter-varsity Christian Fellowship was funded $75 for supplies and postage for a monthly newsletter to alumni.

In her financial report, vice president for financial affairs, Paula Chai said student government had an additional $6,539 in two savings accounts.

"The University of Maine at Orono student newspaper since 1875"

Thursday, Feb. 28, 1980

vol. 86 no. 29

Association of Independent Professionals

Professors form non-union group
Ashes push elms out of the scenery

A huge elm tree casts its shadow on a smaller ash tree on the mall. The ashes will be replacing the elms. (photo by Donna Sotomayor)

by Glen Chase
Staff Writer

According to UMO professor, the ash trees planted on the mall have "pleiuria" over the elm trees, which will be cut or pruned as needed to let the ash trees grow properly.

James Swasey, associate professor of ornamental horticulture and landscape design said plans made back in '71 called for cutting down elms as they died or became diseased.

However, most of the elms of the mall haven't become affected with disease. So, according to Swasey, they will be cut in the near several years to prevent the ash trees from being shaded.

"I don't think we'll go in and completely wipe out the elm tree in one year," said Swasey, "but there will be a gradual reduction of the elms on the mall.

Cutting down all the trees on the mall would be too big a change," Swasey said. "There's no need for that.

Instead, it will be a selective process. We haven't been forced to take out any nice specimens, yet," he said.

"Last summer was the first time that Dr. (James) Campagna (professor of pathology) and I determined, four trees could come down completely and that there were others that could be pruned," Most were on the east side of the mall, he added.

Swasey said the decision to plant new trees to eventually replace the elms was made almost ten years ago.

A committee that included Swasey, a landscaping consultant named Roger Clapp, former physical plant director Parker Cushman and former superintendent of grounds and services Ronce Clifford decided a large tree, uniform in shape and form, and able to cope with the poor soil and drainage conditions on the mall should be used.

The kind of ash trees selected to replace the elms, are reported to be able to handle the poor soil conditions, said Swasey.

In the original layout of the mall made in the first part of the 1900's, Swasey said the streets down either side of the mall were narrower. He said when the streets were widened, they began to encroach on the elms and their root systems.

The ash trees are planted closer to the center of the mall to reduce the problems associated with soil compaction and the pavement.

Concerns have been voiced that the ash trees were fairly sensitive to the large amounts of sulfur dioxide produced by the Diamond International Plant in Old Town.

Swasey said this was debatable. "We haven't found any large amounts of injuries from sulfur dioxide," he said. "It's too early to say that the ash trees didn't suffer from the air pollution any more than any other kind of tree in the area.

Allen and Kessler hope to attain presidency of UMO

by Stephen Oliver
Staff writer

Both Kenneth W. Allen and David P. Kessler would like to finish out their careers at UMO.

As two of the finalists for the UMO presidency, both feel they have something to offer UMO, and UMO has something to offer them.

"Maine has a very good reputation and it's definitely a place where I'd like to finish out my career," Kessler said.

"The University of Maine at Orono is my home," Allen said. "I've served here for 16 years and plan to stay at UMO regardless of the search committee's outcome.

Allen, who said he felt honored to be one of the finalists, said he would consider taking another administrative post or possibly returning to the teaching department if he wasn't chosen.

He commented that being acting president may hurt him rather than favor him. "When you're in office, your actions are in public view and sometimes that can work against you," Allen said.

Allen said, while he hasn't been able to make any concrete plans as acting president, he feels UMO's next president must consult and develop projects, such as the Performing Arts Center and improvements to Fogler Library.

Attention UMO Organizations

The Prism will be selling 1/2 pages at $25.00 and full pages at $50.00 to any UMO recognized organization on campus.

If your organization is interested call 581-7698 or visit our offices in the basement of Lord Hall.

The deadline for this offer is March 8th.
by Mike Fingas

It was a challenge for students to pursue a liberal arts education. Are only the engineering and technological students bearing that? For students that graduate in bachelor degrees?

The results of a College Placement Council survey predicts that job offers for engineers with bachelor degrees will increase by ten percent, while decreasing by eight percent for 1979-1980 liberal arts graduates with bachelor degrees.

The College Placement Council is the national organization for career planning and placement offices at campuses in the United States. The survey is needed to determine job openings by career offices with students who will be graduating in the fall. This information is used to determine what value graduates have in different regions of the United States. According to the director of UMO career planning and placement services, "It is the mechanics and timing that are off. During the on-campus recruiting season, it is your company, not the university's job market, that is important. Sewall said."

Results from the 1979 graduating class of liberal arts and sciences graduates have not been completed, but figures from the 1979 graduating class showed that students were more likely to have bachelor degrees share success with engineering graduates in bachelor degree obtaining jobs.

The total number of bachelor degrees awarded in the spring of 1978 were 2,289 and the UMO office of career planning and placement received information from 62 percent of the graduates the following December. The results showed that 63 percent of liberal arts graduates had placed a job and 22 percent had gone on to graduate school. The engineering graduates that placed jobs were 88 percent with only seven percent continuing education.

"The whole thrust is that large corporations do the bulk of on-campus hiring, so they have to scout the country," Sewall said. "The survey gives some reading or status at the national level, so there is something, whether we will only be able to compete to our graduates."

Students returning for liberal arts education are more likely to go on to graduate school and you expect engineering students to get a job. Sewall added."

A year ago was an excellent year, Sewall said. "We should see slight changes but no drastic. If the economy is strong people will get jobs and if the economy is weak people are more likely to continue school." Sewall said.

Lifestyle not to change

"Last year was an excellent year for us. We should see slight changes but nothing drastic. If the economy is strong people will get jobs and if the economy is weak people are more likely to continue school." Sewall said."

Due in part to student dissatisfaction, Aroostook Hall, Dunn 1 North, and Knox 3 North, were proposed to be changed from male to female. Therefore, the Lifestyle Committee did not support the proposal.

"I he Lifestyle Committee looked at the idea, and that's as far as it got." he said. "We had to hire an outside consultant to Residential Life to determine if the university would be over qualified for those opportunities."

"We do not expect majors to work in a career field, but there are many business opportunities," the personnel director for Eastern Maine Medical Center said.

According to the director of Residential Life, H. Ross Moriarty, the idea to change the dorms to co-ed housing facilities was one of many suggested to Residential Life by the Lifestyle Committee."

"The Lifestyle Committee looked at the idea, and that's as far as it got." he said. "We had to hire an outside consultant to Residential Life to determine if the university would be over qualified for those opportunities."

"We do not expect majors to work in a career field, but there are many business opportunities," the personnel director for Eastern Maine Medical Center said.

Lifestyles not to change in all-male dormitories

"It sure as hell is not in the Sport Section!"
The cost of memories

A yearbook is a place to show faces. That’s the philosophy I was brought up on. Remember high school? The most exciting time of the year came at the end when the yearbooks would come out. It was a chance to see yourself and all your friends in a moment of glory; in short, a little recognition. No one joined a club or group solely for this purpose. But it was nice to have something to show.

Most people buy yearbooks for this reason. Evidence of this is that the vast majority of the roughly 2,000 yearbooks ordered last year were ordered by graduating seniors. Seeing yourself is enough incentive for most people to order a copy. I am sure this type of incentive would work equally well on group and club members, if they were included. It is easy to sit back and cast a finger at fraternities and sororities—if they don’t pay $80 for the same space. But this is a decision that should have never had to come about. Fraternities were included by tradition. So should organizations and clubs have been included.

The community should be coming to the yearbook’s aid. Some of the alumni-donated money should be earmarked for the purpose of helping the yearbook. There are other sources of money that could be tapped. One of these ways that the world can be made a little more livable is by not judging people. By not taking your personal license from God, has the right to judge anyone else by our standards. What we have a duty to do is respect the right of each person to have a different way of looking at the world.

And when Jesus was asked how his disciples should know a false prophet from a true one, the answer was, by their fruits. "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." From the sermon on the Mount, Matthew, Chapter 7, Verses 1 and 2.

Carl E. Pease

Letters for the circular file

Success-Failure

who’s the judge?

"Judge not, that ye be not judged."

For what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. Matthew, Chapter 7, Verses 1 and 2.

I am not a good model. I haven’t been in a good mood for about two weeks. My sense of humor, hard to find in the best of circumstances, has recently become non-existent.

Now, why am I in such a rotten humor? The answer probably lies in my recent arguments with a fellow student.

This fellow student thinks that, because I’ve spent seven years at this institution, not all as a student, that I am unsuccessful.

Now, by his definition of success, which I would guess is the $40,000 a year job—two cars with payments and a house with a 20-year mortgage. I am probably unsuccessful.

But that is the point, "by his definition."

By my definition, although I might not be making success, neither would I call myself a failure. My definition centers more on how many people might call spiritual and emotional values. To me success consists of having friends, and knowing that, as a Christian, I am doing the best job that I can to make this place a little more livable for my fellow humans.

One of these ways that the world can be made a little more livable is by not judging people. By not taking your personal license from God, has the right to judge anyone else by our standards. What we have a duty to do is respect the right of each person to have a different way of looking at the world.

When Jesus was asked how his disciples should know a false prophet from a true one, the answer was, by their fruits. "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

For what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. Matthew, Chapter 7, Verses 1 and 2.

This fellow student thinks that, because I’ve spent seven years at this institution, not all as a student, that I am unsuccessful.

Now, by his definition of success, which I would guess is the $40,000 a year job—two cars with payments and a house with a 20-year mortgage. I am probably unsuccessful.

But that is the point, "by his definition."

By my definition, although I might not be making success, neither would I call myself a failure. My definition centers more on how Finders can be weepers

To the Editor:

Shortly after last fall semester had begun I stumbled across a faculty sticker. It was just lying there on the ground, and I being a commuter, was ecstatic. Naturally I slapped it on my car and now I could park anywhere. This act almost got me a police record.

I figured one faculty member had lost it and well, he could always get another one. Besides, who would care?

It was at the beginning of this spring semester that I found out who would care. The UMO police had tracked down that sticker, which had been reported stolen earlier in September.

I was now facing criminal charges! I couldn't believe it. I didn't know it was stolen. All I did was find it and keep it. Well, according to the law, if you find something and don't attempt to return it, you are guilty of theft.

I didn't see how damaging a criminal record can be. It is only because of the cooperation from the Student Legal Services and the UMO police that I don't have a criminal record now.

So if you find something, return it. If you don't you may regret it for the rest of your life. A criminal record can't be erased.

Joe Boulter

Disorders distorted

To the Editor:

Could I remark that I'm mad at the sorry administration. Perhaps not to the degree of my anger in early February, but still mad, and chagrined, and hopefully a bit wiser.

This time the administration beat us to the punch and approved a raise in minimum graduate stipends to $3,800 for a nine-month appointment. This increase is sizable, and is now comparable with other land grant colleges in New England. It is not gracious living, I assure you, it is a vegetarian sub in the Den twice a month, and perhaps an extra drying cycle at the laundromat.

The administration is proud of that.

The administration is pleased that Ken Allen's administration recognizes the value of keeping graduate assistants employed. Besides raising stipend priorities to the same level as regular faculty, it provides the opportunity for raising regular cost-of-living increases.

One solution that may deal with all these problems is a change in the status of graduate assistants to employees. Besides raising stipend priorities to the same level as regular faculty, it provides the opportunity for raising regular cost-of-living increases.

A status change would be a bold move, but it would solve the crucial problem: keeping UMO competitive year after year.

Graduate students not only contribute largely to the successful operation of this university, but the quality of their research and teaching is one of the major components in building prestige and visibility. Undergraduates and graduates will bear the name of this institution after their own. Its future is crucial to each of us.

P. Roger Sweets is a graduate assistant in botany and plant physiology, who served as ad-hoc chairman of the Stipend Committee.

P. Roger Sweets

Grad assistants deserve more

Graduate assistants are an essential part of the university's success. They contribute to research, teaching, and administrative tasks, and are often the first to emerge from the academic world to the real world.

However, graduate assistants are often underpaid and overworked. The administration has recently raised stipend levels to $3,800 for a nine-month appointment, which is comparable with other land grant colleges in New England.

This increase is helpful, but more needs to be done. The administration should continue to prioritize graduate assistants and recognize their contributions.

Rob Sweets is a graduate assistant in botany and plant physiology, who served as ad-hoc chairman of the Stipend Committee.

P. Roger Sweets

S. pseudoservice
Kennedy wins in Carter victory

CONCORD, N.H.—Senator Edward Kennedy's loss in New Hampshire Tuesday to President Carter was Kennedy's third of the presidential campaign. Carter won caucuses in both Iowa and New Hampshire. But despite finishing 11 percentage points behind Carter in New Hampshire, Kennedy says his showing was a victory of sorts coming after polls showing him trailing by a wider margin.

In a statement this morning from Washington, Carter said that his triumph shows that voters support his policies on foreign crises, inflation and energy.

California Governor Jerry Brown finished third Tuesday with 10 percent of the vote. Brown says he won't campaign for next week's Massachusetts primary, but will turn his attention to Wisconsin instead.

Dole bows from primary races

CONCORD, N.H.—Former California Governor Ronald Reagan surprised himself by beating George Bush more than 2-1 on the Republican side of Tuesday's New Hampshire primary.

In a statement late Tuesday night, Reagan said, "This is the first and it sure is the best." Last month in the Iowa caucuses, Bush had upset Reagan.

In a television appearance Wednesday morning from Concord, Bush said he still believes he's more electable than Reagan. Bush says he still expects to win the Republican nomination for president.

Tennessee Senator Howard Baker finished behind Bush with 13 percent of the vote followed by Illinois Congressman John Anderson with 5 percent.

Washington Senator Robert Dole finished last and said he won't enter any more primaries.

Lack of funding hots truckers

AUGUSTA—Five truck-trailers of hazardous chemicals are still sitting in a North Berwick parking lot, two months after they were supposed to be moved.

The president of the New Hampshire chemical waste company that's responsible for the trailers, Philip French, had agreed to move them in early January. But Assistant Attorney General Philip Ahrens says French's company has run into trouble. Four trailers have been moved to a New York disposal site, but French says there are still "minor leaks" in the remaining trailers. And it's costing the York County sheriff's department more than $1,000 a week to guard the site.

French was only granted a temporary permit to store the chemicals there, and Ahrens says he has been on the phone constantly with French's lawyer to get the remaining trailers removed.

Court to allow couples' testimony

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court, altering a 22-year-old legal rule, said Wednesday that husbands and wives cannot be barred from testifying against each other in federal court.

The decision of the court was unanimous. Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote that when one spouse is willing to testify against the other in a matrimonial proceeding, there is little in the way of marital law that preserves the privilege.

The justices upheld the conviction of a Los Angeles man on charges of heroin smuggling. He had contended that his trial was tainted by his wife's testimony against him.

Wednesday's decision changes a federal rule of evidence shaped by the supreme court in 1912. Then the justices held that spouses may not testify against each other unless both consent.

State rejects elderly care

AUGUSTA—In a surprise move, the Senate has rejected a bill to allow the state to license and regulate adult foster-care homes.

The homes, which provide care for small numbers of elderly and handicapped adults, don't currently come under state regulation. The bill had received all but final House approval. But Eliot Republican Walter Hitchings, who had been the measure on the Senate floor and picked up Republican support. He said there hadn't been an adequate opportunity for testimony.

Some members of the Human Freedom Centre, which the Mills founded in 1978 to help destitute from the people's temple, had established a shelter to help other cult members escape. They said they were afraid the squads meant to kill them, following the mass murder-suicide of more than 900 followers of Jones in November, 1978.

Fifteen-year-old Daphene Mills, identified as the couple's daughter, was found critically wounded in the cottage. A spokeswoman at a Berkeley hospital says she's in "very critical" condition.

Al and Jeannie Mills followed the Reverend Jim Jones for six years before leaving the cult in 1975. Police say their bodies were found Tuesday night in separate rooms of their small cottage, located at the rear of a rent house.

Jones members slain at home

BERKELEY, Calif.—Police say two defectors from the people's temple who established a center to help other cult defectors, have been found shot to death in their home in Berkeley, California.

Al and Jeannie Mills followed the Reverend Jim Jones for six years before leaving the cult in 1975. Police say their bodies were found Tuesday night in separate rooms of their small cottage, located at the rear of a rent house.

Fifteen-year-old Daphene Mills, identified as the couple's daughter, was found critically wounded in the cottage. A spokeswoman at a Berkeley hospital says she's in "very critical" condition.

Some members of the Human Freedom Centre, which the Mills founded in 1978 to help defectors from the people's temple and other cults said they feared "hit squads" had been organized. They said they were afraid the squads meant to kill them, following the mass murder-suicide of more than 900 followers of Jones in November, 1978.

Police say Mills's son, Eddie, about 17, was home at the time. He told police he did not hear or see anything.

Fifteen-year-old Daphene Mills, identified as the couple's daughter, was found critically wounded in the cottage. A spokeswoman at a Berkeley hospital says she's in "very critical" condition.

State to extend fuel aid deadline

AUGUSTA—Maine lawmakers Wednesday gave final approval to a bill extending the application deadline for state fuel assistance for some elderly and disabled residents.

The bill now goes to the governor for his signature.

The program provides state funds to help some elderly and disabled people whose incomes are too high for federal fuel assistance.

Friday was to have been the deadline for the program, but the bill would extend it until the end of April.
Maine magic tests Holy Cross

by Scott Cole

February 28, 1980. Truly a day to cherish in University of Maine sports history. After being the ugly sister that stayed home after winter from the post-season playoff prom, the Maine basketball team will be dancing with the rest of the lovelies in New England college basketball tonight at the Cumberland County Civic Center in Portland.

By virtue of their 46-52 quarterfinal triumph over Northeastern Tuesday night, the Bears will tap-off at 9 p.m. with Holy Cross for the right to advance to the finals of the ECAC North Saturday afternoon at one.

At 7 p.m. Boston University and Rhode Island square off in the other semi-final. BU knocked off Niagara Tuesday night in Boston. Ditto for URI. Canisius Tuesday in Kingston, R.I.

For the Black Bears tonight's mash-up with the Crusaders means more than just a springboard to the finals. It also means they finally get a date at a Holy Cross team that has effectively avoided scheduling Maine in recent years. The Cross has cast a rather disapproving eye at Maine basketball. A Black Bear victory tonight would certainly give the Western Mass. squad no basis for their snobbery. No one from the Holy Cross staff was available for comment on the matter yesterday. The Crusaders were in transit to Portland.

Freshman guard Rick Carlisle's comment on playing the Crusaders crystallized the whole matter for everybody associated with Maine basketball. Carlisle said, "like it because they don't want to play us."

Carlisle is a bit more familiar with the Crusaders than any of his teammates and probably even his coach. He attended prep school in Worcester last year and occasionally watched the Cross play on a local TV station. Last summer Carlisle played some ball with Holy Cross' Gary Winn, Dave Muizum, and Bob Kelley.

"They have some big guys that can move well," informed Carlisle, "and they are just looking to try to get us into a running game."

It will be very important for us to establish the tempo and get a lead early," he continued, "because if we fall behind early we're in trouble." he noted pointing to the UConn game as an example of what happens when the Bears get decked early on in a ball game.

Women's gymnastics

The UMO lady gymnasts split a pair of meets this past week, placing second at Westfield State Friday and downing Rhode Island College Saturday.

Mention the school Holy Cross and you're talking Ronnie Perry. The 6'2" senior guard has been New England's most publicized player over the last four years and has lived up to most of his billing. Perry goes into tonight's leading his club to a 16-10 record. Meanwhile Rufus Harris needs just two points to become the region's number two scorer of all time. Tonight's battle marks the first time Harris has played Perry since their days of being assigned the task of guarding Perry when Maine starts out in their customary game opening man-to-man defense. It could be Jim Mercier or it could be Carlisle he said. "I'd like the opportunity to do it," related Carlisle.

Just as it is superficial to believe that shutting down Rufus Harris bunches Maine's lights out, so it is equally wrong to trace that theory to Holy Cross and Ron Perry.

Coach George Blaney has a more than adequate supporting cast. As a matter of fact that cast looks like the Sherwood Forest. Firing away out there tonight will be: 6'7" swingman Gary Wintz (11.8 ppg), freshman Ernie Floyd (6'9") (8.4 ppg), 6'5" forward Kevin Gorany (7.7 ppg), 6'8" Chris Logan (6.5 ppg), 6'9" Tom Seaman (6'6"), Dave Mulquin at 6'7" (5.9 ppg), and Charlie Brown at 6'10" (2.3 ppg). Gee," exclaimed Chappelle when having these heights related to him over the phone, "don't they have any little guys?"

Yes, there's two. Aside from the 6'2" Perry, there's 6'2" Bob Kelly. Don't let those heights spur you to cancel your plans for spending Saturday afternoon in Portland. The Cross have been terminated on the scoreboard by the Boston media ever since wonder boy Perry arrived in Worcester. They were cranked just as bad by UConn at home as Maine was. The Cross downed by UMass by 11, Maine dropped the Minutemen by 11.

The Black Bears didn't get where they are today by a rabbit's foot. They are a well-coached, fundamentally sound team that has accomplished what it has with the smallest front line since Tom Thumb's family got together for a Christmas photograph. Chappelle stood that he didn't expect his team as at ease at the start of tonight's game as they were at Northeastern. However the possibility of excessive nervousness is always there he admitted since "this has become a rather hyped situation and we're expected to do well.

For the benefit of having the journey played in Maine, Chappelle thought the Cumberland County Civic Center would be "friendly territory certainly but I don't know about a home advantage."

Let the music begin. Chappelle, his 10 players, and the campus have waited a long time for this dance.
Fooling around is alive and well in the soaps

by Melissa Gay
Staff writer

Monica is married to Alan, but she loves Rick. Rick is separated from his wife because she found out the baby Monica was having was not his. Rick is very interested in the baby and it is almost as if he is going to adopt it. Rick is also very interested in Monica's relationship with Alan. He is very possessive of her and is always looking over her shoulder to make sure she is not cheating on him. He is also very jealous of Monica's relationship with Alan and is constantly trying to break them up. Monica is very happy with Alan and is not interested in Rick's advances. She is very much in love with Alan and is very happy with him. Monica is also very happy with her baby and is very proud of it. She is very much looking forward to being a mother and is very excited about the future. Monica is also very happy with her job and is very satisfied with her life. She is very much looking forward to the future and is very happy with her life.