Former Orono president praised

by Sean Brodrick
Staff writer

"A far sighted and courageous leader" was the way one speaker described former UMO president

Howard Neville at his memorial service yesterday in Hauck auditorium.

Nine speakers praised Neville for his many accomplishments during his six year administration, especially in the areas of fund-raising, building and scholarships. A crowd of about 200 people attended.

Neville, who died last December, was the twelfth president of UMO, serving from 1973-1979.

Paul Silverman, president of UMO, was the first speaker, and he traced the life of Howard Neville from his birth in Kankakee, Illinois in 1926 up to his death.

"We are all products of our past," Silverman said, "and Neville was a product of the prairie tradition."

Silverman listed Neville's accomplishments in the areas of the National Merit Scholar program, the Honors program, sponsoring of faculty research and development, the school of performing arts, library expansion and athletic program improvements.

Stanley J. Evans, chairman of the board of trustees, said, "Howard Neville will be remembered as a forthright spokesman of higher education."

"He worked for the benefit of future scholars and future researchers," Evans said. "His influence will be felt on this campus for many years to come."

Next to speak was Patrick McCarthy, chancellor of the University of Maine.

"Howard must be remembered as a scholar, builder, and magnificent fund-raiser," he said. "He was personally responsible for York Village

Howard Neville

and Alford Arena... Howard loved UMO."

Frederick Hutchinson, vice president for research and public development, recalled his close relationship with Neville. Neville was very keen on scholarly excellence, Hutchinson said, and his motto was, "you recruit scholars the same way you recruit athletes and other talent."

Hutchinson also said that Neville's greatest accomplishment was instilling a sense of pride in UMO; he made faculty and staff realize that the university was more than just a rural college out in a far corner of the country.

"He left us with a feeling of

Administration hopeful on nursing program

By Connie McKenzie
Staff writer

Negotiations on a proposal for a joint nursing program with Eastern Maine Medical Center broke down in Oct. 1981 due to disagreements, but university officials are optimistic about a program with EMMC being initiated.

Harlan Philippi, acting president of the University of Maine at Farmington, was the university's chief negotiator with EMMC. He said after one and a half years in various negotiations, EMMC requested bids from both the University of Maine and Husson and "the University of Maine refused to enter in a competitive bid with Husson."

Philippi said the first disagreement concerned curriculum. Presently UMO has a two plus two program, with pre-nursing students taking basic science courses at UMO for their first two years, and then transferring to USM for advanced clinical instruction.

EMMC wanted a fully integrated program with clinical instruction right from the beginning, Philippi said, but the two institutions had agreed to compromise and work out a totally different curriculum model.

The second disagreement concerned faculty, Philippi said. UMO wanted to use UMO faculty, and EMMC wanted EMMC faculty. "We thought we had an agreement on that a long time ago, but apparently not," Philippi said.

The most recent disagreement was over academic control. University of Maine officials thought the control should rest with the university, as the program would give a university degree, Philippi said, but "EMMC officials felt they would have to control the program for them to be reimbursed."

Robert Woodbury, president of the University of Southern Maine, said "We're ready to continue to talk about a nursing program in the Bangor area."

"We want to have a nursing program that is of the highest academic quality we can make it," Woodbury said. "A good nursing program today uses many different clinical sites, we're not restricted to EMMC."

Dr. Alan M. Elkins, a member of board of trustees, said, "I hope there's still an opening for the University of Maine. The trustees are more than willing to sit down and negotiate with EMMC again."

According to Elkins, Husson has submitted a proposal for a joint nursing program with EMMC even though it has no background in nursing education. The legislature has to approve a change in Husson's charter before such a program could be implemented.

Marshall Dodge dies in Hawaii

WAIMEA, HAWAII (AP) - Marshall Dodge, a Maine humorist best known for his "Bert and I" records, has died after being hit from behind by a vehicle while bicycling. He was 45.

Police in this community (in the northern part of the big island of Hawaii) said Dodge died at a hospital Wednesday some four hours after they were called to the scene on Kawaihale Rosa at 6:40 a.m.

The vehicle that hit Dodge left the area, police said. Dodge, who imitated the Downeast humor, accents stories of Maine in his "Bert and I" records, had been staying in Waimea.

Funeral services were being arranged by the Rev. Robert Bryan of Ipswich, Mass., the "Bert" of the records and an old friend of Dodge. The services will be held early next week at the Yale Divinity School chapel, with Bryan presiding, a spokeswoman for the Episcopal minister said Thursday.

The first "Bert and I" record was made in 1957, when Dodge was a philosophy major at Yale University and Bryan was a Yale Divinity School student. Dodge said later it was "done as a lark," and he never expected it to be successful.

Dodge said he learned Downeast humor from a classmate at St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H., and had spent no more than a week in Maine when the first record was made.

A native of New York City and a graduate of Yale, Dodge moved to Maine nine years ago and had been living in Portland at the time of his death. He recently had been performing with another Maine humorist, Tim Sample.

Food Science Dept. retention urged

by Bruce Clavette
Staff Writer

The Maine Potato Commission is going to try to save the Food Science Department at the University of Maine, said MPC Executive Director Edwin Plissy.

Plissy is unhappy about Dean Kenneth Wing's plan to eliminate the 35-year-old department. "The department has a long tradition of helping Maine agriculture," he said. Plissy added it would not be good for Maine agriculture or Maine people to lose the department now.

Plissy also said there was no dialogue or warning from the administration about the Food Science Department being in trouble. "The dean has not come in any way to us or the agricultural industry, nor has the Chancellor," he said.

Plissy said he will meet with other agricultural representatives such as of the sardine industry, blueberry industry, poultry industry, and others to decide what they can do, and "decide on some hard questions to ask McCarthy about the future of the department," he said.

Life Sciences and Agriculture Dean Kenneth Wing told the Bangor Daily News last week that shutting down the Food Science Department would save $100,000. These funds would be better used in other program areas, he said.

Wing also told the BDN that the Food Science Department needs a bigger budget—about $200,000—to be a more effective program.

Food Science Chairman Gordon Ramsdell said present funding levels are adequate for meeting the needs of Maine agriculture. "Many things go on here that can't be done well by other people," he said.

Fund-raiser to be held on FDR's birthday

by Ed Manzi
Staff writer

A dinner honoring the 100th birthday of former president Franklin Delano Roosevelt and featuring special guests Maine Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, and former Sec. of State Edmund Muskie will be held this weekend on campus.

The fundraising dinner, sponsored by the Maine Democratic Committee, will also feature keynote speaker Sen. Ernest Fritz-Hollings of South Carolina. It will be held in the Wells Commons Dining Hall at 7 p.m.

Former Senator Muskie will be Master of Ceremonies. The dinner will also feature other known political notables such as former Maine Governor Kenneth Curtis and U.S. Senator George Mitchell.

Tickets for the dinner are $10 and can be bought at the door or reservations can be made at the Maine Democratic headquarters in Augusta.

Maine State Senate Representative David Diamond of Bangor, who is in charge of the dinner, said the main course will be pot roast. The meal is being catered by the university and cooked by Wells Commons personnel.

Diamond emphasized the meal was purchased by the Maine Democratic Committee and is not the regular pot roast served here.

"The dinner was chosen to be held at UMO because of its excellent facilities," Diamond said.

Tickets for the dinner are $10 and can be bought at the door or reservations can be made at the Maine Democratic headquarters in Augusta.

Amnesty International opens Orono chapter

by Naomi Laskey
Staff Writer

A local chapter of Amnesty International, a Nobel Peace Prize winning organization, now exists in Orono, where it has received support from UMO faculty members, students and area residents, as an AI member Thursday.

Professor V.K. Balakrishnan described AI as an all-volunteer, impartial organization dedicated to freeing political prisoners and ending the use of torture worldwide. "We work for three things; for release of prisoners of conscience, for getting political prisoners a fair trial within a reasonable time, and for humane treatment of the prisoners," Balakrishnan said.

Prisoners of conscience are persons detained because of their beliefs, color or sex, Balakrishnan said.

The Organization's local chapter was formed in December of 1981 and now has about 30 members.

Internationally, AI is supported by 130 countries and won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977, 16 years after AI was created in London, Balakrishnan said.

The Orono chapter, led by coordinator Patricia Kail, has been concentrating on two prisoners; a woman trade unionist imprisoned in Chile, and a male journalist in jail in Taiwan, Balakrishnan said.

This week the group began working for a prisoner in Haiti, who was put in jail by the DuValier government and is being held without trial, he said.

"We have been writing to authorities in French," Balakrishnan added.

"We all believe sincerely something has to be done. The group commits itself to abolishment of torture and to prisoners wherever "one group under protection of the state is inflicting torture on another," Balakrishnan said.

AI learns about these conditions mostly through newspapers, but sometimes receives letters from concerned individuals, he said.

Most funds to aid persons "adopted" by AI are raised by member donations or through activities like bake sales, Balakrishnan said.

EBC suggests paying Off-campus Board debt

by Edward Manzi
Staff Writer

The Executive Budget Committee has made a recommendation to the student senate here that an $1800 debt held by the Off-campus Board be paid by student government.

The Off-campus Board is one of several boards financed by the student government. Its function is to serve the needs of off campus students. In recent years, money has been appropriated to the OCB by the student government in one lump sum at the beginning of the year. The OCB could spend its funds any way it chose. Over the years, however, due to mismanagement, the OCB has incurred a debt of $1800.

The ECB's recent recommendation to the student senate would allow the OCB to pay off its debt without using money already appropriated in this year's budget.

Steve Bard, vice president of financial affairs for student government, drew up a resolution that would make OCB's budget more accountable of its funds. Bard's resolution, now under consideration by the Student Government Procedure Committee, would force the OCB to get ECB and student senate approval of money it would spend during the course of the year.

"We're striving for 100 percent accountability by the Student Government boards as requested by the board of trustees," Bard said.

Bard felt the current management of the OCB led by representative Molly Campbell was doing a better job handling the budget than in the past.

The OCB's budget problems are not the fault of the current management at OCB," said Bard. "The problems have been left over from years."

The Student Senate will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 2, to decide if the OCB will be appropriated the $1800 to pay off its debts. The senate will also vote on a EBC recommendation to give the OCB an additional $1260 for work-study funds for the spring semester.

confidence," Hutchinson said.

The last person to give his thoughts on Neville was John Blake, a former vice president of UMO. Blake said when he first met Neville at Michigan State University, Neville was gaining national attention because he had just gotten the country's first Kellogg Center, a continuing education center for adults, to open at the university.

Blake said Neville brought warmth and humor to his job. He also said that Neville would be "embarrassed" by what was being said at the memorial service because he had not achieved all the things he had set out to do. So, by Neville's own eyes he wouldn't have lived up to his tough standards. Blake's last comment epitomized what everyone else had been saying: "I am so glad that he touched my life."

FDR remembered

Saturday is the 100th anniversary of the birth of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

It seems ironic that as the birth of FDR is marked by celebrations this week, the current administration is advocating a so-called New Federalism."

The "New Federalism" is nothing more than a plan by the current administration to further dismantle the New Deal programs instituted by FDR at the time of the Great Depression.

Most of us do not remember those times, but by asking our parents and grandparents, we can learn what those times were like.

The stories are familiar to most families. We hear about a coming together of families and a nation in an attempt to overcome the hardships. We hear about soup lines and shortages and the "alphabet soup" of programs advocated by a president and passed by Congress to help the people.

Most of all, we hear about a man called FDR. A man who convinced a nation that it had "nothing to fear but fear itself."

Roosevelt was different. He looked upon the poor and the unfortunate, not through the eyes of a capitalist bent on exploiting the working class, but with compassion.

He set about restoring the faith of a country by creating the much-maligned "Welfare State." By doing this Roosevelt restored the nation's faith in the government. Faith which would be needed in carrying this country through the trials of a second world war.

Now, the current administration be wary of cutting back the ideals of the New Deal. Social programs are cut to the detriment of the poor and taxes are cut for the benefit of the rich.

Let that administration be wary of cutting back the ideals of the New Deal. For on this anniversary of the birth of the greatest American of this century, the image of FDR still stands tall in the hearts of all Americans.

The Fifth Column

PAUL FILLMORE

Speak your mind

Every semester the Maine Campus receives countless letters on subjects that range from campus politics to public service events.

A majority of the letters we receive are printed on page five of this paper, one of the few places on campus where students, faculty members and university employees can make their opinions heard. The letter's page is perhaps the most widely read page in the whole paper, a fact we journalists sometimes don't like to admit.

A few of the letters we get in the mail are never printed, some because of lack of space, others because of their tasteless content.

Yet we screen all the letters that come in, and with each individual one we must make a fresh judgement.

Last semester, when we received a great many letters on Gay Jeans Day, we were able to be selective in our readers' opinion of the day. We axed more than one of those letters because of its extreme content, and heavily edited others to make them suitable for public consumption.

Yet it is only on issues like the above mentioned where taste is so clearly defined. What is offensive to one person, may not be for the fellow next door, and so on. The people who choose and edit the letters at the Maine Campus are human beings, as are the people who write them.

Many times we print letters we do not agree with. Yet if we were to ignore these letters because of their opinion, we would be defeating the purpose of the letters page. This page belongs to the readers. We are merely custodians whose only job is to make sure the page is full and readable.

Recently, both on the letters page and in person, people questioned some of the letters that have been written about a member of the campus community. My only reply has been that the page belongs to the readers of the paper, whether they are members of the student government or just Orono citizens. There is no way for the staff of the Maine Campus to form the opinions of others. We can hope to sway opinions through our editorial stands, but we cannot change them once they are made.

We encourage all our readers to use this page as a way to let their feelings be known. The Campus provides a community-wide voice to all takers, so keep those letters coming.

EQUAL TIME

The Maine Campus welcomes letters to the editor. Letters should be brief, (300 words or less) and include a name and telephone number. Names will be withheld only under special circumstances. "Anonymous" and open letters, although welcome, will not be published. The Maine Campus reserves the right to edit letters for libel, clarity, taste and to fit available space.

Campus police deserve a 'break'

To the editor:

This letter is written in response to the letter by Ed Ames in the January 27 issue of the Maine Campus.

The letter I'm referring to has the distinctly similar, distasteful taste of any and all other complaints that are brought up about police departments anywhere in this great nation. It's beginning to seem that whenever there's a problem, or something goes wrong, it's the police department's fault. I guess that's the price you pay for being a civil servant.

What nobody at the University seems to think about is the fact that the University of Maine at Orono Police Department works for the university, and is therefore obligated to enforce any rules and regulations that the university decides to set down.

I'd be willing to bet that if you sat down and talked to some of the officers, you'd find out that they're just as fed up with the university system as we are. You might also find out that they're not bad guys after all.

Yes, they have their faults and they aren't perfect. And yes, they have their days when they're mad and grouchy and ready to nail anybody who crosses them, but doesn't everybody? I've heard complaints about them too. But I've also heard a lot of good things about them too.

And think of the abuse they have to put up with on a daily basis. Don't you think your actions might be affected if you were being verbally abused by some low-mouthed college punk who's been caught doing something wrong and is pissed off because he's going to get punished for it?

As for the high visibility of police cars, they aren't just out there patrolling for the bad guys. Most of the cars are tied up all day doing money and other kinds of transports from the business office, credit union, student aid, and other various organizations. Also unknown to some people is that the fire department and the ambulance come under Police and Safety. Every time some bright college student pulls a fire alarm to get his jollies, a police officer has to go to the scene to see what the problem is. Or every time somebody gets hurt or sick and needs an ambulance, two police officers are pulled off their beat, one to drive the ambulance and one to go to the scene to help until attendants get there.

There are a lot of good things about the police department that people don't see, so lighten up a little bit, they're trying!

Co-op promotion was 'frat attack'

To the editor:

Lisa Cooley, I was truly sorry when your attempt to promote co-ops degenerated into an attack on fraternities. I, too, believe co-operatives could be positive in the growth of a student but why at the expense of fraternities?

A fraternity is also a live-in cooperative of a kind. I know about and have helped to construct and hope to sustain as an alternative way of life, and is a place where men coexist, trying to better their lives, and through social projects, the lives of many ideas, a process of give and take, to increase productivity to society and self. Here also we are human, as there are clashes and fights, and tension often happens. And I have felt and enjoyed the feeling of a fraternity working together.

And now comes the main reason for my response, your obvious lack of knowledge of fraternities. Fraternities are exclusive of women in the aspect of living quarters but many fraternities have "sister" programs in which each person takes part in the Educational, Social, and Social Service experience, a base upon which fraternities were founded. You see, we realize that exclusion is unrealistic, and move to deter this. And as for trying to equate an all-male or all-female dorm to an established fraternity, your examples are pitifully off-base.

You also try to show yourself as a well-rounded, free of bias individual, striving to squash stereotypes. Then (to my dismay) you stereotype fraternities. Saying they breed "macho" types and call, by your own admission, a pretty nice guy, the misnomer, frat rat.

I don't know why you are so bitterly sarcastic of fraternities but saying "I don't care, frankly, that your frat men have become leaders in society" portrays you as closed-minded as you like to portray fraternities.

In conclusion, your statement that co-operatives provide a more positive change in society than fraternities is shown to be totally nonfactual, unresearched, and biased. It is unfortunate that you are not as open as you wish to be.

Douglas H. Banks
Bangor

I moved to Bangor to increase my education, not to find a "better" lifestyle. And I would still promote fraternities to those who have questions.

Senior week is coming

To the editor:

In an effort to ensure that no hardship is encountered by any organization (including my own), I would like to announce "Senior Week 1982" in hopes that campus organizations could plan accordingly. "Senior Week 1982" will be March 1st through 5th this year. The Senior Council has tentatively planned many activities for that week including the very important Class Meeting on March 2nd at 3:30 pm and the Senior Formal Friday, March 5th. I hope that any organization with Senior members will keep this week in mind when planning events. I also hope that any organization who has already set dates for events that conflict with ours will not be adversely effected (I hope we aren't either).

I would also like to take this opportunity to ask the members of the campus community to remember all Seniors during this week. The end of four long years approaches - Let's make this a time that all Seniors will remember!

MPAC is ludicrous

Why is it that every time that I see the initials "MPAC" they are usually in context with some totally ludicrous issue? It would seem that whomever is running MPAC or supplying it with ideas is not playing with a full deck.

I have two friends that went to one of their lectures on bilateral disarmament. There is nothing wrong with this because bilateral disarmament is one of the plans to reduce the threat of nuclear weapons proliferation and nuclear war. But it was shortly after this that an article about what was happening in the student government appeared in the Campus. In this article MPAC came out saying that we live in a police state and that we should diminish the power of the central government and return the power to the people.

They also came out in favor of arming the public and hiring mercenaries to train the people in the time honored art of killing. Another thing that they came out in favor of was not recognizing Reagan's government.

It later came to my attention that these movements were just about laughed out of the senate and were tabled indefinitely. Now I realize that every place has a few radicals but I have never seen such a concentration of them. I hope that nobody can be influenced by such blatantly stupid ideas because if they are then this country is in trouble.

Professor invents star-map game

by Sean Brodrick
Staff Writer

If you've been studying the stars at night and trying to figure out which was which, a UMO professor has come up with a game for you.

The game is called Stellar 28 and has been invented by Neil Comins, assistant professor of physics, and Ronald Littlefield, who now works for National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The game, which took two and a half years to get from planning to production, consists of a mapboard and two sets of 52 cards. The cards show the constellations, their names and translations of the names, and the major stars included in them. It is called Stellar 28 because there are 28 different variations people can play.

Comins said he plans to use Stellar 28 in the astronomy course he teaches, in which he plans to require that his students learn the constellations.

"I am going to give the students several options," Comins said. "They can go to the planetarium or buy this game." The game will be sold for $6.95.

Comins said there is no conflict of interest involved in selling to students a game he invented and gets profits from.

"There is no conflict of interest because the game is not required and the university has checked with its legal department and found no conflict of interest," Comins said.

Hubbard Scientific is the company manufacturing the game, and it will be available nationwide and perhaps worldwide, Comins said. Stellar 28 can be played both solitaire and in groups, and is intended to reinforce the kinds of things his students are going to be learning in class, he said.

Comins said the game will be available in about two weeks on campus, and people will be able to buy copies from him, the bookstore and the planetarium. "I prefer that people buy it from me," Comins said with a grin, "because: I make more money that way."

Comins and Littlefield are planning to invent more games, some on cardboard maps like the first one and some electronic Comins said. The electronic games probably won't be of the television cassette variety though, he said, "because they are too easy to rip off."

New doctor expected to join Cutler staff

by Ellen York
Staff Writer

The Cutler Health Center staff is expecting a new doctor to join them early next month.

Dr. Michael Sargent was approved by the Board of Trustees last Monday, said Jo Anne Magill, clerk to the Board of Trustees, and will begin work at the health center on Feb. 8.

Dr. George W. Wood III, director of the Cutler Health Center, said he is delighted that Sargent will joining the staff.

Sargent, a graduate of Dartmouth Medical School, was a resident in pediatrics at the University of New Mexico and had a fellowship in pediatrics and cardiology at the University of Maine and Husson and practiced pediatrics in the Brunswick/Bath area.

Wood said the University of North Carolina had noted Sargent's ability to teach and ease in teaching. "This, will be useful in the health education and preventative medicine program on campus," he said.

Sargent, 31, and his wife, Catherine, are originally from New Jersey, said Wood, adding Mrs. Sargent is a nurse and a carpenter.

"Sargent is active in sports and medicine and has worked with high school teams. He is also a ski patroller," said Wood.

Twenty-five people applied for the job and Sargent was one of four who were selected to be interviewed by an advisory committee, consisting of five members, said Wood.

Wood said he "was pleased" the committee had chosen Sargent, who had been Wood's choice also.

Student seeks future in study of reptiles

by David Walker
Staff Writer

Reptiles to sophomore Paul Utterback mean trips to the wilds of the south looking for rare snakes and lizards, owning creatures such as his iguana-like South American Tegu, and forming "Exotic Pets of Albany," a reptile distribution company.

His fascination for reptiles extends back to a young age when his older brother gave him a present of several reptiles.

In Utterback's early high school years he began to record the habits and critical factors affecting his reptiles' behavior. He kept up those records for three years.

"I've learned more from these animals than I ever could have learned from structured academia," said Utterback, who is a zoology major.

His courses and future plans revolve around herpetology, the study of reptiles.

Reptiles have taken Utterback on three occasions into the wild areas of the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida where he and friends searched for species to collect and observe.

"One walk revealed an alligator with several week old babies in a swamp reputed to be thick with rattlesnakes. Only one poisonous snake was encountered, a six foot Timber Rattlesnake we caught, observed and released," Utterback said.

Working closely with the zoology department at UMO, Utterback is hoping to collaborate with Dr. Dowse, instructor in zoology, on his work in comparative neurology. He will be contributing information on serial sectioning of reptile brains.

Included in Utterback's 20 credit course load are two graduate courses: Advanced Vertebrate Dissection and Experimental Embryology, the embryonic development of vertebrates.

"I'm glad I have the opportunity to take graduate courses. I don't look at these as courses, as such, but as independent interests. I'm more than grateful for the support and generosity extended by the zoology department since I've been at UMO," Utterback said.

In June of last year Utterback and a friend, William MacArthur, formed their own company, Exotic Pets of Albany. Utterback and his friend purchase reptiles from large distributors and sell them to individual clients.

Last summer Exotic Pets of Albany made several hundred dollars, Utterback said. However, selling reptiles in Maine is illegal. Therefore, Utterback is planning to move back to New York where he grew up.

Utterback is now applying to Cornell where he plans to study Herpetology, Neurobiology and Behavior as a "special student." Although he's met with wholehearted cooperation from the zoology department at UMO, he seeks a school with more courses offered in his area of interest.

In order to dispel some common myths shared about reptiles, Utterback explained there are no "slimey" reptiles. Their small scales only give that impression. He also added that reptiles are never cold. Their temperature is the same as their environment's which must be fairly warm for them to survive.

Dozier freed of 42-day kidnap: Terrorists assailed by commandos

PADUA, ITALY (AP) -Ten Italian commandos burst into an apartment where terrorists held Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier at gunpoint, seized five of the kidnappers and freed the American from his 42-day ordeal at the hands of the Red Brigades.

The leftist terrorists sent a series of communiques to Italian newspapers denouncing Dozier as one of those responsible for the U.S. "military occupation" of Europe and saying he was being put on trial before a "people's tribunal." They never set conditions for his release.

Italian police arrested a number of suspected Red Brigades members, but the break came when the police recently cracked the Red Brigades' "column" operating in the Verona area, U.S. officials said.

"It was a textbook operation. They cracked the column, the people talked and they followed up every single lead. They did it right and it worked," said one American official, who asked not to be identified.

Police said they finally zeroed in on the Padua "prison," above a supermarket, Wednesday night, but decided to wait until daylight because a night raid might further endanger Dozier. The terrorists apparently drove Dozier straight to the Padua apartment after the kidnapping, they said.

The raid lasted just 90 seconds, police said.

The 10 commandos, in bulletproof vests, broke down the door of the four-room apartment at 11:35 a.m., police said.

Victim seen in Williams' car, witness testifies in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) -A witness testified Thursday that she saw one of the city's young black slaying victims slumped over with his eyes shut in a car driven by Wayne B. Williams, and that the youth failed to respond when she called his name.

Nellie Trammell told jurors at Williams' murder trial that she saw 20-year-old Larry Rogers, a neighbor, with the defendant in a green station wagon on March 30, 1981, the day Rogers disappeared. He was found dead 10 days later.

"I said, 'Larry?' He didn't say anything," she said, her testimony was the fourth time prosecution witnesses have placed Williams with one of the 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period have been investigated by a police task force.

Mrs. Trammell said the car Williams was driving had cut in front of her car last March 30 and then turned around slowly enough for her to try to talk to Rogers.

"When I looked over, I looked at this man's face, and Larry Rogers was in the seat and he was like this," she said, shutting her eyes and leaning against the side of the witness stand.

Mrs. Trammell said on cross-examination that she was not concerned about seeing Rogers under those conditions because, "I thought he was trying to hide, he didn't want anyone to see him because he was with a newsman."

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and aspiring music promoter, is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, two of those blacks on the task force list.

They disarmed a man in the corridor of the apartment, and moved into a room where four other terrorists - two men and two women - were holding Dozier in a tent. Police hit the man who was pointing a gun at Dozier's head with the butt of a rifle and the others gave up, police said.

"Wonderful! Okay! Police!" they quoted Dozier as saying in English. "Thank you! Thank you!"

The U.S. ambassador to Italy, Maxwell M. Rabb, later reported Dozier told him by telephone. "At the moment I was rescued, a gun was pointed at me and I did not know whether that was my last moment. You must realize how great was my feeling of relief when I was taken in hand by the Italian authorities."

Police identified three of the suspects as Antonio Savasta and Emilio Libera, both from the Rome "column" of the urban guerrilla gang and Cesare Lenardo, 22, from Udine.

It was the first kidnapping of a non-Italian by the Red Brigades in their decade of hit-and-run attacks on industrialists, judges, journalists and politicians. Both Italian officials and the terrorists themselves said the abduction was a "quantum leap" in the attacks by the Red Brigades, who in 1978 kidnapped and murdered former premier Aldo Moro.

The raid was the first time in seven years that police had discovered a Red Brigades hideout in the course of a kidnapping. In 1975, police stormed a farmhouse hideout near Turin and rescued hostage Vittorio Gancia, an industrialist.

Starved climbers saved by rescue, effort claims life of volunteer

LITTLETON, N.H. (AP) -Two climbers, frost bitten and starving after wandering aimlessly through the deadly cold of Mount Washington, prayed that "if we were going to die, we'd do it then."

"We couldn't do anything. We were just lying there," Jeffrey Batzer, 20, said from his hospital bed Thursday. "We were praying that if we were going to die, it would happen soon. We were in an extreme amount of pain."

For more than 73 hours, with only the clothes they were wearing for protection, the two ice climbers from Pennsylvania stumbled and crawled in waist-deep snow and slept as winds approached 100 mph and the cold hit 28 degrees below zero on the Northeast's tallest peak. By Tuesday, they were beaten.

"We were trying to die," said Hugh Herr, 17, a high school junior. "We were in such pain. We were already out three days. The starvation was really bad. At that point, I was 90 percent sure I'd die."

A snowshoer at 2 p.m. Tuesday found the climbers dazed, frostbitten and suffering from extreme loss of body heat. Within five hours, they were airlifted in the dark by helicopter to Littleton Hospital, where an official called their condition "miraculous."

The rescue effort claimed the life of volunteer mountaineer Albert Dow, 27 killed Monday in a freak avalanche.

"When I first heard about it, I cried. I just broke down," said Batzer, whose hands and feet were damaged by the merciless cold. "For somebody to put his life out on the limb, voluntarily, for us, is something incredible."

If their frozen feet mend - doctors say amputation can't be ruled out for three weeks or more - Herr and Batzer said they will resume climbing and will join rescue teams like Dow's. "We feel we owe it because somebody died for us," Batzer said. "Even if he didn't die we still owe it because people saved our lives."

Nuclear plant operating after eroded pipe repaired

MONTPELIER, Vt., AP -

The Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant went back on line early Thursday after officials plugged a steam leak caused by eroded piping had become worn away on the inside, releasing a "wisp" of radioactive steam in the turbine room earlier this week, plant spokesman Steven Stoll said.

The one-half inch piece of steel pipe was replaced and the plant was back on line about 3:40, he said.

Stoll said a similar problem of eroded piping was discovered through ultra sonic testing during an inspection on one of the three other moisture separators.

We found a similar problem beginning in one of the other moisture separators and we went ahead and repaired it," Stoll said.

The pipes became eroded as the result of a normal reaction to the steam and water which travels through them, Stoll said.

He said there was no danger involved in the escape of radioactive steam shortly before plant was shut down at midnight Monday.

"It was so small you couldn't even put a leak rate on it," Stoll said. "There were absolutely no radiological problems associated with it."

The 540-megawatt Vernon plant should be operating at full power by this weekend, Stoll said.

"We started up the reactor and everything is going very well," he said, "We should be back on the grid this afternoon and reach full power this weekend."

Ratepayers are expected to pay highers bills as a result of the two-day shutdown because replacement power costs up to 20 times as much as electricity generated by the plant.

Stoll said the piping is ten years old, and like much of the piping at the plant, is susceptible to erosion.

"We expect corrosion and erosion in a steam plant," Stoll said. "It's nothing new, it's something you are aware does take place."

The plant had problems last year when it was discovered that 350 feet of corroded piping needed to be replaced.

News briefs

AUGUSTA, MAINE (AP) -A 14-month campaign to force a referendum on abolishing wholesale and retail milk-price supports apparently was won Thursday, as its organizers announced they had collected far more than enough signatures to put the proposal on the November ballot.

"Maine consumers will finally have the opportunity to decide for themselves" whether milk prices should continue to be regulated, said state Sen. Dennis Dutremble, D-Biddeford, before turning over more than 44,000 signatures to secretary of State Rodney Quinn.

In Portland, meanwhile, the Maine Milk Commission came under a renewed legal attack Thursday by its long-time foe, Cumberland Farms Northern Inc., a Massachusetts-based chain with 25 Maine stores.

LEWISTON, MAINE (AP) Organizers of the Lewiston State Fair - a local tradition for more than a century - say financial problems have finished the agricultural show.

Lewiston Raceway officials said they will continue to operate a carnival, but the agricultural events that began in 1852 are over.

Leonard Pooler, general manager of the fairgrounds, said the fair lost money for several years, he said it was a decision between the fair or an extended harness racing season, and the horses won.

OAKLAND, CALIF. (AP) -Since his days as a semi-professional boxer and World War II Army sergeant, Ed Daly has been a fighter. He's always been happy to take on the long odds. Today, the odds might be the longest in Daly's career.

Edward Joseph Daly, 59, is president, board chairman and principal owner of World Airways, an airline he bought for $50,000 in 1950 when air travel business was mapped out with bare knuckles as often as in board rooms.

Beginning with the lease of two war surplus Curtiss-Wright C-46 cargo transports, Daly built World Airways into the largest charter airline in the country. It is authorized to ferry cargo or passengers to virtually every country in the world.

WASHINGTON (AP) -Just two days after President Reagan proposed dismantling much of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal, Congress is Celebrating the centennial of FDR's birth.

Congress held its second joint session this week - the first was Reagan's State of the Union Message to commemorate Roosevelt, who was born Jan. 30, 1882.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -Tattered flags still flutter beside the bridges over San Francisco Bay and along the freeways of Los Angeles County warning motorists they are entering a Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine zone.

Although it's winter, and most flies are dormant, helicopters sometimes buzz overhead spraying a pesticide mist, as California presses its $80 million battle against the medfly.

CAIRO, EGYPT (AP) -Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., plunging deeply into the intricate details of the Middle East peace process, brought on state Thursday a U.S. official touted as an "expediter" for the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks between Egypt and Israel.

In back-to-back trips to Jerusalem and Cairo - his second Middle East shuttle in two weeks - Haig planted some specific ideas he hopes will narrow the "many differences" in the positions of the two countries and revive deadlocked autonomy negotiations on the future of the 1.3 million Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip.

Haig made clear here and in Jerusalem that only a few formalities stand in the way of the appointment of Richard Fairbanks, a lawyer and campaign supporter of President Reagan, as his special assistant to press for progress in the autonomy talks.

Turkish consul assassinated, Armenians claim responsibility

LOS ANGELES AP--Turkey's consul general was assassinated Thursday by two gunmen who fired eight to 10 shots at him as he sat in his car stopped at a red light, police said. Armenian terrorists claimed responsibility for the slaying.

"We have just shot a Turkish diplomat in Los Angeles," said a caller who identified himself as representing the Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide. The anonymous call was received by the Associated Press in Washington.

Armenian nationalists accuse the Turks of slaughtering 1.5 million of their countrymen in Turkey in 1915, a massacre the Turkish government has never acknowledged.

Police Lt. Dan Cooks identified the dead man as Consul General Kemal Arikan. He said two men apparently approached Arikan's car and opened fire with at least one pistol at 9:55 a.m. on busy Wilshire Boulevard at the corner of Comstock Avenue, then got in another car and sped away.

In a January 1978 interview with the Los Angeles Times, Arikan had expressed fear for his life because of various threats he had received from Armenian terrorists. He said he wore bulletproof vests and hired two bodyguards to accompany him at all times and carefully scrutinized all visitors to his office.

A secretary at the consulate said Arikan had been consul general about three years. He was married and had two children, she said.

"The car was approached at a traffic light by two white males. One walked up to the driver's side and the other went to the passenger's side," said a woman who works in the West Los Angeles police detective bureau and did not want to be identified.

Cooke said no other people were hit but the Fire Department sent two ambulances to the scene, said fire spokesman Steve Ventura.

Rick Collette and Harry Warrington, who were both working the area, said Arikan's white Ford LTD sedan was stopped at a light going east on Wilshire. They said they heard about eight to 10 rapid gunshots and looked up to see the car shoot across the intersection with the driver slumped over the wheel. The consular car hit an oncoming car and came to a stop.

Warrington said he saw what appeared to be a getaway car speed away and also "two young guys" running away.

The anonymous caller played a recorded message that said "Our revolutionary struggle began in 1975...our sole targets are Turkish diplomats and institutions."

Today's shooting was the latest in a series of incidents against the local Turkish community by groups claiming to be Armenian terrorists.

On Oct. 6, 1980, two gasoline bombs were tossed at Arikan's Bel-Air home. One week later, a local Turkish travel agency was bombed by individuals claiming to have from the same group. There were no arrests in either case.

Hockey team to face Clarkson, St. Lawrence

by John Toole
Staff Writer

The only thing bothering hockey fans about this weekend, is that the Maine Black Bears are on the road. The Black Bears are playing two of the top teams in Division I, but the games are in New York—a long way from the friendly confines of the Harold Alfond Sports Arena.

Maine will square off against the St. Lawrence Saints and the Clarkson Golden Knights. St. Lawrence would seem to be enough of a challenge for the struggling Black Bears (6-13), but Clarkson is simply awesome.

The Golden Knights are 18-2-2, including a solid 8-1-1 performance in Div. I.

Clarkson has lost to New Hampshire and Yale and been tied by Boston University and Alberta. The team is currently ranked first in the Eastern College Athletic Conference and number two in the nation.

To make things tougher for UMO, Clarkson is an impressive 6-1 at home.

Left wing Bill Norton is not among the top five scoring leaders for the Golden Knights. Bill Norton is also a top prospect of the Montreal Canadiens, the National Hockey League team that owns his rights.

Clarkson happens to have one of the best goalies in the country. Don Sylvestri is the first freshman to be selected as an All-American.

Sylvestri had a 90.4 save percentage last year and is around that percent this season. Sylvestri is the property of the Boston Bruins and may be the best goalie to come out if an American college since Tony Esposito.

If those two players don't scare you, then consider this little bit of information. Of all the players on the roster, only two are studying in the social sciences and none are majoring in physical education.

Most of the players are studying pre-law or accounting. Now that's scary. Not only is Clarkson the best hockey team in the east, but possibly the smartest, too.

What is even more amazing is that the Golden Knights have enjoyed all this success despite losing two All-Americans to graduation.

The Black Bears will have to elude Clarkson skaters if they hope to win.

Black Bears head to Philadelphia

by Ernie Clark
Staff Writer

The road is a very lonely place for most people, and basketball teams are no exception.

Witness the University of Maine Black Bears, 6-12 overall and 1-8 in official road contests this season after a 79-55 loss to Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind. Wednesday. Add to that road record a 1-3 mark at Portland's Cumberland County Civic Center and a win at the Bangor Auditorium, and one might think of the Black Bears as a group of professional businessmen hopping a redeye special on the average of twice a week.

This weekend, the seemingly season-long road trip takes the Maine club to the land of liberty bells and W.C. Fields, Philadelphia, for a Saturday afternoon (2 p.m.) clash against East Coast Conference power Drexel. Coming off a 77-67 win at Fairleigh-Dickinson Wednesday, the Dragons are 12-6 overall and tied with the future Maine opponent Temple (Feb. 3 at the Bangor Auditorium) for the ECC's Eastern Division lead with a 6-0 conference record.

The Dragons are led by 6-6 senior guard Randy Burkert (13.4 ppg, 6.6 rpg) sophomore forward Rich Congo (11.3 ppg, 6.3 rpg). Some Maine fans might remember Burkert and another member of Drexel's three-forward offense, 6-9 sophomore forward Mike Mitchell, from Maine's 57-51 win last season over the Dragons in which Burkert and Mitchell constituted the bulk of the Dragon offense while the Maine defense put a clamp around graduated Drexel scoring machine Len Hatzenbeller.

Six-two guard Derrick Joynes is the only other member of Coach Ed Burke's club to score in double figures, averaging 10.1 per game coming off the bench.

Maine suffered its fourth straight defeat in falling to the Irish Wednesday. Cold shooting and tight Notre Dame defense limited the Black Bears to just 12 points during the contest's first 15 minutes. Meanwhile, junior guard John Paxson (brother of the Portland Trailblazers' Jim) dropped in 18 of his game-high 24 points as Digger Phelps' club waltzed to a 37-23 halftime lead.

More of the same marked the second half, as only Black Bear center

Jeff Cross and forward Clay Pickering could muster any measure of offense against the improving (6-9) Irish. Cross finished with 22 points against the quick Irish front line.

Meador selected to All-New England team

by Nancy Storey
Staff Writer

Billy Meador, a junior midfielder from West Springfield, Mass., has been named to the All-New England second team in soccer, it was announced in December.

This marks only the third time in the history of soccer at the University of Maine that a player has been named to the All-New England team.

Meador, who was chosen by New England coaches to the team, has been a leading scorer for Maine for the past three years. For the 1981 season, he was third in scoring with 11 points, scoring five goals and one assist.

Meador is the first player under coach Doug Biggs to be awarded this honor, and Biggs said he feels Meador really deserves it.

"Billy is an intense, dynamic player who makes things happen when he gets the ball,"

Billy Meador

Biggs said. "He's very intelligent on the field, he's technically very good and he reads the game extremely well."

Meador was a key defensive factor for the Bears in 1981 and he has the ability to play almost every position on the field.

Biggs said this was a very high honor for Meador to receive and he was "among good company. A number of players on the New England team were drafted by professional teams."

Ted Woodbrey was the last player from Maine to be named to the All-New England team. Woodbrey, who graduated in 1977, was selected to the team during all four of his years at Maine. Mike Brodrent was the only other Maine selection and he made it in 1973.

Swim team to host LaSalle University

by Cavanaugh Kelly
Staff Writer

The UMO men's swim team, coming off successive vacation break wins, takes on tough LaSalle University this Saturday afternoon in what shapes up as their toughest meet of the season.

The Bears beat both East Carolina and John Hopkins at the Wallace pool on the eleventh and fourteenth of January. "We had a very good meet against East Carolina. In many respects it was better than I thought it would be," said head coach Ken Switzer.

Individual stars for UMO were veterans Chuck Martin and Richard Wells. Martin took the 1,000 and 500 meter free-style, while Wells took the 100 and 20 meter breaststroke.

Switzer said he was also pleased with the performances of youngsters Brian Dolan, a freshman, and Pete Zeiger. "Brian put in an excellent performance in qualifying for the championships in the 100 meter intermediate. Peter Zeiger also looked good in winning the 200."

Against John Hopkins it was much the same story. "We were tired but put in a good performance," said Switzer. Chuck Martin again looked good as did Justin Merrill and David Morrisette. "Overall, in both meets we looked solid," said Switzer. "We filled a lot of holes with young swimmers, but we still have to strengthen ourselves considerably to be competitive in the Eastern Seaboard Championships."

This Saturday's meet against LaSalle at the Wallace Pool should provide an excellent test for Switzer's swimmers. LaSalle is currently ranked fourth in the eastern seaboard, behind swimming powers Harvard and West Virginia.

Bears head to Farmington, Plymouth

by Ken Waltz
Staff writer

The UMO women's basketball team will again be traveling this weekend as they head to the University of Maine at Farmington Friday and then to Plymouth State College in New Hampshire on Saturday.

The Black Bears, coming off an important state win over the University of Southern Maine last Friday night 53-40, will be trying to keep the tough defense that helped them stop the Huskies.

Maine fortunes will depend heavily on the play of their two co-captains Cathy Nason and Beth Hamilton this weekend. Nason, a point guard and team leader, is averaging 9.8 points per game and has 37 total assists. Hamilton, a 5'11" junior, led the club in total points with 108 and is currently averaging 13.5 points per game. She is also nursing a couple of sore ankles and may be hampered this weekend.

Other Maine players doing well this season are sophomore Lisa Cormier and freshman Marcia Grant. Cormier is averaging 6.8 points per game and Grant is averaging 5.5 rebounds per game.

You can catch the women Black Bears on WMEB Friday and Saturday nights.
