Student arrested in robbery-stabbing at BCC

by Richard Mulhern
staff writer

A 28-year old UMO student was arrested Friday night in connection with a burglary and stabbing incident at the student apartments at Bangor Community College.

Donald P. Murphy, of 236 York St., Bangor, a first-year mechanical engineering technology major, was charged with burglary, aggravated assault and possession of a schedule X drug. He was being held at the Penobscot County Jail Sunday, in lieu of $14,500 double surety bail.

Police said Murphy forcibly entered apartment seven at 120 Cleveland Street, using a knife to pry open a lock on a bedroom window. Murphy then ransacked two bedrooms, removing a radio and chainsaw, placing them outside the window, police said.

Murphy was attempting to remove a television set from the window, when Lori Perrigo and Steven Hasenfus returned to the apartment, police said. Murphy fled through the window and was pursued and tackled by Hasenfus, police said.

Police said Murphy drew a knife and stabbed Hasenfus in the hand. At that point, a resident of a nearby apartment and three Army National Guard members arrived on the scene, disarming and subduing Murphy, police said.

Hasenfus was taken to the Eastern Maine Medical Center for treatment of the knife wound to his hand.

Sigma Phi Epsilon put on probation

by Mary Ellen Matava
Staff Writer

Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity has been put on probation for one year and was given several other sanctions as the result of hazing by the fraternity, Dwight Rideout, dean of student affairs said.

Rand said he became aware of the hazing incident through information he received from the UMO Department of Police and Safety. "The police did most of the investigation," Rand said. He did not elaborate on the specific incident which brought about the charges.

Besides the one year probation, Sig Ep must develop a new pledge program with no components of hazing in it, and must have a house parent live in the house. The Sig Ep house must close from May 16 to August 30.

Rand said he decided on the sanctions for Sig Ep, along with William Lucy, dean of student activities, Thomas Aceto, vice president for student affairs and Alan Reynolds, director of police and safety.

Student aid rally in Augusta has poor turnout

by Michael Davis
Staff Writer

Only 75 students, representing colleges including UMO, Bates, Bowdoin, and Colby, staged a rally Saturday against federal aid cuts at the capital building. More than 300 people were expected to attend, Alan Zeichick, a member of UMO Student Government said.

The attendance was "very disappointing" due to lack of adequate publicity, and poor transportation to Augusta, he said. But the student government press conference announcing the rally was covered by all three Bangor television stations as well as the Bangor daily News and the Maine Campus.

The Student Government Board would have rented a bus for Orono residents, however, at least 40 people were needed to do that. By Friday noon, the board had made only 20 reservations and so the reservations were cancelled.

"I guess the spring semester is not the time to stage a demonstration," Zeichick said, "because everyone is getting ready for final exams."

But the letter writing campaign conducted last week will show Congress that we (students of Maine) are not going to take financial aid cuts sitting down. A large part of the voters who turn out on election day are college students," he said.

Senator George Mitchell, appearing at UMO recently, had said that an effective way to fight proposed student aid cuts was to write letters to Congress. Since then, the ad hoc Committee in Support of Higher Education has mailed 1,240 letters and post cards in protest of Reaganomics. An additional 2,000 letters were sent from the graduate board.

Jon Linsey, student government vice president, said the idea for a letter writing campaign and the rally in August came upon the board "unexpectedly." Thus, the project may not have received adequate publicity.

Linsey had said the ad hoc Education Committee proposed it Tuesday, leaflets advertising the rally were supplied by Student Government, The Inter Dormitory Board, and the Off Campus Board. The following Monday, student government secure a table in Memorial Union where a large percent of letter writing took place.

"We hope students will continue writing the Congress," Linsey said. "Legislators will vote on the bill May 15."

The proposed budget cuts President Reagan has proposed will significantly reduce student financial aid projects including Guaranteed Students Loans, National Direct Students Loans, Work Study, and Pell Grants.

Athletic director to retire

by Paul Tukey
staff writer

With his "deep regret and reluctance", UMO President Dr. Paul H. Silverman announced the retirement Friday of UMO physical education and athletic director Harold S. Westerman.

The retirement of Westerman, 64, who has been coach and athletic director at UMO for 33 years, will become effective at the end of the current academic year.

At his home Sunday, Westerman said the decision to retire has been a tough one. "It's been a difficult decision but there comes a time for everyone. I've been here 33 years and I'm at the normal retirement age," he said.

President Silverman said although he regrets Westerman's decision, he understands and respects it and he offered praise to Westerman and his accomplishments. "Westy has been a dedicated and loyal servant of this university, his leadership abilities and integrity have served the institution well. I know he is highly respected throughout the country for his knowledge and ideals in the matter of collegiate athletic competition."

Westerman graduated from the University of Michigan in 1942, where he played both football and baseball. In 1949 he was hired as assistant coach of the UMO football team and he became head coach in 1951.

In his 16 years as head coach, his football teams won 80, lost 38 and tied seven and went undefeated in 1951 and 1961. His 1965 team won the Lambert Cup as the best small college (see 'decision' p 8)

Athletic director Harold Westerman will be leaving his position May 31.

★ Police Blotter ★

by Richard Mulhern
staff writer

George H. Bothwick, 21 of Orono was arrested Thursday night on charges of operating under the influence and criminal mischief. Bothwick was also summonsed on a charge of failure to sign a uniform traffic ticket. Stopped on Sebago Road, he was later transported to the Penobscot County Jail. A passenger in Bothwick's car, David W. Dwelley, 22 of Bangor, was arrested on a charge of obstruction of government administration. Dwelley was released on $200 personal recognizance.

Two York Hall residents reported the theft Friday night of 55 record albums and 26 cassette tapes from their unlocked apartment. The value of the records and tapes was estimated at $648.

Louis M. Paquet, 22, of Freeport, Maine, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of operating under the influence. Paquet was taken to the Penobscot County Jail where he was later released on $700 personal recognizance.

A Chadbourne Hall resident reported the theft Sunday of a Panasonic portable AM-FM cassette player and a Sanyo belt clip cassette player from his unlocked room. The value of the two items was estimated at $350.

Francis R. Tighe, 22, of North Sebago, Maine, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of operating under the influence. Tighe was later released on $700.

A York Village resident reported the theft of a back pack Thursday from the bookdrop at the bookstore in the Memorial Union. The value of the L.L. Bean back pack and an enclosed textbook was estimated at $46.

An Oxford Hall resident reported the theft Friday of a set of imitation wire wheels from her car while it was parked in the Oxford lot. The wheels were valued at $100.

Vacancies plague Residential Life

by Marshall Murphy
Staff Writer

A lack of counseling between students and professors may be the reason behind nearly 300 boarding vacancies in UMO residency halls, Ross Moriarty, director of residential life said.

"Between the first and second semester there are a lot of academic dismissals, but even so we were off in our estimation of how many men and women were going to be living in the dorms," Moriarty said.

Moriarty said that many incoming freshmen need advice on scheduling problems and study skills. When students cannot get this advice and counseling they become easily discouraged and the threat of academic dismissal is possible, thus the number of room and boarding vacancies.

The counseling program is the idea of Paul Harris, associate professor of animal and veterinary sciences at UMO. This program would be a way of better counseling between advisor and student and a way of keeping students in school and in the dormitories. Harris was unavailable for comment on his counseling program.

Moriarty stresses while he thought Harris's program sounded very promising, it is still only in the planning stages.

The 299 vacancies in the dormitories means a loss of big money to Residential Life. "We have lost $379,000 due to vacancies in the dormitories," Moriarty said.

Nancy Arsenault, resident director of Oxford Hall, said that presently there was only one or two vacancies in Oxford. "While vacancies are not a problem in Oxford, they may be a problem in other dormitories because of academic dismissals, and some cases a lack of money," she said.

Moriarty said there are more vacancies in either all-male or all female dormitories. "Many students like to make the move to co-ed dormitories," he said.

As far as the number of vacancies goes, residential life expects a certain amount each semester. "We knew we would be down in the number of people living in the dormitories, we are always down in the second semester, but this semester we had 100 more vacancies than we expected," Moriarty said.

Moriarty said that if the federal cuts in financial aid become a reality it will definitely affect residential life. "If total enrollment goes down at UMO, we will definitely see a decline in the number of students living in the dorms, but you also have to remember that there are less college age students that are considering college these days," Moriarty said.

Sigma Phi Epsilon gets probation

"It was a group action, but the decision came down to me," he said.

Rand said Sig Ep was very cooperative throughout the investigation process. "It is not as much an adversarial situation as it seems. They are very interested in changing their program," Rand said.

"They were very frank about it," Rand said. "They deserve credit."

Sig Ep president, Raymond Bertiaume said, "We have an alternate pledge program that is pretty much the same, but we've cut out some things and added others."

Rand said, "This fraternity has an excellent reputation on this campus, I really feel Sig Ep will make the changes it needs to make."

Sig Ep's grand president Bob Jones flew up to UMO from his home in Florida to participate in the conference in which the sanctions the fraternity was to receive were decided. "He helped us out a lot," Bertiaume said.

"He realized what had happened was hazing," Rand said.

"It wasn't extreme hazing," Rand said. "But too many times when things are considered minor hazing they end up being more dangerous."

He said the UMaine board of trustees has adopted a strict policy on hazing. "Dean Lucy sends a letter to each new fraternity pledge congratulating him on his decision to pledge a fraternity. He also informs the pledge of the university's anti-hazing policies, and states they should not be involved with hazing either as a participant or recipient," Rand said.

Chairman tries to save food science department

by Sallie Valley
Staff Writer

As the June 30 deadline for possible elimination of the Food Science Department looms, Gordon Ramsdell, acting chairman of the department, is making an active effort to attempt to save the department.

"If I didn't think there was a chance to save the department I would not be making an effort to contact legislatures and citizens of the need for the department," Ramsdell said. "I think it will take some convincing of university administrators that the state needs the program and it really does. In Nebraska, food science scientists have done work in reconstructing poorer cuts of beef into steak. There is a demand in the state of Maine for new products in the food industry."

Ramsdell said in the past two months he has had offers to help provide assistance to fish processors wishing to develop new products. Ramsdell said at a time when most job markets are in bad shape, jobs in the food science field are available.

"When the department was created in 1947 its main mission was to be a research department. It, since, along with the research it has always done, has picked up a successful graduate program. It has never been successful in stimulating an undergraduate program though a minor is offered in Food Science," Ramsdell said.

Ramsdell said the department has been involved with the development of blueberry pie filling, potato flakes, lobster holding tanks without the use of copper, and elimination of red tail in lobsters.

On March 24 in a letter to Kenneth Wing, dean of the college of Life Sciences and Agriculture, from vice president of research Frederick Hutchinson and from vice president of academic affairs Richard Bowers of they agreed with an analysis of the financial situation of the department. It was then decided to continue the program if adequate funds could be provided by June 30.

If the funds are not found, the program elimination procedure will be reinstated and proceed thru channels to the trustees. In the meantime, those faulty members up for reappointment will be notified that they are not going to be reappointed. If the trustees decide to keep the Food Science department the administration will take back the letters.

Bumstock 10 draws over 2,000 people

by Sean Brodrick
Staff Writer

More than 2,000 people listened to music, drank beer and generally had a good time as Bumstock 10 came to the UMO Cabins on Saturday.

The musical festival started at noon and abruptly ended at 6:10 p.m., when an electricity outage of unknown origin cut power to sound equipment and electric instruments.

"There was really good discipline. I was very impressed," said Molly Campbell, president of the Off-Campus Board and one of the organizers of the event. "There were no fights, no motorcycle crowds tearing up the field, and we got the music playing on time."

When asked if there was going to be a Bumstock 11 next year, Campbell smiled and said "wouldn't everybody like to know," and left it at that.

When the power went out, people were forced back on non-electric music and the sound of bagpipes filled the air. Scot Heney of Orono, dressed in a resplendent Scottish Highlander's uniform, strode through the crowd blowing his bagpipes.

Some celebrants noted that there had been attempts to commercialize Bumstock, especially two giant inflated Budweiser beer cans which towered 30 feet over the parking lots of two nearby stores.

Midway through the afternoon about 20 Cabineers and friends sang "Will the Circle Be Unbroken." Campbell said it was "symbolic of the Cab-in's current state of affairs" because of their impending closure. Kirby Wharton, a Cabineer, said the song "made things a lot nicer, it was about a family and friends being together."

Chris McEvoy, a former OCB president, said Bumstock 10 was "as good or better than" past Bumstocks up until the blackout. He commented on the good behavior of the crowd, and said the only time there was a chance of any trouble was when the music ended so suddenly. Luckily no such trouble occurred, he said.

Cabins band consisting of Myron Buck, Marc Laplante, Mark Puglisi, Kirby Wharton, Holly Denning and Ben Lewando; and One Last Swing. The Greenhouse Band, The Catch, and Jehovah's Favorite Choir were cancelled by the power loss.

There was fun for all ages at Bumstock Saturday. Luckily, the liquor inspector was not around when this youngster started to pump some beer from a keg. The crowd was very well behaved at Bumstock even though it ended early. (Richards photo)

Thanks Westy

At a large university like UMO, many students, faculty and administrators come and go. Some are remembered and others forgotten. One man who certainly will not be forgotten, whether it be one, five or ten years from now is athletic director Harold Westerman who will be retiring May 31.

Westerman, a quality administrator dedicated to his work, has run the athletic department since 1966 and has made several worthy contributions to the university. He has been instrumental in Maine's growing improvement in intercollegiate athletics and has overseen the enlargement of facilities to enable that growth.

Under his administration, new wings were added to Memorial Gymnasium for a swimming program along with new wrestling and gymnastics rooms. The Harold Alfond hockey arena was also built five years ago and hockey has grown and prospered at UMO.

However, Westerman's accomplishments cannot and should not be looked at only in the material sense. His philosophy toward college sports is an admirable one and has helped give UMO quality athletic programs. He has recognized that college athletics plays an important part in the educational process but should not overshadow other aspects of university life.

In the era of free agents, $200,000 bonuses and 18-year-old professionals, Westerman is also a strong adherent to NCAA rules which protect amateur standing of college athletes. Over the past years he has held key positions on athletic committees for the NCAA and the Eastern College Athletic Association which has enabled other colleges to benefit from his ideas.

Westerman's retirement itself shows how dedicated he is to UMO sports. In all probability he could have continued at UMO for at least a few more years, but part of his decision to retire was because he recognized that it may be time for some one else with new ideas and a fresh outlook to take over his job.

Since Westerman came to Maine in 1949 he has helped UMO grow through his contributions to athletics. His place will not be easily filled nor memory easily forgotten.

Bonfire spells relief

With just one more week of classes and a week of finals, the stress is really getting to most people on campus. Tests and papers seem to come in by the truckload as the semester winds down to a close. And everyone seems to be saying of themselves "I wish I had done this three weeks ago."

Well, there is good news for you out there who have overloaded yourselves with last minute work. There are some ways you can help relieve some of the stress:

Make a voodoo doll resembling your professor and stick pins in it daily until the end of finals week. It may be just a superstitious prank, but believe me, you'll get some satisfaction out of it.

Or better yet, be more competitive. Tack a photograph of your "favorite" prof's face to a dart board and have a game of darts. Invite your classmates and make a party of it.

Have a bonfire. For fuel, burn all your textbooks which were never used and maybe some which were used but were not that useful. Again, invite your classmates and chant and dance around the fire all night long.

Go crazy out on the mall. Run from Fogler Library to the Memorial Gymnasium, screaming and hollering until you're red in the face. (This also works as an excellent study break.)

Box with your roommate, you may end up black and blue, but you'll be able to take your aggression out on somebody besides yourself.

Tell the cafeteria worker that you're tired of roast beef au jus and cold mashed potatoes, and tell her with feeling. It's your last chance before you leave at the end of the semester.

Put your head in a vice grip and squeeze the grip until your head turns blue. Then loosen it up quickly. You'll find that most of the pressure has been alleviated.

Get up in the middle of the night and stick your head out the window. Scream bloody murder. Then get back in bed and go to sleep.

Go out and run twenty miles. Run until you can't run any further. Run until your legs fall off.

Lock yourself in an empty room and stare at a blank wall for about four hours. This will bring you back to sanity.

If all else fails, just take a big deep breath and attack that big mountain of work with full vigor.

And keep telling yourself that the nightmare will be over in just two weeks.

Criticism of The Hostage dismaying

To the editor:

I read with dismay John Dumont's review of The Hostage in Thursday's edition of the Campus. I am still in dismay as to why this unacknowledged genius of a literacy critic should waste his time pandering to the humble minds of our fair community. I regard his latest attempt at criticism as nothing short of Providence. After all, it took the mind of Mr. Dumont to once and for all remove Behan's "simple little play" from any further consideration, serious or otherwise, by ourselves or by any who might have thought the play itself to be a satirical comment on the world gone mad. Imagine that we could have been fooled by this simple little play for nearly a quarter of a century, and that this "relatively unfocused work" could actually have been regarded as meritorious!

Thank you, Mr. Dumont, for exposing such ignorance to the world. Only an astute, well-read critic could find the flaws in this play that have for so long gone overlooked. Criticism couched in verbosity, such as yours, is what it took to see that The Hostage is, in fact, "high quality vaudeville disguised as art." I find it fascinating that you have so easily extended vaudeville's disguise into criticism.

Timing is bad for Union expansion

To the editor:

After reading Wednesday's Maine Campus article on a possible addition to the Union, as well as the editorial "Fight for Funds", I realized that a giant letter writing campaign is in order. Beginning here seems appropriate.

Looking first at the union article: 93 percent of all unions on public land grant universities are paid for by a student fee. Even though Dean Rand agrees that the UMO student union is "one of the best unions for its size anywhere" as well as "the largest union at any college or university in Maine," the need for expansion appears to be motivated by the fact that "there are other colleges around the country similar in size to UMO that have much larger and more diversified unions."

My blood boils at the thought of being "asked" (!!!!!) for a fee commitment for this "keep up with Jones" mentality. The timing is particularly poor when considering the double blow of tuition hikes and cuts in student loans. To quote statistics from the editorial: 47 percent of more than 35,000 Maine college students will be affected by 'Reaganomic' cuts in loans and work-study programs; approximately 2500 Maine students will not be able to afford college next fall.

Unfortunately, the Union expansion problem may solve itself. With a large percentage of those 2500 students being unable to return to UMO due to lack of funds, the student population should drop sufficiently enough that a larger union won't be needed anyway...

Poor choice of words

To the editor:

The Secretaries at the Bureau of Labor Education would like to correct a mistatement made in the article, Budget Cuts Hurt Labor Education Bureau, on April 28, 1982.

We disapprove of your choice of words to define a secretary (SUPPORT)! A Secretary is an employee who does difficult and complex secretarial, stenographic and clerical work which involves some administrative responsibility. Tasks are normally accomplished within well defined procedures with occasional non-routine administrative work involved. Independent judgement and initiative are occasionally exercised in verbal and written communications.

Maybe the Maine Campus ought to think about writing a story on the role and contributions made by the Secretaries and Clerical Workers on this Campus?

Work-study criterion changed

To the editor:

A situation has presented itself to me that I find very unsettling. The criterion for determining eligibility for work study appears to have changed from that of last semester. It seems that A.F.D.C. recipients who are students and have suffered in some way from Reganomics will go to the head of the line in terms of eligibility for this program.

As a social welfare major, I hesitate to add to the problems of the already defiled A.F.D.C. recipient, however, I find it hard to understand how they are more deserving of this program than other students who work just as hard for their degree but do not receive A.F.D.C. True, these people are having a hard time making it but so are a lot of people. I feel that this policy (if in fact it is a policy) discriminates against me and other students who have low incomes and might not qualify because we lack A.F.D.C.

Thank you

Poland rulers relax curfew laws Church fears recur of restraints

WARSAW, Poland AP- Military rulers relaxed the curfew and some other martial-law edicts Sunday despite the previous day's May Day counter-marchers who defied and cursed the Communist government in Warsaw and other cities.

More protests were promised for Monday by underground leaders of the suspended Solidarity union but the influential Roman Catholic Church pleaded for calm, apparently fearing state reprisals against the dissenters and a return to strict military rule.

"Curfew is being lifted throughout the country today," Warsaw radio said Sunday. "Further decisions on this matter have been conveyed to provincial governors."

It did not elaborate, but under a general easing of restrictions announced by the military council last week, the 11 p.m.-5 a.m. curfew could be reimposed by local authorities to crush what they consider subversive activities.

On Saturday-the May Day-demonstrators in Warsaw and Gdansk provinces burned communist red flags and screamed "we want freedom," "away with the junta," and "free Lech Walesa." Solidarity's detained national chairman.

Union sources said an estimated 30,000 Solidarity sympathizers marched through the northern port of Gdansk without incident, just as a crowd estimated at 50,000 surged through Warsaw's old district just blocks from the officially sanctioned parade. May Day is a major holiday in Poland and most Communist nations.

The state news agency PAP said marches inspired by "opponents of socialist Poland" had occurred in "Warsaw and other cities," but gave no details.

The protests, apparently organized by underground Solidarity leaders, were the biggest open defiance of martial law and show of union strength since Poland's rulers decreed military rule Dec. 15 after 16 months of Solidarity strikes and challenges to Communist Party authority.

The mostly young Polish protesters, carrying union banners and Polish flags, contrasted sharply to the party's official parade in Warsaw's Victory Square, which witnesses described as a spiritless march by 170,000 people with few onlookers and hundreds of riot police.

Western diplomats speculated the government was dumbfounded by the counter-marches although it took no action to stop them.

Some said authorities may have decided to tolerate the display in hopes it will not recur, but that future counter-parades would be quickly repressed. Unauthorized assemblies are still banned despite Sunday's relaxations.

A test of Official tolerance could be made Monday if Poles heed the calls to gather in Victory Square to mark the anniversary of the short-lived Polish constitution of 1791. The charter, then the most liberal of its time, was annulled when Poland was partitioned by Prussia in 1793.

Private college students allowed full government guaranteed loans

WASHINGTON AP-Students attending most private colleges can qualify for full government-guaranteed loans this fall if their families don't earn more than $40,000 a year, according to new Education Department regulations released Sunday.

Students attending typical four-year public colleges will not be able to get a full $2,500 Guaranteed Student Loan if their family income exceeds $30,000. But those with incomes up to about $36,000 could get at least a $1,000 loan.

Those figures assume the student is from a two-parent family of four, with one child in college. They also use the College Board's figures that it now costs an average of $6,865 a year to attend a private four-year college and $3,873 a year for a public college.

But college costs are rising sharply again this fall, with some private universities charging undergraduates up to $12,000 a year in tuition, room and board and other fees.

The government's schedule for the Guaranteed Student Loan program will be published Monday in the Federal Register. About 3.5 million students borrowed $7.8 billion under the program last year.

Students with family incomes of $30,000 or less are automatically eligible to borrow $2,500 under the subsidized loan program, which costs the government about $2.7 billion a year.

Despite the cutbacks, David Bayer, chief of the Education Department program, said, "We do have people in high income brackets qualifying."

For instance, a two-parent family of four with a $75,000 income would be expected to pay $11,700 toward their child's college costs. Even at the most expensive Ivy League schools, that student would be ineligible for Guaranteed Students Loans.

Colleges will consult the family contribution schedules to determine whether those with incomes between $30,000 and $75,000 can still qualify. Those with earnings above $75,000 must file a separate financial statement disclosing assets to determine if they qualify.

Until last Oct. 1, all students could get the Guaranteed Student Loans regardless of wealth.

But if the same family had two children in colleges costing $12,000 each, the expected family contribution would be halved to $5,850, leaving each student with within the eligibility range.

At President Reagan's urging, Congress last year imposed the need test on families with incomes above $30,000 and forced students to pay a 5 percent origination fee when taking out the loans.

The government pays all the interest on the loans until six months after the student graduates. Borrowers then begin repaying the loans at interest rates of 7 to 9 percent.

This year, Reagan is asking Congress to bar graduate students from the program, double the origination fee to 10 percent and require students to repay at market interest rates two years after graduation. The proposals have been roundly criticized by both Republicans and Democrats in Congress and so far no action has been taken on them.

Men's track team captures second straight state title

by Paul Tukey
Staff Writer

The men's track team overcame a season of injuries as several members turned in their best performances of the year on their way to their second straight state title.

Maine with 69 points outdistanced Bowdoin (56), Colby (46), and Bates (36).

As he has done all season, junior Kevin Tarr lead the Maine team with victories in the 100 and 200 meter dashes. Tarr will face tougher competition in two weeks when he'll represent UMO at the New England Meet at the University of Massachusetts.

Coach Ed Styra cited personal best performances by Bill Cumpstone and Rick Casselbury as highlights of Saturday's meet. Cumpstone, a freshman from Cheshire, Connecticut won the discuss with a throw of 133 feet, one inch.

Casselbury, a senior from Acton,

Mass., was primarily a high jumper until this year, (he placed fourth in the high jump Saturday) but Styra needed a hammer thrower and Casselbury was willing to give it a try. It proved to be a smart move for the veteran coach as Casselbury placed second Saturday with a hammer throw of 149 feet.

Other first place finishers for Maine were Bill Kadlec in the triple jump, Stewart Sevey in the shot put, Sheril Sprague in the steeplechase, and Charlie Wade in the 400 meter dash.

Five second place finishes were turned in by Scott Halliday in the pole vault, Peter Johnson in the javelin, and Gerry Clapper in the 5000 meter run.

Two seniors ended their Maine track careers on high notes Saturday. Roger Johnson of Old Town placed third in both the intermediate and high hurdles and Cameron Bonsey of Yarmouth finished a strong third in the 400 meter dash and ran his best time of the season - a 50 second split in leading Maine's mile relay team to victory.

Suydam signs with Denver

by John Toole
Staff Writer

Thursday night the Denver Broncos signed standout UMO defensive lineman Ryck Suydam to a series of one-year contracts.

"I think it's great," Suydam said in an interview Sunday. "It's going to be quite an experience."

Suydam said he signed three one-year contracts with the Broncos.

A mini-camp will be held in Denver May 12-14, Suydam said, and the Broncos will determine at that time if he should take part in a five-week player development program.

He said he will report to training camp with the Broncos beginning July 23.

The reason he signed with the Broncos, he said, was because they offered the "best contract" and seemed to be the team most sincerely interested in signing him.

Suydam reportedly received offers from the New York Giants and Dallas Cowboys.

White squad prevails

In what coach Ron Rogerson called "a good finale to successful spring workouts" the white squad prevailed 17-13 in the annual Blue-White game Saturday at Alumni Field.

The game was evenly played throughout as only two mistakes cost the blue team at least a tie. Freshman halfback Paul Phelan's two rushing touchdowns for the Blue answered touchdowns by junior quarterback Jim Parady (two yard run), and sophomore tight end John Nockett (35 yard reception from Jim Evans) for the White.

However, sophomore kicker Bob Caito missed the extra point after Phelan's second touchdown, because of a bad snap from center, which left the score 14-13 White. Then in the fourth quarter, on the next to last possession for the Blue, senior defensive back John Chisholm intercepted a Mike Beauchemin pass which lead to a 40-yard field goal by freshman kicker Jack Leone for the White.

Junior defensive tackle Ray Sullivan and senior linebacker Bob Lucy missed the Blue-White game because of knee injuries and junior halfback Tony Edith has recently undergone a knee operation that has left his status questionable for next season.

Clay Gunn appears to be making the transition from basketball forward to defensive end smoothly. Gunn used his long arms to block a pass Saturday and he was in on several tackles.

Rogerson was excited about Gunn's progress. "Clay had a tremendous spring. He was fun to watch in Saturday's scrimmage," he said.

Freshman quarterback Rich Labonte who lead the Black Bears to three victories in their last six games last fall has missed most of the spring workouts because of a back problem.

Rogerson said Labonte's back has bothered him since before Christmas last year and doctors have not yet been able to help. "I have more than the average concern about his problem," Rogerson said.

Senior center Steve Keating was announced as captain for the 1982 season at the football banquet at Killarney's Restaurant Saturday night.

Rogerson called the banquet at Killarney's "a tremendous success." Over 300 people, including UMO alumnus and Buffalo Bill linebacker Chris Keating attended the banquet.

team in the East and played in the school's only post-season football contest, the Tangerine Bowl, in Orlando, Florida.

Since 1966 Westerman has served as director of physical education and athletics and during that time several of UMO's athletic programs have grown to state and national prominence.

Men's basketball coach Skip Chapelle, who has seen his team's schedule grow to include national powerhouses including Marquette and Notre Dame, credits much of the program's growth to Westerman's efforts and he said he hopes the growth will continue. "We don't know what to expect because the announcement of his resignation came so suddenly," he said, "he (Westerman) did a lot of positive things for the basketball program and his presence will be missed."

Ron Rogerson, who last year took over reigns of the football program Westerman said is still his first love, said Westerman's resignation "affects me a great deal."

"He is not only my boss but also a close friend and I'm sorry to see him go—but after 33 years of dedicated service to the university, it's time to start thinking about himself," Rogerson said.

Rogerson added that he feels Westerman has implemented sound proposals to help the football program grow to be more competitive against division one competition.

Westerman said the decision to retire was a fairly quick one. "I seriously haven't been thinking about this for too long," he said.

"It's really hard to imagine doing anything else—UMO athletics has been my life. But at this time I feel it will be good to have younger people in the position with fresh approaches and new ideas."

Westerman said it would be difficult to choose his fondest memories from his years at UMO because, he said, "my association with the athletes and coaches, working with extremely capable staff, and all the friendships I've made have made my years here enjoyable."

As for his future plans, Westerman said he and his wife Shirley always plan to make Maine their home and enjoy their retirement. He did not, however, rule out the possibility of working in some capacity in the future. "If a challenge comes along someday I might take it," he said.

In his final month as UMO athletic director, Westerman said he hopes to oversee construction of the new press box and scoreboard at Alumni Field and he will fly to New York next weekend as chairman of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference selection committee to determine the seedings for the upcoming ECAC North baseball playoffs.

Westerman said he would not recommend anyone as his successor, however he expressed confidence that "whoever sits in this chair and President Silverman will handle the challenges of a growing university well."

In a comforting note to the UMO athletic program Westerman added, "I'll always do what I can to help the university."

Winkin picks up 500th win as Bears sweep

by Nancy Storey and
Ken Waltz
Staff Writers

SOUTH PORTLAND—Coach John Winkin became the first New England coach ever to reach the 500th career win mark as the UMO baseball team swept doubleheaders from Fairfield University and the University of Massachusetts over the weekend.

Sophomore Billy Swift, who collected his sixth consecutive win of the season, started game one of the Fairfield contest and looked exceptionally sharp in beating the Stags 5-2 Friday.

After striking out the first batter Swift developed a problem with his right calf muscle. Swift seemed to grimace after each pitch and after several trips to the mound by trainer Wes Jordan, it seemed that he might leave the game. But he continued the game with no more problems.

Swift, who is now 6-0 on the season, gave up only five hits while walking four (two of which forced in both Fairfield runs) and struck out six.

Talking about his leg discomfort after the game, Swift said, "I think I drank too many glasses of water and it was cold and I think that's what caused the cramp. But I put heat on it (the calf) between innings and it didn't affect my pitching at all the rest of the game."

The Bears wasted no time in getting on the boards in the first inning as Jeff Paul reached on a fielder's choice, promptly stole second and scored on a double to leftcenter by catcher Ed Pickett. Rightfielder Tom Vanidestine then duplicated Pickett's shot with a double to the same area for Maine's second run.

Maine went on to shell Fairfield starter Dave Caseria, getting nine hits in the game.

The Bears rounded out their scoring by getting three more runs in the fifth. Vanidestine continued his hot hitting with a single to center to drive home Paul and Kevin Bernier, who had reached on walk and a bunt respectively. Shortstop Peter Adams ended the scoring with a RBI single to right scoring Brad Colton.

In the second game, junior Joe Johnson struck out 13 Fairfield players and scattered five hits (one of those being a grand slam) to lead the Bears to a 6-4 win.

Maine opened the scoring in the third when second baseman Mark Sutton walked, went to second on a sacrifice bunt by Ed Hackett, and after Bernier moved Sutton to third with a 400 foot sacrifice fly to center, third baseman Jeff Paul singled to left for the score.

The Bears went on to score one in the fourth inning and three more in the fifth on a Rick Lashua sacrifice fly and four consecutive walks, a Vanidestine sacrifice fly and a throwing error.

Catcher Eddie Hackett rounded out the scoring for Maine with a solo home run before the Stags came back in the seventh with four runs on a grand slam by leftfielder Alberto Zapala.

Sunday, Maine continued to win, defeating UMass 8-2 and 18-7 at Martin Memorial Field in So. Portland.

Stu Lacognata, a sophomore from Portland, went the distance for Maine in the first game and picked up the win. He is now 3-2 on the season.

Tony Cimino started the second game for the Bears, but was relieved by Tom Mahan in the third inning.

Mahan did not fare any better and was replaced by Kevin Jordan. Jordan picked up the win for Maine. Sophomore centerfielder Rick Lashua led the attack for the Bears with a single, a double, a triple and two homers in the double header. Both of his homers came in the second game as the Bears launched a 15-hit attack against the Minutemen. Leftfielder Brad Colton and catcher Peter Bushway also had homers for the Bears.

In the first game the Bears came from behind to score seven runs on six hits in the bottom of the sixth. The Minutemen looked like they might pull it off with a 2-1 lead with two innings left to play, but the Bears proved to be too strong as Bill Swift came up with a three run single in the sixth.

UMass was unable to come back as Lacognata used a combination of fast balls and curves to make two Minutemen hitters pop up harmless fly balls.

In the second game Maine came out in the first inning to score four runs on three hits as the Minutemen were forced to change pitchers. The UMO pitchers had control problems however and UMass rallied in the third with four walks and two hits for two runs. However, the Bears managed to maintain a four run lead.

The rest of the game was anything but a pitcher's duel and the Bears went on to win 18-7. Other than Lashua, players who hit consistently in the two games were Peter Adams, Jeff Paul and Brad Colton who all had four hits.

The Bears will attempt to continue their 14 game winning streak this Tuesday against St. Joseph's College at Mahaney Diamond. They will then play two games on the road against Northeastern and Boston College before beginning the ECAC playoffs.
