Maine Day slated as weekend event
by Pamela Reink
Maine Day will be on Saturday this year because the calendar committee and UMO administrators will not agree to have it on a weekday as a result of the shortened spring semester.

"The reason we have to have it on April 4 is because we lost a week of school this spring and we couldn't get the departments and administrators to agree on having it on a week day. I've been working on it since the beginning of last semester," said Richard Brobst, APO chairman of the Maine Day committee.

"We want Maine Day on a week day. We hope next spring we will have a 15 week semester and we hope we can have Maine Day on Wednesday as in tradition," Brobst said.

APO wants to uphold the tradition of having a Maine Day because they feel it doesn't happen this year it won't occur again. "By at least having it on Saturday we have the tradition of having it occur this year."

The focus of this year's Maine Day will be an atmosphere of total fun. APO will be doing this by having a massive carnival with clowns, jugglers, magicians, music and balloons. They are calling it Maine Day Mardi Gras. They hope to get organizations and clubs to have booths where they can combine their creative talents with the service aspect of Maine Day.

The clubs can make money by having things like pie throwing contests with administrators and faculty members as the targets. This will get faculty and administrators involved and clubs can raise money for charity or for themselves Brobst said. This carnival will be held in the fieldhouse. There won't be service clean up projects like past years. "We want people to devote their energy to making this aspect of Maine Day work."

Some students are not happy with having Maine Day on a weekend. Cheryl Hook, senior psychology major said, "If they have it on a Saturday students won't come. After being a part of three Maine Days it seems as if it is a very important part of the spring semester. The emphasis is on service projects and cleaning up the campus and developing a sense of community among students. It also gives us a chance to get out and take a deep breath of fresh air before final exam."

"I just think the meaning of Maine Day will be lost if it is on a Saturday."

Eve Zachgo, senior microbiology major said, "I don't think it's a good idea, people do other things on weekends. There would be more energy channeled into it if it was on a Wednesday."

Interviews show close presidential race
by Brian Farley
Neither candidate for student government president appears to have won a clear-cut majority of student votes for tomorrow's election.

Several students interviewed Monday indicated they would vote this year, but were not sure of the issues in the election. Support for candidates Chris McEvoy and Charlie Mercer was evenly divided, although students could not always tell why they had chosen one candidate over the other.

"I just read the paper and I think I'll vote for McEvoy," Joe Aikins, a sophomore, said. "I think he'll be a good representative for the students and I think he's got some good ideas on investigating the police and favoring Rumstock."

"I think Charlie Mercer will stand up for students' rights," senior Bob Weiss said. "He's not going to be a 'yes' man and hopefully he'll represent the students, not the administration."

"I'm definitely going to vote for Chris McEvoy," senior Al Bernardo said. "I went to the debate and I thought Mercer generalized about everything and didn't give any examples of what he was talking about. McEvoy used specifics and I liked his ideas."

"I'll probably vote for McEvoy," Phil Engel, a junior, said. "I think he can represent the off-campus students better based on his past accomplishments with the Off-Campus Board. He should stand up to the administration's conservative viewpoints."

"I'll probably vote for Mercer," Sharon Swanson, a sophomore, said. "I really haven't heard much about the election and I knew him before, so I guess I'll vote for him."

Most of the students interviewed had a difficult time identifying the issues of the campaign, but some of the voters said police in dormitories, banning of kegs, and changes in dormitory lifestyles should be major concerns to the new administration.

"I'll probably vote for Mercer, too," Sharon Swanson, a sophomore, said. "I really haven't heard much about the election and I knew him before, so I guess I'll vote for him."

"I just think the meaning of Maine Day will be lost if it is on a Saturday."
Reaction to oil price decontrol mixed

by Peter Phelan

The recent decontrol of gasoline prices is being received with mixed feelings at UMO. "Nobody's too happy about the rising prices," said Barry Aceto, a civil engineering student. "I don't even look at the prices anymore, but it's a lot better here than where I'm from, New Hampshire. I have a small car, so it doesn't effect me as much," she said.

"I'm for it," said Assistant Professor of Finance Dennis McConnell, speaking of the decontrol. "We may have to pay a little more for it, but at least we'll guarantee that there will be enough around. My point of view comes from the libertarian perspective: the less control there is, the better off we are."

Keith Kinney, owner of East Side Mobil Service, 96 State Street in Bangor, said the decontrol has not affected his prices yet, but he knows of prices as high as $1.89.9 per gallon in Lincoln. He said it is too competitive a market in Bangor for such high prices. His prices were: $1.32.9 per gallon for regular gas, $.36.9 for one gallon of unleaded regular and $.42.9 per gallon for unleaded premium gasoline.

"Nobody's too happy about the rising prices anymore. But it's a lot better than where I'm from. New Hampshire. I have a small car, so it doesn't effect me as much," she said.

"We have definitely tried to cut down. We try to come in town only once a day," Roberts said. "We're looking forward to moving to Portland where we can live in town and not have to drive."

Aceto said later, "I'm for it. The higher prices go the less money I make."

In Friday's edition of the Maine Campus an error was made in a Valentine classified. The correction is as follows:

Roses are red
Violets are blue
On Valentines Day
I'm thinking of you

The Campus regrets the error.

More SEA members needed for expanded programming

by Julie Griffin

SEA. "We can function with 25, but it would be a lot easier if we had more members," said Student Entertainment and Activities President Rob Morton.

SEA has five committees: special events, concerts, publicity, film festival (which sponsors the Sunday night movies) and movie, which puts on the Friday and Saturday night movies. Publicity is the committee that needs the most help.

"People just expect the Friday and Saturday night movies. I don't think they realize what goes into putting them on," he said.

The idea for events originates with SEA members. They make the contacts, negotiate the price, do the publicize and work the night of the event. SEA has a monthly calendar of events. "We put on four or five flyers a week," he said.

SEA sponsors Friday and Saturday night movies. The group organizes concerts in the pit. Hauck Auditorium and the Maine Yankee.

The confusions that come with the decontrol effort, said McConnell. "I never understood why people tend to want control of things—it's a national habit to regulate and control behavior."

Aceto ad hoc task force to plan student court

by Sean Budgeck

UMO's student court proposal is taking a slow but steady course on the path to being implemented. After some confusion among the various groups working on it, Dr. Thomas Aceto, vice president for student affairs, has proposed an ad hoc task force to come up with a final plan for a student court.

"If we can get this plan approved (by UMO president Paul Silverman) this semester and get the students selected who will be on the court," Aceto said, "we can train them this spring and start the Student Court next fall."

The confusion came about because the three different groups that were working on plans for a student court, Frank Cord of JDB, Cathy Wood, complex director of Stewart Complex; UMO Conduct Officer Wendy Wolitch, Tension of SLS, and Terry Bangos of the UMOPD, could not seem to coordinate their plans. Aceto sent a letter to Dave Spellman, president of student government, proposing the task force.

In the letter Aceto outlined several "guidelines for the task force" on what kind of a court proposal they should be looking for. Spellman answered with a letter to Aceto asking for a meeting between the two, and they discussed the guidelines.

"You know," Aceto said, "this is the first college I've ever worked at that didn't have a student court. UMO used to have one back in 1974-75 before we had a conduct officer, and we ought to have one again."

Dave Spellman said the task force had not been formed yet and some problems still remained to be worked out.

"Some people just want to have it in a trial basis in one complex," Spellman said. "and there are other things we have to work out as well."

Aceto didn't agree that a trial run was needed. "A trial basis is not necessary," he said. "The student court can work here, it is needed."

"The student court can work here," he said. "I'll let them work that out. I just want to get the proposal off the ground."

Fraternity, sorority hazing almost nonexistent at Orono

by Joe Melanaglin

Fraternity and sorority hazing has increased nationally, but has become almost nonexistent at UMO said William Lucy.

Lucy, dean of student affairs and activities said the low incidence of hazing is due to an advisory body informing the fraternities on the rules of hazing and the danger of it.

"Hazing is not beneficial to anyone, it's a skeleton in the closet," Lucy said. "The only reason it exists at all is because a few people have paid much attention to other individuals, advice that tells them hazing is wrong."

Any act that would embarrass a student pledging to a fraternity or sorority is considered hazing, Lucy said. If a UMO fraternity was engaging in hazing, its national charter would be suspended and the house would close down.

"Closing down the house is not an automatic thing," Lucy said, "but if hazing is found not much consideration is given."

The reason some hazing still exists is because leadership and membership in the fraternal organizations is constantly changing, Lucy said. "There's a constant changing of the guard and it takes periodical reminders to the fraternities that guidelines will exist to what is inappropriate and appropriate behavior," he said.

Bonita Gregoire, president of the Panhellic Council, said UMO sororities have very little problems with hazing, but the council periodically reviews hazing rules to ensure the rules are being followed.

"Because of what's been happening nationally, we had a meeting a week ago to review the hazing policy and answer any questions the sororities might have about it," Gregoire said.

Paul Pierce, president of Phi Kappa Sigma, said when a student pledges to a fraternity or most other fraternities on campus, "He just becomes a member of a family that does things in a certain way."

"He does not become a student-athlete, not necessarily a part of the Greek system," Pierce said. "The only requirement is that you are a part of a fraternity or the Greek system if you're on campus."

Pierce said the initiation period a student goes through while pledging is considered "Hell week" by his fraternity and most other fraternities on campus.

PICS employee dead at 63

Corrine P. Gerry, 63, of 24 College Heights died unexpectedly at the Eastern Maine Medical Center, Sunday.

Mrs. Gerry, the wife of UMO professor of poetry science Richard W. Gerry, was born in Norwood, Massachusetts on Sept. 1, 1917. She was a graduate of Milo High School and the Maine School of Commerce.

As Orono resident for the past 32 years Mrs. Gerry was employed on a permanent part-time basis at Public Information-Central Services at UMO.

"Mrs. Gerry was always bubbly and full of life and would pick up your spirits," said a co-worker.

"She was a family lady with a lot of heart who loved her family dearly."

Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother Mrs. Corrine Paddock of Orono; three sons Richard Gerry Jr., of Charleston, S.C.. Brian T. Gerry of Old Town, and Dale F. Gerry of Atlanta, Md.; one sister, Mrs. Edward Hackett of Orono; five grandchildren.

Services will be held at Our Lady of Wisdom Chapel at 9 a.m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Graceland Cemetery, Auburn.

Student Government Election

Wednesday, Feb. 18

Voting for dorm students in commons and for off-campus, grad students and fraternities in the Union.

VOTE.

Kappa there is no hazing involved. "It's illegal, we could get our charter revoked for hazing," he said.

Pierce said the initiation period a student goes through while pledging is considered "Hell week" by his fraternity and most other fraternities on campus.
A UMO tradition has bitten the dust. Maine Day, the annual one-day spring vacation held in late April, was done away with Monday morning when President Paul Silverman met with his cabinet, and decided to change Maine Day to a weekend date.

The recommendation of this date was made by the event's sponsor, Alpha Phi Omega, the campus service fraternity. Apparently, APO representative felt compelled to request Maine Day to be held on a Saturday, because the administration would not allow it to happen if it was on a weekday. APO members felt in order to carry on the tradition, Maine Day should be on a Saturday at least, if it could not be on any other day.

When President Silverman and his cabinet accepted this recommendation, they may not have considered the impact of their decision. Maine Day is a holiday unique to UMO; a day when the campus can enjoy a short respite from the daily routine. It’s a day students can use to unwind before the home stretch to finals. The emotional benefits to be derived from this day of tradition should not be underestimated.

Born as a day for faculty and students to get together and beautify the campus, Maine Day has evolved into a day for faculty and students to get together and relax. Past activities have included club contests and folk dancing. Maine Day is a chance for the student organizations to promote themselves and let the community-at-large have a chance to view these groups firsthand.

Maine Day probably has a different meaning for everyone. But most seem to enjoy the day off, whether it means a day to relax or a day to accomplish something. Changing Maine Day to a weekend event takes away its special meaning. Students and faculty will not think of Maine Day as special and will not participate if it is held on a day they usually have off from classes. They will be much more likely to come to campus to participate if the day were held during a regular class day.

Maine Day will not be Maine Day this year, despite its name. It’s hard to believe the administration could not set aside one day in the spring semester to continue a long-standing tradition.

Check out Quebec

It sometimes takes a lost weekend in a far away place to be able to see life clearly.

In Quebec City this past weekend, one thing got everyone thinking. The annual Winter Carnival was winding up and there were people everywhere. And I mean everywhere. In the streets, on the roofs, in the gutters and on the bars, people from different walks of life were enjoying themselves.

A similar grand festival in a large city in this country would have been just a big party, but also might have been a opportunity for trouble. Too often it seems Americans can’t get together in large numbers for fun without incidents of theft or fighting or worse.

During my 2 days of frolicking in Quebec, however, such thoughts never entered my mind. It opened my eyes. Too many people in this country seem to worry about morality. Both their own and everybody else’s.

The resurgence of born-again religion and such personalities as Jerry Falwell and Jim Bakker shows the way in which many people in the U.S. are searching for morality. In some parts of the country, particularly the south, persons are more happy to donate $100 or $200 so they can feel better in church.

Even on this campus, people’s moralities are played with. By restricting the use of alcohol a little at a time, university officials are hoping to control alcohol use and start a trend.

It’s pretty hard to control morals though. If a person has enjoyed drinking beer since his early youth, his morals concerning beer won’t be easily changed.

And I find it difficult to see any one person’s morals as being better than someone else’s.

While in Canada, it seems as though the general mood and feeling of the people was similar to this. Everyone got along. Everyone, in walking all over the city and crashing numerous bars, I never saw one problem between the people there. No one was taking swings or being rowdy in the least. People were friendly and more concerned with enjoying the carnival.

It was more than a superficial friendliness. The people I came in contact with felt comfortable with life in Quebec, with the strong atmosphere of the city and the other people that lived there.

Many of us in this country could use a trip to Canada or any other foreign country simply to see the different style of life there.

People should pay more attention to enjoying life and giving of themselves rather than looking to change other people’s values or morals. Go to Quebec City for a weekend and look around.
Stop cloning on Feb. 18

To the Editor:

Vote! Vote! Vote! You have seen the signs concerning the candidates and their pleas for voter turnout. The big hooplah, nevertheless, will be over this Wednesday at 7:00 P.M. When that happens and the polls are closed, how much better off will the student body be?

Over the past few years the people in power here at the University, in other words the holier than thou administration, have been nibbling at the student rights and privileges for what they consider to be healthy reasons. As a result of the students' concern on the matter of oppression, the candidates running for the positions of president and vice president of student government this year are vowing to do whatever is possible to halt this McCarthyism, or what has been referred to by Dr. Aceto as, "taking the house back."

The problem in my mind is 1) Are you, the students, interested enough in the elections and in your future, as well as the future of the students who haven't come to UMME yet, and 2) Do you realize that a show of support for the administration, president and vice presidents, and the like for a candidate can be, if nothing else, a kiss of death for YOU. It bothers me to see these past few years, give birth to student government presidents and vice presidents who seem to have been born from a cloning device, and that still they are again giving their support to yet another clone.

The times are changed, and it is up to YOU to elect the candidate that can realize this. Do you really want the same old thing kicked out of the same old mold.

If there was ever a demand for someone new, someone completely unconnected with the fact that students are getting the dirty end of the stick which keeps getting shoved deeper, and deeper with every student government and student, or for a person who is completely honest with himself when he says that we, the students, need to take the "house" back from the big boys in the administration, now is the time to master that demand.

There are only two choices this year. Charlie Mercer, the student government kick-out, and Christopher McEvoy, the man that will get this college community, and you, the student, out of the hands of those who have let you live a good chunk of your self-determination. Are there really two choices?

Vote Mercer-Oakes

To the Editor:

I believe that now is the time to explain why I favor Senator Charles Mercer for president of student government in the upcoming election. First, though, this is in no way a criticism of the other candidates; I have no doubt that any ticket could fulfill the obligations of the office, but it is in Mercer-Oakes that I have placed my confidence.

I've known Charlie for a short time, as a freshman senator, but in that time I've grown to respect him greatly. He is the type who knows what he wants to do, and how to do it. The creation of the Executive Budgetary Committee, one of his favorite examples, and only one of many. Although I don't agree with all of his policies—which ones irrelevant to this—I must admit that each has been thought out thoroughly, and he has always been willing, no egotism, to discuss any/all. I'm sure he always will be.

Charlie has much enthusiasm for student government, and if anyone can solve the problems facing it, he can. As to dealing with the university administration, I am unable to see how they could not respect a man who is firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisive, but open to debate; willing to listen yet firm and decisiv

To the Editor:

As a student senator, a brief participant in this year's elections and a concerned student, I wish at this time to affirm my support for the Mercer-Oakes ticket. First, I thoroughly respect the intelligence and the commitment that Chris McEvoy exhibits. Not only in projects for other students such as the P-Nuts Food Co-op and the Day Care Center but in every aspect of university involvement. Chris is aware and concerned. He seems to have a knowing grasp on every university policy concerning students, and he is a sensitive defender of student rights.

Second, both McEvoy and Beaulieu represent openness, not only in views and ideas but in policy. A student government administered through these two people will characterize the openness and concern for open policy that students want.

Sincerely,

FBI head wants shift in priorities

WASHINGTON (AP) - Top FBI officials have told Director William H. Webster they could revive the bureau's battle against violent crime but only by adding more agents or reducing priority efforts against organized crime and white collar offenses.

At Webster's request, Assistant FBI Director Charles P. Monroe, in charge of the criminal investigative division, and his deputy, Dana E. Caro, who oversaw the white collar and organized crime sections, sent the director a group of suggestions during the first week in February, Monroe and Caro said in an interview.

Monroe and Caro said they could make a bigger dent in violent street crime, a major concern of Attorney General William French Smith, by putting more resources into bank robberies, chasing fugitives and investigating property crimes.

The FBI's manpower in these areas has dwindled over the past five years as Webster and his predecessor, Clarence E. Kelley, established espionage, organized crime and white collar offenses, which include public corruption, as the new priorities for the bureau.

But the federal role in violent crime seems likely to grow during the Reagan administration. The most recent FBI statistics show that overall crime rose more in 1979 than in any of the previous years, led by an 11 percent jump in violent crime.

Smith has told the Senate his top priority would be increasing federal leadership in the fight against violent crime, although he acknowledged that most states are local responsibilities.

After that, he listed his priorities as organized crime, narcotics traffic and then white collar crime "in due course." If the attorney general and others want to direct their manpower into those areas, the FBI can either get more manpower or we're going to have to redirect men from some of our top priorities programs, Monroe said.

Reagan give televised speech

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, in his televised speech to Congress Wednesday night, will seek to make "the people a partner" in combating the nation's economic woes, his spokesman said Monday.

As Reagan and his wife, Nancy, returned from a weekend visit at Camp David, Md., White House press secretary James S. Brady said the speech will seek to enlist public cooperation in a "new program of tax and spending cuts."

"There's a lot of 'making the people a partner' in the plan," Brady said. "It's not unlike the Reagan plan. It's going to be 'our plan.'"

The speech, said Brady, will be "a clarion call saying it's not going to be 'business as usual.'" A first draft of the address was circulated in the White House Monday morning.

After his speech, the president will make a televised but not live appearance in the House Monday morning.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has invited 125 executives of major newspapers to the White House for a conference Thursday morning before he leaves Washington for a four-day visit to his ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif.

The five documents are an approximately 30-page written message, a 12-15 page "fact sheet," the actual budget proposals, ... recovery program for business and income tax cuts for individuals, and several pages of regulatory revision proposals.

Smith has told the Senate his top priority would be increasing federal leadership in the fight against violent crime, although he acknowledged that most states are local responsibilities.

After that, he listed his priorities as organized crime, narcotics traffic and then white collar crime "in due course." If the attorney general and others want to direct their manpower into those areas, the FBI can either get more manpower or we're going to have to redirect men from some of our top priorities programs, Monroe said.
Men’s track dumped by UNH Wildcats 83-53

by Ed Crockett

The man’s track team dropped to 1-2 in dual meet competition, Saturday, losing to a strong New Hampshire squad 83-55 in Durham.

The Black Bears could only muster one win in the field events, which led to a huge Wildcat lead. Brad Gilber picked up a first in the high jump with a jump of 6’4”, to defeat freshman teammate E.J. Voyner, who also skied to a 6’4” on fewer misses. Also in the high jump Maine’s Brian Donovan tied for third at 6’2” with Tom Lawton of UNH.

New Hampshire owned the other jump with jumps of 5’4” and 5’7”, in the long jump and pole vault and took first and third in the triple jump. UNH’s Erin Hewett was the long jumper to place in the event, finishing second in the triple at 43’ 11 1/2”. UNH’s Brian Sommerton.

Wildcat Jim Marcusait 14’6” to lead the sweep in the pole vault. Maine’s ace Jim Pallo is lost to the team due to appendicitis. Greg Devolder took honors in the long jump with a huge 22’7”.

Maine fared a little better in the weight events but were shut out of the winners circle. Dave Home of UNH threw the 35lb. weight 50’ to easily outdistance the Black Bear pair of Stan Eames and Bob Smoloski, who settled for second and third. And in the shot put UNH’s Jeff Shain tossed the shot 47’, but it wasn’t enough to beat Joel Denius of the home team who reached 50’3/4”. UNH fresh Sonny Leciar took third at 47’3/4”.

Kevin Tarr ran his fastest race of the year in the 60-yard dash to take that event with ease. He was clocked in 6.3 sec., .3 quicker than runner-up Devolder.

Maine picked up another win in the 60-yard run. Charlie Wade raced to a time of 11.6 to edge Pete Bergeron of UNH. Black Bear John Condon tied for third at 11.54.

Cameron Boswell was in control throughout the half mile to breeze to a 1:52.2 clocking, and the mile relay quartet of Greg Harrison, Tim Sawtiel, Kevin Tarr, and Brad Gilbert blitzed through the relay, in 3:33.9 for the final Black Bear win of the afternoon.

Maine had a rule of second place finishes but not enough firsts to challenge the talented Wildcats. Gilber followed his win in the high jump with a second in the high hurdles and Sawtiel ran a 53 quarter for second-place honors.

Steve Ridley and Brad Brown were both beaten by UNH harriers in the distance events. Ridley was second in the mile in 4:21.9 and Brown in the 1000 with a time of 2:17.4. UNH’s Dan Bock was third in the two mile. He finished at 4:47.

The Black Bears will be in Burlington, Vermont on Saturday to run against the Catamounts. Vermont has never beaten Maine in a dual meet.

Women edged by strong Catamount tracksters

by E.J. Voyner

The women’s Black Bear track team was defeated by the Catamounts of Vermont 57-43 in a dual meet at the Maine Campus, Burlington, VT. The injuries and illness-ridden team had a tough day as they couldn’t overcome UVM’s strength in the middle and long distance running events.

Maine’s Barb Lukas put the shot 39’2 1/2” but could only get a third as UVM’s Nancy Gourkow won the event with 42’ 10 1/2”. The Black Bears collected four of the six jumping places. Melissa Murphy leaped 4’10” to win the high jump for Maine. Sue Bolmer cleared 4’8” to grab a Black Bear third. Tina Berube bounded 16’8” to capture the long jump and Susan Chidlers jumped 15’ 10 1/2” to complete a Maine one-two-three.

Maine also did well in the sprints and hurdles. Black Bear Dot Foley evinced out of the blocks and held off Catamount Lisa Rago to win the 50 meters in 6.8 seconds. Maine’s Heidi Mathieu finished third in 7.3 seconds. Rago came back to just nip Foley in the 200 meters, finishing 27.9 to (Foley’s) 28.1. Maine’s Sue Ewiin finished third in 28.4 seconds. Erin blazed through the 300 meters hurdles in 8.1 seconds which was one tenth of a second faster than UVM’s Marsha Muller. Joanne Petkus placed third for Maine, finishing in 8.2 seconds.

In the middle distance events, Maine won one and lost one. UOM’s Stacy Cain cruised through the 400 meters in 61.4 seconds, edging UVM’s Karen Burke, who finished in 62.4 seconds. Black Bear Joanne Petkus finished third in 63.0 sec. Vermont swept the 800 meters at 2:17.4. UOM’s Dan Bock was third in the two mile. He finished at 4:47.

The Black Bears will be in Burlington, Vermont on Saturday to run against the Catamounts. Vermont has never beaten Maine in a dual meet.

Nationally ranked BC invade Alfond

by Scott Cole

On the heels of a frustrating loss to Harvard Friday night, the UMO hockey team will be aiming to settle a score with Boston College and jump in the ECAC standings tonight. At 7:30 show-down at the Harold A. Alfond Sports Arena.

The Eagles and Black Bears have not previously met this season, and it was quite the collision. On the night of December 9th at the McGuirk Forum in Chestnut Hill, BC jumped into an early lead and then held on for dear life as UMO tied up the game at two and went into overtime.

Jeff Nord was fantastic throughout the third period and overtime, frustrating the Eagles left and right. In overtime Andre Aubut took a penalty for a delay of game because he covered up a loose puck in front of Nord as BC swarmed the Maine end.

The Eagles' Billy O'Dwyer then scored on the power play with eight seconds left in the overtime to win it.

Besides the intangible of revenge from that heartbreaking loss in Boston, the Black Bears have something tangible to shoot for in tonight's rematch. Currently BC's ECAC record is 9-4-3, good enough for second in the ECAC East standings behind Northeastern. Overall in the ECAC Len Ceglarski's club is in third place in the standings behind Clarkson and Northeastern. Maine, at 10-6 in the conference, is docked at third place in the standings behind Clarkson and Northeastern. Maine, at 10-6 in the East sector and fourth place overall.

An importrant as this long regular season winds to a close with the playoffs looming. The first place finisher in each of the ECAC's three regions automatically hosts in the playoffs as does the second place team with the best winning percentage. This Maine could host in the playoffs by finishing first in the East sector if Northeastern continues to falter, or by bringing the second place team with the best winning percentage. The Bears' chances of qualifying to host will certainly by boosted with a victory this evening since BC is presently the second place team with the best record.

The Blue and White skate into this one by the unique battle having been beaten recently by another Boston area hockey team, the Harvard Crimson. "We played darn good positional hockey and we still felt we could come out on top in that third period," said Coach Jack Senler of the Bears' 4-1 Friday night loss in Cambridge.

The hitting could be ferocious from the opening whistle in this one because BC has just as much at stake as Maine does. On top of that, the Eagles will be looking to erase the memories of the bitter week they just crawled through. Last weekend night BC was cut down by Harvard in the championship game of the Beanpot Tourney, marking the first time the school had been shut out in 79 games. Then Friday on their home ice, the Eagles were laced by Clarkson's Golden Knights 5-0. That whitewashing meant that BC had been shut out twice in a row for the first time in its 1146 game history which began with a win over Harvard Radio School in 1917.

Len Ceglarski will be trotting out the league's best goalie in Bob O'Connor to ward off the Black Bears. O'Connor had an ECAC-leading 2.72 goals against average before Clarkson zipped five shots past him. He was in goal in that BC win over the Bears in December.

Semler will counter with Jeff Nord if the junior net-minder has shaken the flu bug sufficiently. Nord was penciled in to play versus Harvard but had to pass up the game due to the flu. Jim Tortorella played in his place and responded with a 39 save performance. "I'd just like to call tonight again if Nord is not ready," said Semler.

BLACK BEAR ICE CHIPS... The weekly college hockey coaches' poll compiled by WMPI radio in Houghton, Mich. was released yesterday, and with its loss to Harvard Maine has dropped out of the top ten...

Goalie Jim Tortorella had 39 saves in Maine's 4-1 loss to Harvard. Tortorella may start tonight if the Blu-eyes Jeff Nord is not up to par.
