Contenders rise during search

by Pat MaGroin

The vice president of student fertility search committee announced Thursday that it has narrowed down its choice for head administrative post on campus.

One of the search committee's members, Ms. Anita Bang, pictured at right, shows her pleasure at discovering what many members feel will be the next fertility office head.

Possible contenders for the position, lined in everyday dress, are right to left: Pat MaGroin, John McBulge, Rodney Peters, and Jacques Nonlensnads.

This preliminary judging by the committee took place at the Paramount Lounge recently during Amateur night. The next and final judging, leading to the choice as Mr. Fertility, will take place Saturday afternoon when the bare-butt finals will outside the red door of Lord Hall.

Compost receives Cook journalism award

by James Knopf

The Vice President of Student Affairs, Bomb U. Ashito, said today that the staff of the Maine Compost has been unanimously chosen as the first recipient of the now-annual Janet Cook Memorial award for shoddy journalism.

"The Compost deserved it. They worked hard and long for the honor," Ashito said.

The award was given to the paper for its expose on the whereabouts of Aldo Moro, among other stories too numerous to mention, he said.

"The way in which they made up the story, well, every quote was either wrong or misquoted, I have to admire that," he said. "It was downright biased."

Stiff Overt, reporter on the Moro case, was ecstatic after the announcement of the award. We lied about his death, we lied about the Mercedes, I couldn't be happier."

Receiving honorable mention was the Last Rendition article on Dickey-Lincoln. Curly Rotz, recipient of the honorable mention in the contest, was bitter. "That story was true."

"How dare Ashito even consider our story for the award. The man was biased against our paper."

"I'm going to send a letter to the man and tell him he took our story out of context. Or maybe I should let sheepish dogs lie," Rotz said.

On the streets of Orono, reaction ranged from apathy to hostility. Jerome Nesbitt, a student of UMO expressed one view when he said, "Like, who care, man. Like, this really won't effect how much grass I smoke each week. Like, my main problem is getting it up."

Student Chris Whackitboy, opposition leader of campus, is credited with tipping Overt off to the extreme falseness of the story.

Whackitboy had apparently been in contact with the real Aldo Moro, who is dead (has been for the past three years) and has been reincarnated as a she-goat name Madeline.

"Madeline/Moro tipped me off to the whole situation, and I told Overt as soon as I got the whole story," Whackitboy said. "I'm just proud to be involved in the whole mess."

The staff of the Maine Compost is already planning for next year's awards, dreaming up the most unrealistic stuff imaginable.

Hannibal's Animals to get 'trip of a lifetime'

by E. Wrecked

For students with a genuine interest in pharmaceutical relaxation, Hannibal Hamlin Hall will be the place to live this fall.

For after three weeks of accepting suggestions and heated discussions, the Residential Strife Advisory Committee has decided to make the ancient dormitory into a drug endurance living center.

According to committee chairperson, Jane Crawl, the choice of the drug endurance lifestyle for Hannibal Hamlin was a necessary change.

"There are just so many students here today that dominate their lives with massive amounts of drugs" she said. "Seeing this trend, Residential Strife has chosen not to ignore this growing population of addicts any longer, and thus the new drug endurance dorm."

Entrance guidelines will be strict, according to Residential Strife Director H. Russ Melancholy. Each potential resident must show proof of his drug dependency in one of three ways; fresh needle marks located under the eyelid, green teeth due to marijuana consumption, or purple eyelids proven to be the result of a new type of LSD known only as "police blotter."

"I feel these entrance requirements will weed out the pseudo-addicts," Melancholy said. "The purpose of this new drug endurance dorm is to provide a suitable lifestyle for the true connoisseurs of mind-altering drugs."

Once a student passes the entrance requirements, he still must maintain a constant level of drug consumption. Each student, upon entering Hannibal Hamlin, must consume either one-quarter pound of Marijuana per week or chemicals totalling $250 over a seven-day period.

"We had to put this stipulation into the lifestyle format because of the number of applicants we have," said Dork Complex Coordinator Greg "Roll a" Bone. "This is just another way to insure that we have quality people entering the program."

Bone, incidentally, also most generously volunteered to accept a position as residential director of the new dormitory.

"I feel I have some knowlege in the area which I can transfer over to the newer students," Bone said. "Of course, I'm always willing to learn, too."

Renovations will begin on the dorm once the infamous "Hannibal Animals" have left for summer vacation. Plans include installation of padded walls, black lights, and assorted drug-related paraphernalia in each room. The building is expected to hold 100 students after renovations are completed, and the total cost of the repairs has been estimated at $1.69 million, according to Melancholy.

"Nothing is too good for this breed of student," he said. "Like the Vietnam veterans, the drug-oriented student has always been shown in a negative light, and we're out to change this."

Students are generally ecstatic about the new lifestyle being offered at Hannibal Hamlin Hall. Applications for admittance into the dorm were accepted only on April 17, as an estimated 5,300 students stormed the Wells Commons business office for a chance for what one hopeful described as "the trip of a lifetime."

Surprisingly, the campus police do not expect problems with the new lifestyle, as most officers agree that if the "druggies will now play together, stay together and pray together."

"If problems do come up," said UMOPD officer Terri Regress, "Then perhaps we can strike up a deal. The students should be willing to make some sort of a trade."

However, one officer, Sergeant Audie "Keg Chest" Murphy, is not happy with the drug endurance program slated for Hannibal Hamlin Hall because he feels that the drug aura surrounding the dorm will shed an ugly light on the former vice-president for whom the dorm is named.

"Just because Jody Powell can take a toot now and then doesn't mean that the good name of Hannibal Hamlin should be dragged through a sea of hallucinogens," Murphy said.

Stoning reintroduced as form of punishment

by Aldo Moro

In a move which is expected to take some of the workload off the diversion pregra next year, in its handling of disciplinary and criminal cases formally handled by Student Illegal Servitude, The Stupid Senate voted vandalism, thefts, or any other problems that arise in the dorms, they will take them to the complex committee," she said. "The committee will take all factors into account and pass judgement and sentencing accordingly."

The new system calls for punishment by stoning. The committee will determine the severity of the offense and appoint a "Peer stoning group" which will vary in numbers according to the offense committed.

For example, an offense of playing a stereo too loud would result in the offender being stoned by a group of no more than seven residents.

Such offenses as excessive marijuana smoke emanating from under doors would result in stoning by a group of four, Morefun said, while an offense of leaving vomit on the hall floor would merit a stoning by five or six, depending on the amount left and the time taken to clean it up.

Although the number of persons involved directly in the stonings will vary, Morefun said, each person chosen would be allowed only five rocks to throw, a number equal to the number of complexes on campus. All stonings will take place on the Mall in an effort to provide the utmost humiliation to the offender.

"We hope this will take a big load off the diversion program," Student Blundermont President Charlie Cursor said. "This system of punishment has worked very well in the past and should work well again."

Student Illegality Servitude paralegal Juan Simon said this new system will only result in more cases for the service to handle. "Wouldn't you seek legal advice if you were the subject of a stoning in this day and age?" he asked.

Jerome Nesbitt is the first student to be punished with the new stoning method.

Tuesday night to initiate a peer-punishment program.

Starting next semester each complex will set up a committee "to hear residents' complaints of student misconduct and judge them according to the severity of their actions," said Joking Morefun of Residential Strife.

"From now on when students have legitimate complaints about noise,

Tanks replace cruisers on campus police force

by Shawn Broadprick

The police department has decided to trade in its four-door Dodge cruisers for XM-1 tanks, police spokesman Terry Birdbath explained today.

"You can't expect a really full-sized man to fit in one of those small little cruisers," said Birdbath. "We tried them out for a while, but our officers have trouble squeezing into them now."

Critics have charged that the officers are actually incredibly obese, and are just using the "full-sized man" ploy to hide this fact.

Birdbath disdains any such charges. "None of our officers weigh over 400 pounds. Any statement to the contrary is a vicious lie!"

Policemen point out that having XM-1 tanks will increase their efficiency, enabling them to travel through heavily wooded areas at speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour, and proving a match for any opposition from campus organizations.

"I tell you, some of those vicious scum on this campus have no respect for authority," said one officer, Tomato (Big belly) Murphy. "One of the commie vermin threatened me with a sharpened pencil just the other day."

It's a good thing I had my nightstick, and could incapacitate him by shoving it down his throat, or he could have killed me!"

Some people have complained that the XM-1's just aren't worth the cost, they run about 1.5 million dollars apiece, and they get three gallons to the mile. However, Birdbath brushes aside such comments.

"What do you want, to save a little money," Birdbath asked, as he bit the head off a parrot, "or law and order?"

Death watch

What's all this I hear about Student Lethal Services?

The Student Babblement wanted to take away all of SLS's money because they didn't provide services for enough people. But who really wants to see people die all over campus, anyway?

They should fund Student Lethal Services all the money they can if it means killing fewer people. Administrative sources have repeatedly said that there are too many students being housed on campus. One would think that the administrators would fund SLS if they really were worried about the overpopulation on campus.

Now, as what appears to be the ultimate copout, Student Babblement has decided to make students pay a "losers fee" in order to receive valuable services from SLS. Who is going to pick the losers?

If a fraternity person makes the selection, he's going to pick a bunch of granolas. If a dorm rat has his druthers, he'll probably pick a granola too. The off-campus students are not being treated fairly. They are the ones that must buy their own food and pay the rent and the oil. Why should they be forced to pay a five dollar losers fee so they may be tortured by Student Lethal Services? It's just not fair.

Also, where does Student Lethal Services get off maiming and killing innocent college students. It's one thing to rid a beautiful campus such as this of drug addicts, flunkies and women who are here for the sole purpose of jinding a husband, but what about the rank and file student who toils for long hours just to maintain a C average. If someone chooses him to pay the losers fee, then the student places himself involuntarily at the mercy of the SLS.

The whole situation just plain stinks. Student Lethal Services is a reputed underling of the Anti-Life Defamation League, while Student Babblement is an annual unanimous choice of the NCAA All-ineptness Team. It is truly a sad state of affairs when killers and just plain wangers are telling everybody who should live and who should die. Things have to be changed before Aldo Moro, who is reportedly in the area, takes control and changes this entire campus into the trunk of a Mercedes Benz for his own perverted reasons.

The time has come for action.

Oh, did you say Student Legal Services?....

To hell with the people that really know, have a happy summer because Student Lethal Services says it might be your last.

Squirrel power

Sharlie Mertle was exasperated. When The Prudent Babblement looked like it might oppose his stand on clearcutting the university mall, Mertle was destined to lose this battle unless he resorted to cheap-shooting those venerable elm trees that have graced this place since God created Slim Shitman albums.

His plan was threefold. First, he circulated a flyer stating tht the elms have engaged in unnatural three-to-tree relations in broad daylight. Second, he asked the Complete Tree Institute to investigate allegations that the elms that have already been cut down have been used in the production of marijuana rolling papers. Third, he went up in front of the Prudent Babblement and proclaimed he did not want to go out on a limb and defend these organic growths which have obviously presented a hindrance to many a frisbee player.

The clencher for Mertle's pathetic plan to ruin the aesthetics of the mall was to propose a raise for all members of Prudent Babblement. Mertle's plan was whole heartedly adopted by the Prudent Babblement. During these hard economic times, Mertle's plan was Ok'd because money would not be involved, simply a little rhythmn method and preference of left or right hand.

However, Mertle's battle had just begun. It seems the administration had a different plan for the mall elms.

Vice Cresentroll for Studpid Affairs Chump Acidid proposed to the Broad Crusties that the elms be cut down and milled so that they could be used to build a student-faculty weekend retreat. The plan included salvaging parts of Coburn and East Annex for the purpose of adding some historical esthetics to the new structure.

In addition, the elms would be used to buttress the sagging top floor of the Memorial Union.

But the final outcome of the elms' dilemma was not determined by either the Prudent Babblement or the Administration. In actuality, the elms' fate lay in the hands of an uncontrollable faction.

The future of the elms depended on the resilience of a few strong beings, namely the campus squirrels. These furry little critters are a stubborn lot. They simply refuse to allow their nesting grounds, which has been the site of many a menage de trois, to become the victim of another bureaucratic mishap.

In protest, the spuirrels are nailing themselves to the elms until they are guaranteed the survival of the tall timbers and an additional $2.5 billion for loss of blood.

Mertle has proven to be unsympathetic to these threats, but the squirrels have insisted that their voices will be heard.

The blood bank will be the judge.

Dear Vincent Heartless:

I wanna have you send me those art commandos you captured last week. I need many more mens like dem real kweek. After you get done torturing them, ship them down here to El Salvador so I can geeve dem really good yobs.

I hear you guys up in Maine don't take no sheet from nobody. When dose art commandos get outa solitary confinement, pleeze don't hurt dem no more and let dem come to El Salvador. We need

If you don't tink dey will be good colonels, maybe we can train dem for our death squads. They might wanna help burn rebel villages or some'pin. I dunno, we just need help for the junta, because Prezedent Raygun ain't sending enough ammo and helicopters, and we need some fenders and windows for our Mercedes reel bad. De ones we got are fulla bullet holes, and the tape decks are busted, too.

So pleeze, Perfesser Heartless, let those boys go. Put 'em on a plane with some M-16's and Uzis, some napalm if you got some extra, and don't forget the Mercedes parts. Liars series coverage good

Dear Deaquitor:

I greatly enjoyed the Maine Compost's insightful coverage of the Extinguished Liars Series. Through the sterling efforts of ELS Chairman Peter Slabbe, we have from some of America's most ruthless, I mean dedicated, citizens.

Gordon Giddy should be devoted to his singleminded devotion to his boss and amazing ability to stick his fingers in candle flames and burn himself with cigarette lighters.

General Eastmoreland was an inspiration to a generation of young American men. Thanks to him, thousands of them discovered the joys of menial labor and the simple life in Canada. His comprehensive training programs enabled hundreds of Americans to find adventure in exotic places as highly-paid mercenaries.

Mr. Slabbe, thank you again and keep those Extinguished Liars coming. Maybe in the future you could get more Liars like Spirit Agnou, H.R. Baldeman, or Brute Lantz. If they won't come, try calling The Washington Most and have them send their Pugilist Prize winner Janet Crook.

Those poor old ladies

To the Editor:

Paul Fillmore, you ignorant slut.

How can you dare label those cuties who work in the checkcashing service "malignant old ladies?" Those dolls give me twice the amount of the check everytime I go to see them. They know they're committing a felony, but they are trying to rid themselves of the undeserved reputation that you so stupidly gave them.

Is your mother a "malignant old lady?" Is your mother?

Another thing, those sweet little dolls that work at the news stand have sent your name to the National Enquirer because of the bastardly attack that you leveled at them. You just wait and see what the National Enquirer is going to do to you.

Wait a minute, this week's edition just came in. Let me read here for a second...."Paul Fillmore, an infamous reporter for the Volkswaen Repair Annual, was seen stepping out behind the Moona Base disco with a....."

Paul, a malignant old lady is too good for your type.

Sorry about pools of vomit

To the Editor:

I'm really sorry I wrote to the Maine Compost complaining about the pools of vomit in Gannett Hall.

Like everyone else that lives here in the "Cesspool of Stewart Commons", I realize that one must adapt to diverse living conditions. Thus, I have come to the conclusion that vomit is, in fact, a welcome addition to any living environment.

While some residents of Gannett will deny to the end that there is vomit flowing down the hallways, I will be the first to admit that I have donated my share of the slimy substance to the splendor that is Gannett Hall.

The fact that vomit is the most prevalent decoration in the dorm should not be taken as the least bit degrading by the campus at large. In fact, most Gannett residents take pride in the work involved in creating this aquatic monster. Many beers were consumed, many fingers entered many mouths, not to mention a large supply of pea soup which was prepared by those "malignant old ladies" that thrive on creating these grotesque concoctions.

But since my dormmates won't come out of the closet and admit their admiration for the spectacle of streaming vomit, then I feel it is my responsibility to inform the community of this most unique of interior decorations.

Sincerely dried up,
Jim Bogus

S&M bondage a success

To the Editor:

This is a letter of thanks to all the hundreds of people who made the S&M Bondage Symposium a BIG success. This annual event sponsored by the UMO Orgy Club wouldn't have been possible without the 500 cases of Mazola and 40 yards of plastic sheets that were donated to the club by the Mazola Corp. On hand for the event was the filming crew of Real Peephole but unfortunately interrupted by an eruption in the middle of the crowd. They said however that they would come again next year. The highlight of the symposium was the chain and whip dance done by the members of the Orgy Club. Following the dance hotdogs and buns were eaten. If anyone wants to help organ-ize next year's event or is interested in becoming a member, we are holding our final meeting next Sunday night in the North Laydown Room of the Memorial Union. Please Come!

I need my machine gun

To the Editor:

Just because Reagan got shot at doesn't mean that you have the right to impose gun control. We can't help it if he is careless with whom he chooses to protect him! If gun control was in effect, I'm sure I would feel the brunt of it all.

You see, I own a submachine gun. I think I have a right as American citizen to defend and protect myself and my dorm room from the UMOPD. Those slimies have nothing better to do than to wander around my hallway and bathroom looking for a beer in someone's hand. I need my machinegun to protect me from these beer-takers and if gun control is put into effect I won't be able to defend my keg parties or my Jack Daniels. This is a life and death situation and not just something I dreamed up during an acid trip. Try to understand the wants and needs of an Orono college student who is protecting himself from the Zoo! It's the only way out.

Confessions of an abused cheerleader

by Scoop McGarble

Many little girls dream of growing up to become cheerleaders. In the spotlight during the big game, there can't be any greater thrill.

But cheerleading isn't all glamour and broad-shouldered football players.

"They used to make me practice splits until I hurt all over," said Miss X, a former varsity cheerleader at UMaine. "It was hell."

Miss X is young, petite, but not what could be called a knockout. "I never got the captain of the team. Even the managers ignored me."

Cheerleading has been Miss X's life. But unlike baseball to Chico Escudela, Cheerleading hasn't been "bery, bery good to Miss X."

It all started back in seventh grade, when Miss X got her first pom-poms. "I didn't want to try out, but my mother, who was a cheerleader, forced me. Also the peer pressure was great for girls with big mouths and any sort of physical potential to cheer."

Miss X's first indication that cheerleading wasn't for her came when she was a sophomore in high school. "Some of us cheerleaders and a group of football players were on a picnic. The others started to pair off. When I hollered 'How about me?', they stuffed into a trunk of a car. I couldn't leap and hop around mindlessly. It was murder."

Miss X is just now coming out of therapy after the abuse she claims to have taken from her cheering supervisors. "They hit me about the head and shoulders with my own pom-poms. And I shudder to think what they did to me with my megaphone."

What Miss X found most shattering was riding on the shoulders of her stuntman. "I enjoyed myself, but I felt so embarrassed to have anyone that intimate with me that I hardly knew."

Miss X is nearly totally recovered. Her doctor, Dr. Mannheim Whipsinger, said, "She no longer fears pom-poms. She's come to terms with her past. She's feels no great compulsion to giggle when in groups. It is still psychologically impossible for her to go into a split. But that's all right, because the ability to split isn't in demand in society as a whole."

Miss X is now at another university, majoring in fashion design. But her shattered past still pursues her. "There's are nights when I dream of myself shouting 'UMO, UMO' into a megaphone, but there's no one in the stadium."

Kaz retires

by Slim Price

It was a pitiful sight indeed which awaited reporters at a hastily summoned Boston Red Sox press conference Thursday morning as veteran slugger Yale Kastrzowski finally called it quits.

Supported by two unidentified men in white suits, Kaz twitched drooled, and rolled his eyes back in his head, while mumbling over and over reporters: "I can't take it any longer...I just can't take it..."

Fans and the press alike were astounded at Kaz' reactions when Red Sox pitcher John Twodoor advanced to the podium where he stood, evidently to wish the great man in his retirement. When Twodoor extended his hand, Kaz promptly bit three fingers off the pitcher's throwing hand, screaming "Now maybe you'll be able to get it over the plate! You bastards!"

Mertz drafted

ST. LOUIS--The St. Louis football Cardinals announced their twelfth round draft choice today. It was Fred Mertz, formerly of "I Love Lucy" fame.

Mertz, a 5'7", 220-pound fullback out of Desilu Studios, said when reached at his Hollywood home, "Gosh, Ricky, what should I do?" The Cards also signed Ricky Ricardo to a free agent contract as a place kicker and halftime show. An understated Ricardo said "Lucy! Where are my drums?"

Also signed as free agents were Ricky Nelson, of "Ozzie and Harriet," by Baltimore, Robert Young, of "Father Knows Best," by Detroit, and Beaver Cleaver, of "Leave it to Beaver," by New Orleans.

Bruins traded for Black Bears

by Scoop McGarble

In a move that left the sports world shocked, UMZero athletic director Hal Westerly announced that the UMZero hockey team had been traded to the Jacob Brothers (of Infamy, Mass.) in exchange for the Boston Bruins and a minor league goalie to be named later.

"These travel expenses have gone right through the roof," Westerly said, pointing to a gap in the Alford Arena ceiling. "A pro team has more funds to play with."

In addition, a dog track and a boxing ring will be added to form the Harry Allfund Sports Complex, nicknamed the Shoe Palace. "We ought to be able to pack 10,000 into that place," said Stew Rascal, athletic business manager for UMZero, of the 3,000-4,000 capacity arena.

The Black Bears will be the new occupants of the Boston Garden. The Bears will play in the ECAC-North, but can now participate in the Beanhole Tourney, a prestigious tourney held each year in the Garden.

The move by the Bruins threw the N.H.I. back into havoc (Havoc, N.J.), where the commissioner, Ron Bungler, and his staff have been vacationing). The resulting realignment has the Bruins in the newly created Allfund Division, with Montreal, Hartford, Buffalo, and the Orono Bantam league club (which is favored to make the playoffs with Detroit being the one team eliminated.) The schedule has the B's playing Campbell Conference teams five times, Prince of Wales teams six times, and AHL teams on odd numbered Tuesdays.

Mayor Kevin White of Boston was delighted by the move. "The Black Bears are two and a half times the team the Bruins were," White said.

Bruins general manager Harold Snideone felt the move was propitious for his club. "The hockey fans are rabid in Maine. Wait until I tell Cheesie and the guys we'll be playing to a full house," Snideone added.

UMZero coach Jack Sampler was surprised but ecstatic. "The Boston Garden. All that tradition of the great Boston teams. Do the banners come with the place?"

Football coach Don Dodgerson wins the Hoss Cartwright lookalike contest. Details in supplement.

New El Salvadorean Grand Prix race to begin soon

SAN SALVADOR—Plans for a new Grand Prix race to be held in El Salvador were announced yesterday by the authoritarian regime's leader, Gen. Jose Muerte Darta.

The race will be run over the countryside of the tiny Latin American nation. Obstacles include shelling, gunfire, bodies laving about, and dysentary.

U.S. President Ron Brogan announced plans to send a team of automotive advisors into the country, led by Roger Penske of Richard Petty's crew. The Department of Transportation will send in a shipment of rebuild Mazdas for the El Salvadorians to train with.

Dorm triathlon planned

by Scoop McGarble

Your party has now been turned into a sporting event.

The intramural office has announced plans for a new form of dorm triathlon. "It features the three keys to dorm life: sex, drugs, and rock and roll," said Rave Aims, intramural director.

"It's a great idea. It'll turn all the excess energy away from destructive purposes," said Barry Burgers, UMZ detective, adding that the UMZPD would supply the proper drugs.

Any number of participants may take part, with advanced, intermediate and beginner categories. Contestants will be placed into categories according to experience.

The first part of the event is the drug competition. The beginners will be given alcohol, the intermediates marijuana, and the advanced groups harder drugs. The time duration of this segment is one hour.

The next hour is taken up with rock and roll. Punk, acid and good ol' boy rock and roll are all acceptable forms of music, with country and top-40 music unallowable.

Next comes the sex segment. This is the test of true endurance, with those surviving going on to a playoff. This part could last any length of time.

Finally, the contestants are subjected to five simple, common sense questions. Examples are "What's your name?", "Where are you from?", "You want that beer?". The winner is the one who gets the most questions right.

Aims plans to incorporate this event into the all-points standings. "We'll get those guys out of their caves, and make 'em work," Aims said.
