Caribou calves expected in near future

by Mark Kellis
Staff Writer

The next public viewing of the caribou, and the last one until the summer, is scheduled for April 11, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Mark McCollough, project leader of the caribou reintroduction project, said the pen will be off-limits to the public during May because the female caribou will be giving birth to calves.

"However, any unnatural stress could cause death for the newborn calves," McCollough said.

McCollough said there are 22 caribou, 20 female and two male. He added that 10 to 18 calves are expected within six weeks.

"It's going to be a surprise to us (how many calves that will be born). Caribou don't show their pregnancy," he said.

McCollough said the April 11 showing should be especially impressive to the public.

"All of the caribou are in excellent health. They came through the winter well.

"The stags are just starting to grow their antlers," he added.

McCollough said more than 8,500 people have come to see the caribou in the five previous public viewings.

The pen can be accessed from a dirt road behind Hilltop Commons. Spectators can gather in the parking lot behind the commons to attend the viewing, McCollough said.

"All of the caribou are in excellent health. They came through the winter well."

Mark McCollough

McCollough said a larger pen is currently being constructed to accommodate the new caribou.

The five-acre caribou pens are being expanded to include 10 more acres, which will provide more natural forage for the caribou and minimize the environmental impact.

The Williams Lumber Co. cleared the site for the 10-acre expansion, and fencing will be finished in June, McCollough said.

He said the pen will be ready for use by the caribou sometime in the fall.

McCollough said the pen is one way in which the Caribou Transplant Corp., a privately-funded corporation, will repay the University of Maine for all of its help.

"We're putting more than $10,000 into improving the pen area," McCollough said, adding that the pen will be left to the university in 1991 or 1992 when the caribou have been released from the pen.

McCollough said the newborn calves will be allowed to remain with their mother for a year after birth. The adult caribou form the nursery herd, and their young will be released when this year is up.

"They will be released sometime during the summer of 1987, probably in Baxter State Park," McCollough said.

McCollough said $90,000 is needed for the upcoming year for research and the care of the caribou.

Fund-raising is done in a variety of ways.

Currently the corporation is offering a limited edition print of a stag woodland caribou from a pencil drawing by McCollough.

Canada week explores Maine/Canada link

by Susan J. Plourde
Staff Writer

The connection between Maine and Canada is being celebrated this week, said Rand Erb of the Canadian/American Center.

Canada Week 1987 is the 12th edition of this annual event which focuses on the many ties between Canada and the United States, according to Professor James Herlan, assistant director of the Canadian/American Center.

From Monday, March 30 through Friday, April 3, this connection is explored in a series of films, lectures and exhibits.

The tradition of a Canada Week began 12 years ago when the New England/ Atlantic Province/Quebec Center was changed and expanded from a small regional program, said Herlan.

In 1975, the Canadian/American program at the University of Maine was expanded by President Howard Neville and Ronald Tallman, program director.

"MacNeil is the outstanding Canadian journalist of our time."

Rand Erb

"The establishment of the Canadian/American Center also expanded the sense of what the center was doing, putting more focus on Canadian/American issues," Herlan said.

Erb estimates that close to 50 percent of Maine's population has some Canadian ancestry.

"Canadian studies is so important, not only because of the emotional ancestral connection, but because of the ecological and technological ties," he said.

Many of the problems currently facing Maine, like acid rain and the spruce budworm, are international in scope, Erb said.

"The potato fields in Aroostook County don't realize when they cross the border and become Canadian potato fields; the Gulf of Maine doesn't realize when it becomes the Bay of Fundy," he said.

A public lecture and film on Thursday, April 2 will concentrate on one of the issues facing Maine-Canadian relations, the purchase of hydroelectric power from Quebec by Central Maine Power.

Highlighting the week's events is the lecture by Robert MacNeil of the MacNeil/Lehrer NEWSHOUR titled "The Influence of American Media on Canadian Culture" which will be held Friday, April 3 at 8 p.m. in the Hutchins Concert Hall.

Lecturer calls Platoon inaccurate

by Brian G. Quirion
Volunteer Writer

"We will never face the reality of Vietnam by watching movies like Platoon," said Lt. Colonel Philip Michaud, a professor of Military Science, at a program held Tuesday night in Hancock Hall.

Michaud has served in the Armed Forces for more than 26 years, with a year of that spent in Vietnam.

According to Michaud, Platoon was not as accurate a depiction of the war as the public has been led to believe.

"We did a lot more construction than destruction in Vietnam villages," Michaud said. "Platoon didn't show the guys like us who helped villages with malaria. As for the leper colony a few miles away, my doctor wasn't supposed to go out there, but he did. Our hearts went out to them."

According to Michaud, about 58,000 Americans were killed in Vietnam, and only 25 percent of those who died were killed in the type of combat shown in Platoon.

"The battles were about two to three minutes long and the enemy was very well equipped," Michaud said.

"That's what frustrated the American troops, the enemy was everywhere. They came and we hit each other as hard as we could. Then they left and we stayed."

"We took much better care of our dead than is shown in the movie, and we took better care of North Vietnamese dead," Michaud said.

According to Michaud, Platoon showed dying men squirming around like snakes on the ground with their heads cut off. He added that soldiers died with more honor than that.

"I don't know what motivates people to do what the writer of Platoon did," Michaud said. "The movie was taken out of context. You have to wonder how much of Vietnam is exaggerated. It's like a fish story. The more it's told, the bigger it gets."

Michaud said he had read that the writer of Platoon used to have nightmares about his experiences in Vietnam but no longer has them since he wrote the script.

"He no longer has nightmares, but it's amazing what a few dollars will do," Michaud said.

"I don't want to belittle the war. It was tough, but Platoon just is not an accurate picture," Michaud said. "Things like that happen in every war, but this story shows only one piece of the puzzle."

"One thing that upsets me is that because the movie is so popular, many different countries will see it. It paints us a color that we're not," Michaud said.

"Platoon will probably win an Academy Award because it's supposedly the most accurate depiction of the Vietnam War, and that's a tragedy," Michaud said. "The movie did not nearly project the war as I saw it."

"MacNeil is the outstanding Canadian journalist of our time," said Erb.

Born in Halifax and with family still living there, MacNeil will explore the influence of American television, films, books and lifestyles on Canadian culture, Erb said.

Other events throughout the week explore the Canadian/American history, business connections, arts and political policies.

Herman said "We have tried each year to have a different focus, with a well-known figure to wrap up the week."

"We are hoping that bringing in a prominent person like Robert MacNeil will draw interest from all over the community," he added.

Erb called Canada Week "the public expression of what goes on at the Canadian/American Center all during the year."

One thousand prints have been produced and are available for a donation of $25 to the Caribou Fund, 118 Route One, Falmouth, Maine 04105.

Richard Anderson, treasurer of the corporation, said, "I'm looking at 75 orders for prints in front of me."

Anderson said at least 400 prints have already been sold.

"We've gotten orders for the print from as far away as Alaska," Anderson said, attributing this interest to an advertisement for the print on the back page of the Maine Audubon Magazine.

Anderson said plans are underway to produce a four-color poster of a mother caribou and her calf.

"We have to wait until some babies are born (to do this)," Anderson said.

Anderson said $80,000 has already been raised.

"Not bad, for six months," he said. Anderson said the fundraising efforts will not slow down for a while.

"What we're working on is a five-year fundraising program," said Anderson.

Student arrested for trespass

Steve Roper
Volunteer Writer

It's not very often that someone gets convicted for trespassing in a police station, but for University of Maine student Eric Peterlein, his day in court has left him with a $100 fine and a mark on his record.

Maine District Court Judge Margaret Kravchuck found Peterlein guilty of criminal trespass, a class E misdemeanor, on the grounds that he had been asked to leave the Bangor police station more than once and had not done so.

Peterlein said he went to the police station late at night Feb. 7 in the interests of bailing out a friend. It was here that he first encountered patrolman Jeff Millard in the front lobby.

The stories vary considerably from that point.

"Hey dude, I'm just here to bail out my buddy," Peterlein was quoted by public prosecutor Gregory Cambell as having said to Millard.

According to Millard, the first witness to take the stand during the 10 minute trial, Peterlein was "asked at least ten times to leave" the station.

He also said that Peterlein had been "loud and boisterous," and had intentionally hit him in the chest as he was escorting the defendant out of the station.

It was at this point that the arrest was made.

According to Peterlein, who took the stand offering his own explanation of "what actually happened," Millard had never been hit in the chest but may have been jolted when Peterlein stopped abruptly to ask another question.

"I just stopped," he said, "I was never belligerent until after I was arrested."

He added that he had planned to leave the station but had underestimated the seriousness of the officer's intent just prior to the arrest.

"I didn't understand the circumstances as they were happening," he said.

Three days after the trial, Peterlein said he couldn't disagree with the verdict on technical grounds, but was disappointed at how the trial had progressed.

"He acted like he had been considerate," Peterlein said of Millard, referring to the events that had taken place during the night in question.

Peterlein added that the officer, apparently the only other person in the lobby at the time, ignored him when he inquired about his friend.

"That's what really infuriated me," he said.

"He was the one who actually initiated the problem by coming around the counter," Peterlein said the officer grabbed him by the arm to take him out of the building at that point.

"The fine doesn't bother me, it's the record that bothers me.

"I'd say it was educational," Peterlein said of the trial, "my feeling towards it was that (Millard's) account was overdramatized."

"Next time I'll have a better idea of what to expect," he said.

Sculpture represents final construction phase

by Melissa Buxton
Staff Writer

The bronze sculpture erected on the side of the Memorial Gymnasium represents the final phase of the building project completed last June.

The bronze ring is a symbol to show coordination of all sports with a variety of different athletes and equipment, said Ron Brown, construction specialist in Facilities Management.

Brown said although the building project was completed last June, it takes a while to select an artist who is best suited for designing a particular piece of artwork.

According to Stu Haskell, director of physical education and athletics, when the state allocates money for building construction, one percent of that money has to be spent on artwork.

As part of a state law which went into effect several years ago, this includes the renovation of old buildings and the construction of new, he added.

Brown said a committee selected by the president has the option of picking any artist to do the artwork.

There is a separate committee selected for every building project, he said, and each selects its own artist so that the same artist is not chosen for every project.

There is usually only one piece of art per building project unless the project is much bigger. This particular building project cost around $45,000 and the bronze sculpture cost approximately $3,000.

Interpretation unfair

by Michael Di Cicco
Staff Writer

The broadening interpretation of the protection of copywritten software could lead to unfair competition, said Michael Gemignani, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Gemignani said many courts seem to be extending copyright protection to the screen display the program produces instead of just protecting the program code.

"By extending copyright protection to the screen display, large firms like IBM can beat down competition from smaller companies," he said.

Gemignani also said the copyright protection of the displays would reduce the standardization of commands.

"The industry should move toward more standardization not away from it," he said.

"You cannot copyright an idea, only the expression of that idea," Gemignani said.

He said the courts have trouble drawing the line between where an idea ends and the expression of that idea begins.

Honors banquet planned for seniors

by Melissa Buxton
Staff Writer

In commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Honors Center, there will be a banquet for this year's graduating Honors students.

1937 was the first graduating Honors class and the three Honors graduates of that class have been invited back to talk with graduating seniors.

Two former Honors students, Alice Stewart, a retired history professor, and Mark Haskell, a lawyer in Washington, will speak on the value of an Honors experience.

Ulrich Wicks, director of the Honors program, said anybody can be in the Honors program who has a 3.0 grade point average. He said students are challenged with interdisciplinary approaches, independent study and a thesis or project.

Honors students are an elite group because there are only about 20 to 25 students who graduate each year from the graduating class of 1,600, he said.

There are approximately 150 to 175 Honors students, but many of them drop out for various reasons before they become seniors. Sometimes students switch majors and do not have time to work on Honors courses, and other times their GPAs drop or they cannot fit the courses into their major, he said.

Even those who do not make it through the entire Honors program say they have benefited from taking Honors courses, said Wicks.

Approximately 85 percent of all Honors students go on to graduate or professional school. Many go on to medical or law programs, he added.

Each year 25 students from all the colleges in the University of Maine System graduate with Honors degrees. Both their transcripts and their degrees will show that they are graduating with Honors, high Honors, or highest Honors.

In the last semester of their senior year, students have to go before an examination committee for testing and discussion, Wicks said.

Martha Wood, a senior forestry and Honors student, said that in the first two years of the program students study philosophy, psychology and humanities to broaden their education.

During the last two years of the program, students choose projects within their majors and work on their theses.

She said she is planning on going to graduate school and is convinced that the knowledge obtained from doing research has helped her.

Honors students converse with professor Steve Cohn.

"If a company goes to a judge and tells him they spent 20 years and thousands of dollars developing a program that another company cloned in three months for a few hundred dollars, the judge might be sympathetic to them.

"Courts have traditionally been against stealing and many judges want to find some way to stop it.

"This leads to judges who try to prevent what they see as an injustice, but trip all over themselves in the process," he said.

Gemignani said the method by which many companies legally clone other companies' software is known as a "clean room process".

The process works with two teams, he said.

"Team A deals with the software you want to copy. Their job is to extract from the program code the ideas that will be used to develop the competition.

"Team A then gives these pure ideas to team B, which has never seen the program, and this team independently produces a similar product," he said.

A law that would copyright the look and feel of the program, not simply the program code, would eliminate this practice, he said.

Gemignani said such a law would make no sense.

"Can you, in fact, copyright a trash can?" he asked.

Students needed to fill committee seats

by Matt Mullin
Staff Writer

The number of student vacancies on administrative committees has student leaders concerned.

The opportunity for student involvement is available, the problem is finding people who want to serve on the boards, said Christopher Boothby, president of student government.

"Right now within the student government there are a number of administrative and faculty committees that have a small number of students on them, and a large number of openings," he said.

"Some of the committees, such as the Student Aid Advisory, and the Substance Abuse Advisory, do not have any students as representatives," Boothby said.

John Turner, executive assistant to the president said, "As a part of the mandatory fee budgetary committee there will be a group of students that will be responsible for where the money goes."

"The committee will be established sometime soon. One of the big rules about this committee is that 51 percent of the members must be students," Turner said.

"Once they get set up they will only be making recommendations. We want part of their job to be decision making and not just making recommendations to President Lick," Turner said.

Boothby said, "The way to alleviate this problem is to first, bring the problem to the public, and second, find students interested in the committees."

"In some areas it is unfortunate that a number of individuals have to serve on a number of different committees. It should be the exception and not the norm," Boothby said.

Turner said, "It is basically Chris' job to appoint students. Quite frankly, the problem I have as his assistant is that I have about 40 committees and there is no way I could call all the students to find someone interested in any of the committees."

"Unfortunately, in many cases the students would be non-voting members," He said.

"If anyone is interested they should come in and see me, because we need to fill these spaces as soon as possible," Boothby said.

Other committees with few or no students include: Cooperative Education/Field Experience Advisory Committee, Student Services Advisory Committee, and the University Facilities Committee.

New fee will be obstacle

University of Maine President Dale Lick has got ten his way: the board of trustees approved the $200 student life fee 9 to 3 last Thursday. The battle concerning the fee was long and heated. During that time, administrators, including Lick, said they were trying to be as straightforward as possible with students.

But were they?

In the fee proposal, sent to Chancellor Robert Woodbury March 12, Lick stated that UMaine has an obligation to provide its students with services and programs that are comparable to those offered by other state land-grant institutions in New England.

He also stated that this was the sentiment of the Visiting Committee, selected by former Governor Joseph Brennan in 1986 to evaluate the UMaine System and report its recommendations to him.

Fine.

But in its report, the Visiting Committee recommended that a major portion of the money for improving programs and services for students come from the Maine State Legislature and from private sources.

The report made no mention of either implementing student fees or increasing tuition for this purpose.

In fact, the report stated, "The high tuition rate in the Maine System represents a serious obstacle for low and moderate income students."

Presumably, this also means costs in the form of fees also represent a "serious obstacle" for low and moderate income students and therefore should not be implemented.

Yet a $200 student life fee, and a room and board hike of $96 have already been approved by the BOT.

And a proposed in-state tuition increase of 5 percent will be taken up by the BOT at its May meeting.

If the tuition hike is approved, on-campus students will be paying roughly $400 more to attend UMaine next year, and off-campus students about $300 more.

In his report to Woodbury, Lick also stated that tuition in Maine was lower than that for other land-grant universities in New England.

But the Visiting Committee report states: "Compared to other state colleges, in-state tuition ranks 10th nationally, and out-of-state tuition ranks 4th."

The report goes on to state, "In a state in which per capita personal income is 20 percent below that national average, these costs constitute for many people a barrier to higher education."

In short, UMaine students have been railroaded by administrators using half-truths to serve their purposes.

If administrators had been straightforward with students from the beginning, maybe the student life fee proposal would not have received the outcry that it did.

April fool awards

After quietly watching the goings on at the University of Maine this year as a disinterested (and often uninterested) observer, I think it is necessary to recognize the more ridiculous and inane actions taken by individuals and organizations on campus.

Although I could fill the entire editorial page with awards, space constraints limit me to 80 lines.

Therefore I have listed only the most deserving of this year's recipients of the First Annual April Fool Awards.

The Pass the Buck Award — presented to members of the UMaine administration for their response when confronted with the fact that no one had gotten a building permit for the university's hazardous waste facility in Old Town. They reacted logically; everyone said he thought someone else got it.

The Pat on the Head Award — presented to the UMaine board of trustees and President Dale Lick for their treatment of UMaine students at the March 20 BOT meeting.

While trustees and Lick said the students speaking against Lick's mandatory fee proposal "handled themselves well" and were "articulate," the students were sent home with nothing more than a pat on the head and the warm consolation that President Lick "was proud of them."

The Untrust(worth)ee Award — presented to the BOT for hiking the cost of attending UMaine without using any of the $200 per student to improve academics.

As a prospective student, I would be more interested in attending a school with strong academic programs than one where I can attend four theater productions free.

The Dixieland Award — presented to President Dale Lick for his attempt to drag along a little bit of home with him after his move from Georgia Southern University.

He has hyped athletics more than academics just as he did at Georgia Southern and proposed a very expensive computer system that G.S.U. used which is considered obsolete by many computer experts. Lick also hired a pal from Georgia Southern whose area of expertise is this computer system and even invented a position for him — director of University Innovations. Too bad the computer proposal was rejected.

The Booby Prize — presented to the student body for electing Chris Boothby and Carl Robbins president and vice president of student government.

Rather than making any changes in the way the student senate is run or benefiting the student body, the two have made the in-fighting and foolish antics of the senate even worse.

Well folks, you asked for 'em — and you got 'em.

Mandatory fee is resented

To the editor:

I just finished reading the student life fee proposal that was inserted in the March 20-27 Weekly Calendar.

The writer begins by comparing the tuition and mandatory fee costs of the six state universities in New England.

As we all know, Maine is the least expensive of the six. This is used as justification for the fee. This section of the proposal reads like "Let's keep up with the Joneses." I can only speak for myself, but keeping up with the Joneses is not worth $200 a year to me.

The second justification of the fee is that the education and general budget is being bled off to support various cultural programs. The fee will free up money for ... what? The proposal doesn't say. This argument remains unconvincing until this is specified.

Others versions of the proposal which have been published in The Daily Maine Campus mention the possibility that all music department performances and a few events at the Maine Center for the Arts will be free, saying that students would attend more events if forced to pre-pay for them.

I, for one, resent the fact that the administration has decided how I should spend my time.

My final objection to the fee is that the administration seems to have overlooked one important fact — education at Maine is one of the most affordable in the country — which is a significant attraction to students. Increasing tuition and adding fees will negate this advantage.

Boothby attack irrelevant

To the editor:

This is in regards to the proposed impeachment of President Chris Boothby.

I have been following the situation in the Maine Campus for quite some time, and think that President Boothby has not been well represented. It seems that Senators O'Day and Higgins have a quarrel to settle with President Boothby, especially considering the fact that both were losing candidates against Boothby at some time or another. It is obvious that this attack on President Boothby is personal and has no relative evidence to back up what is said. It seems that the Maine Campus prefers to interview Senator Higgins over President Chris Boothby, after all, all I have seen in this distinguished newspaper is one senator's point of view. This attack on Boothby seems to be irrelevant, since he was, after all, elected to be our President of the Student Government.

A possible solution to this whole problem could be to inform certain senators to pay more attention to their immediate issues. Instead of otherwise trying to impeach duly elected President Chris Boothby out of a BRUISED EGO. After all, We, the student body, elected Chris Boothby to be our president, so why then would we want him impeached?

Paranoid delusions

To the editor:

In regards to Walt Karwicki's letter concerning "BIG BROTHER" in America, I have some questions. Mr. Karwicki, where do you get off with these paranoid delusions about life?

While your language impressed me somewhat (How much time did you spend in the dictionary before you got to the letter 'Q'?) your intelligence did not. What promoted this wonderful display of anal retentive behavior?

Perhaps it has to do with your childhood. Nevertheless I am talking about your present psychosis. You are attempting to create fear and distrust of the US government, in a futile effort to re-live the 60s. What evidence are you privy to, that allows you to make these accusations, but cannot reveal to your readers? Blackmail? Come on.

If the "BIG BROTHER" type of government that you believe is in control, really is in control, then they wouldn't have to resort to such measures to save their collective ass(ets). And your letter, what about that?

Such truth would have to be suppressed. Or better yet they might let you publish the letter, to preserve the illusion of freedom, and just prevent any mail from going to that address. (Humm...That might explain the empty mailbox.)

So, in light of it all, I have a few suggestions. First, take your fist out of your butt (doesn't that feel better?). Next, check yourself into one of those state hospitals, and let the nice men in the clean white coats help you. You don't have to take my advice, or anyone else's, and you can always leave. It's a free country.

Antisocial Behavior Committee meets

To the editor:

The Antisocial Behavior Committee was created by the University of Maine Council of Colleges in September, 1986 to review the occurrence of problem behaviors on Campus.

Committee members have been meeting regularly with individuals representing student affairs, residential life, the disciplinary process, fraternities, security, the health center and the EEO office. The Committee is in the information-gathering phase and will be available to meet with individual students and/or employees to hear about antisocial behavior concerns such as violence, vandalism and harassment and to tend recommendations.

The Committee is cognizant of the potential delicate nature of the material and pledges absolute confidentiality. You are encouraged to contact one of the committee members listed below to schedule a time from April 1 through April 10 to meet with committee members.

Committee:

News Briefs

Youth arrested in shotgun attack

CHICAGO (AP) — Police have charged a 16-year-old with eight counts of aggravated battery in a shotgun attack on a group of young people outside a store.

Nine people suffered minor injuries when the teen-ager opened fire late Saturday near the Cabrini-Green public housing project, police said.

Eight teen-agers and a 21-year-old man were treated at hospitals and released.

The juvenile allegedly fired on the people after they walked outside the convenience store, Sgt. Cindy Pontoriero said Sunday.

"This is an apparent gang rivalry," she said, adding that the police report did not identify the gangs involved.

Unemployment rate drops in Maine

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Maine's unemployment rate dropped to 5.9 percent in February, continuing to stay below the national average but among the highest in New England, the state Labor Department reported Monday.

The decline, from 6.8 percent in January, was attributed largely to seasonal factors such as the return of work-study students and hourly employees to their jobs after the holiday vacation season at private and public schools.

Last month's rate also compared to 6.2 percent in February 1986, a reflection of continuing increases in non-manufacturing jobs. Non-farm wage and salary employment increased at a rate of 4.7 of 22,000 non-manufacturing jobs far more than offset a loss of 700 manufacturing jobs, the department said.

Among the five New England states whose figures were available — Connecticut's was not available — Maine had the highest February unemployment rate. Still, the state's rate remained well below the national average of 7.2 percent, said department spokeswoman Alice Kirkpatrick.

'Sunflowers' bring $39.85 million

LONDON (AP) — An anonymous buyer Monday paid $39.85 million for Vincent van Gogh's "Sunflowers," a dazzling yellow work the artist once had hoped to sell for $125.

The price was more than triple the record for an auctioned painting.

The bid of 24.75 million pounds, accepted by telephone, came on the 134th anniversary of the birth of the Dutch artist.

Van Gogh committed suicide in 1890 at the age of 37, unable to sell his paintings.

The price stunned the packed saleroom at Christie's auction house. Art buyers and enthusiasts from around the world had gathered there expecting a record, but not of these proportions.

Christie's wouldn't disclose the buyer's identity or even the country the bid came from, but there were rumors that the buyer was in Japan. Christie's had sent the picture on a tour of Tokyo, New York and Zurich.

I am 99.9 percent certain it was from Japan," said New York dealer Jacob Baal-Teshuva, who watched the auction.

"There are only 10 to 15 people in the world, and the Getty Museum, who can afford that kind of money. It was a fantastic price, mind-boggling. Nobody expected it. We thought the top might be 18 million pounds (30 million)," he said.

In Malibu, Calif., spokeswoman Lori Starr of the J. Paul Getty Museum said the museum was not the purchaser.

Assigning hermit guardian disallowed

BOSTON (AP) — A Housing Court judge had no authority to appoint a guardian for a hermit fighting eviction from a lean-to on public land, a judge ruled Monday.

State Appeals Court Judge Joseph Warner ordered a stay of a lower court's ruling naming a guardian for Bill Britt, who has lived nearly 20 years at Chestnut Hill Reservoir. The stay is effective pending an appeal.

Britt has been in and out of court in recent months fighting a state effort to make him leave the five-acre patch he calls home.

Housing Court Judge E. George Daher has given Britt until July 1 to find a new home. But earlier, this month, after Britt resisted offers of housing alternatives, Daher said he would name a guardian to work with Britt's children to find him a new place to live.

Britt refuses public assistance and subsists on money he makes redeeming discarded cans and bottles.

Court to decide if snow can be owned

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Prosecutors will consider whether snow is private property in deciding whether or not to prosecute a woman who took a hatchet to a bikini-clad snowwoman she found offensive.

Chief Prosecutor John Carter has scheduled a meeting Tuesday in the case.

"The parties are coming in for review," Carter said. "I'll make a decision after they present their sides whether to go ahead with the case in municipal court or drop it."

Police cited Kathleen A. Zanio, 43, for disorderly conduct and vandalism of private property after she destroyed a snow sculpture with a hatchet on March 15.

The woman was part of a sculpture that also included a man and two children. Bill Hackbarth, 30, and his roommate Jeff Barnett, 33, had built it on their front lawn.

Ms. Zanio, a carpenter and former member of the School Sisters of St. Francis, could not be reached for comment Monday. There was no answer to her home telephone.

She was quoted earlier as saying: "To me it wasn't an artistic endeavor. This was exposing women's bodies again — and I took offense to that."

Dehmlow wins climb for leukemia

SEATTLE (AP) — As a man on his way up, John Dehmlow was unsurpassed. He climbed the 70 floors of stairs at the Columbia Seafirst Center in 7 minutes, 3 seconds.

Dehmlow of Bellevue was faster than anyone else up the 1,300 steps of the tallest building on the West Coast Sunday during a race to raise money for leukemia research. Some 675 people ran or walked up the stairs, raising more than $50,000. Among them were 58-year-old Mount Everest climber Jim Whittaker; Chris Mankin, 20, of Seattle, a leukemia victim who made the run in 13 minutes even though he was carrying his 5-month-old son, John Jr.

Gorbachev told to back up his promises

MOSCOW (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher challenged Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Monday to produce deeds that match his words about seeking better relations abroad and providing greater freedom at home.

Mrs. Thatcher took Gorbachev to task specifically on human rights and the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

"We will reach our judgments not on intentions or on promises but on deeds and on results," she said of Western leaders.

Gorbachev repeated the Kremlin position that it wants a political solution in Afghanistan, where Moslem insurgents have fought government troops since a communist coup in April 1978. An estimated 115,000 Soviets are ready to discuss human rights "openly and loudly" if the debate includes unemployment, homelessness and discrimination in the West.

"If we're going to talk about human rights, let's talk about all rights," Gorbachev said.

They spoke at a state banquet in the Grand Kremlin Palace on the third day of Mrs. Thatcher's official visit.

Mrs. Thatcher pressed the West's case for arms control, starting with elimination of medium-range nuclear weapons from Europe and restraints on shorter-range rockets.

Her attitudes are an important consideration for Gorbachev because Britain has its own nuclear arsenal and she has given strong support to U.S. defense policies.

Gorbachev accused the West of including "a package of conditions and demands on the Soviet Union" in proposals for an arms agreement.

"Instead of reductions in the nuclear arms arsenals, Europe is being offered a buildup of those arsenals, the deployment of American shorter-range theater missiles," he said. Gorbachev's reference was to statements by U.S. officials that Washington would consider converting some medium-range missiles to counter what it says is an overwhelming Soviet edge in short-range rockets.

Soviet officials oppose linking the shorter-range tactical weapons they have in Czechoslovakia and East Germany with an accord on the medium-range missiles both superpowers have in Europe.

The Conservative British prime minister restated her support of President Reagan's research project for a space-based defense system, commonly called "Star Wars," which the Soviets condemn. Western defense analysts say the Kremlin has a similar program.

As a means of quieting the current East-West debate on eventual deployment of space defenses, Mrs. Thatcher proposed making a timetable for the research programs of both superpowers and a commitment not to withdraw from the 1972 antiballistic missile treaty for a fixed period.

Car deaths more common in least populated areas

NEW YORK (AP) — Most deaths behind the wheel in the United States occur in the least populated places, while the Middle Atlantic and New England generally show the lowest motor death rates, an insurance company study said Monday.

In the nation, 19.6 people of every 100,000 died in motor accidents in 1986, a 3 percent rise from 1985, said Margaret Mushinski, author of the report in the Statistical Bulletin of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The upturn occurred while a national 55 mph speed limit was in effect, and efforts to tighten laws on seatbelt use and drunken driving were being made, she said.

She said 63 percent of motor fatalities occurred in rural areas.

Men had a higher rate of motor fatalities. The death rates were 44.5 per 100,000 for men and 10.4 for women.

For adult men, Wyoming had the greatest motor death rate, 85.9 per 100,000, followed by New Mexico with 81. Rhode Island showed the lowest rate, 25.7 per 100,000, with New York next at 31.

Among women, the highest rate was 28.1 per 100,000 in Nevada and 24 in Montana, while the lowest was 9.2 per 100,000 in Massachusetts and 10.1 in New York.

The state figures came from 1979-81 data, the most recent available with breakdowns by age, sex and states, Met Life said.

Large weathervane is tourist attraction

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — This city is known for flashy tourist attractions such as Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm, but another attention-getter is an ordinary 32-year-old, three-bedroom house.

Well, almost ordinary.

One of the first things passers-by notice is a 20-foot-high weather vane incorporating six bicycle wheels and a bunch of Volkswagen hubcaps. The wind moves all the components, including three ornamental roadrunners that top the contraption.

"I guess it's kind of a landmark," said homeowner Henrietta Biegler who, with her husband Henry, in his 80s, spent 32 years making the place a family museum of sorts. "We did it all ourselves, just the two of us."

The house is fronted by a garden full of meticulously sculpted shrubbery, palm trees and cactus, ornamental animals and cement goddesses.

Inside, there's a 12-by-4-foot table with an intricate mosaic top and a tinman figure made entirely from automotive parts, including spark-plug toes.

Among the thousands of keepsakes in the home are sports trophies and gumball machines, a basket full of baseballs and lamps that pulsate with music from a tape played and other remnants from the Biegler's four children.

"Everyone who comes in here about has a fit," Mrs. Biegler said. "They just stand there and look at all of this and say 'I can't believe this.'"

Robbers get away, diners get free food

DALLAS (AP) — Two armed men robbed patrons of a French restaurant of $200,000 in cash and jewelry, but they didn't completely ruin the diners' meal.

Witnesses said customers applauded police when they arrived, resumed their meals and were told when they left that Saturday night's dinner was on the house at Chez Gerard.

"Everybody was just sitting there, having dinner, and all of a sudden they were real poor," Ladelle Ross said.

She said her house was burglarized last March, so it makes no sense to let the threat of crime keep her at home.

"I'm just going to go in blue jeans and plaid shirt the next time, try to look real poor and charge it on plastic," she said.

Restaurant owner Guy Calluad told customers the men were robbers and said they should turn over their money and jewelry.

The robbers went from table to table collecting cash, rings, necklaces and wallets in a canvas bag.

"Hope you enjoy your dinner," witnesses quoted one of the men as saying.

"It's been nice doing business with you," the man said as he left, witnesses said.

Police said Sunday it appeared the men were larger and older than those believed responsible for some restaurant robberies in January and February.

Marines replace all 28 security guards at U.S. Embassy in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps, cooperating with the State Department, said Monday it has agreed to replace all 28 security guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow with other Marines as a special precaution.

The move follows the disclosure that two former guards are suspected of repeatedly allowing Soviet agents in the embassy late at night in what has been called a critical breach of security.

Meanwhile, Pentagon sources said Cpl. Arnold Bracy, one of the former guards suspected of espionage, was reduced in rank from sergeant for fraternization with a woman while in Moscow.

The sources, who asked not to be named, previously disclosed both Bracy and Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree became involved with Soviet women who worked at the embassy.

The sources said Bracy's reduction in rank came last August, but it did not attract any special attention until investigators began probing Lonetree's activities earlier this year.

The Marine Corps stressed none of the guards currently posted in Moscow is suspected of wrongdoing. But it said in a joint statement with the State Department it would replace all guards sometime in April.

"This measure is precautionary in nature and is intended to facilitate an investigation of the security program at the U.S. Embassy," the statement added.

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the men withdrawn from Moscow would eventually be transferred to guard duties at other embassies. She said she knew of no plans for special screening or training for the Marines who would replace the guards now in Moscow.

The Marine Corps said the guards would be transferred to the headquarters of their parent command at the Marine base at Quantico, Va., where Bracy and Lonetree are being held.

The State Department said last week it had launched a wide-ranging probe of security procedures in Moscow along with a new "damage assessment," following the arrest of Bracy, 21, of New York City.

Bracy was arrested two weeks ago and transferred to Quantico on March 24. He is being held in confinement pending a pretrial investigation and the placement of formal charges.

Last Friday, however, the corps said Bracy's arrest and the continuing military investigation had prompted the lodging of five new charges against Lonetree, bringing the number of counts he faces to 24.

In outlining the new charges, the corps for the first time alleged that Lonetree and Bracy had conspired to allow Soviet agents inside sensitive areas of the embassy on "numerous and diverse occasions" last year.

Crowd throws stones at Spain poison trial defendants

MADRID, Spain (AP) — An angry crowd threw stones Monday at defendants emerging from the opening session of the trial in the poison cooking oil case that killed at least 584 people six years ago.

Prosecutors say the 38 defendants should serve thousands of years in jail and pay millions of dollars in fines for selling the toxic imitation olive oil.

Thousands of people, many related to victims, gathered outside the exhibition hall in a park on the outskirts of Madrid, where authorities created a makeshift courtroom. The trial, where charges include homicide and fraud, is expected to last about six months.

Some in the crowd cursed and threw stones when the defendants emerged from the building after the morning session. Stones hit Adela Jaraute Martinez, the only woman among those on trial, as her lawyer led her to a waiting car.

Lawyers on both sides complained about a lack of security and suggested the trial might have to be suspended until protection was improved.

Juan Miguel Bengoechea, the main defendant, gave the government lawyer vague replies and would not answer questions from private lawyers representing victims or their families. The first death was reported in May 1981 from the adulterated rapeseed oil intended for industrial use.

Although Bengoechea told an investigating judge in 1981 he knew the oil was destined for human consumption, he told Prosecutor Eduardo Fungairino on Monday that he was aware of it only after reports of deaths.

Bengoechea's company imported the oil from France by the tankerload. The defendant told the three-judge panel his company imported adulterated rapeseed oil for 12 or 13 years for industrial purposes.

He replied vaguely when Fungairino tried to demonstrate that Bengoechea knew that the oil was destined for human consumption and that the dye used to mark it for industrial use was toxic. He said at one point he was not aware of what was on the bills sent to firms that bought the oil from him.

UMaine softball team's good fortune continues

by Kevin Sjöberg
Staff Writer

The University of Maine softball team's good fortune continued this past weekend when it picked up a pair of doubleheader sweeps over Central Connecticut State and Boston College.

The Black Bears improved their record to 18-12 by topping Central Connecticut 7-0 and 4-0 on Friday before winding up their road swing with 5-1 and 11-1 victories Sunday over BC.

Rain canceled Saturday's action against the University of Rhode Island.

Maine collected 46 hits during the four games and continued its superb pitching en route to a successful weekend trip.

Coach Janet Anderson also said the team showed great improvement on the defensive side, citing one particular incident that took place in Sunday's second game.

The Bears were able to escape a bases loaded, none out situation in the fourth inning with just one run being allowed to score.

The score was 3-0 at the time, and Anderson said that the team's maturity was shown in being able to get out of the jam.

"They really buckled down in that spot, they didn't lose their composure," Anderson said.

Maine went on to score eight runs in the final three innings to break the game wide open.

In Friday's opener, Lynn Hearty pitched a three-hit shutout while striking out nine along the way to pace the Black Bears to an easy 7-0 win.

Stacey Caron went 4-for-4 while Michelle Duprey slammed a two-run triple to carry the Maine offense.

Friday's second game again saw a solid pitching performance turned in, as Kim Thibeau hurled the day's second shutout, this time a 4-0 victory.

Hearty ripped a solo homer in the third inning to open the scoring for Maine. Caron collected three hits to lead the Black Bear attack.

Sunday, costly errors opened the door for Maine's three-run first inning, and the Black Bears were able to hold on for a 5-1 win over BC in the afternoon's first game.

Hearty was again masterful on the mound, upping her mark to 11-6 with a seven-hitter. The senior co-captain also compiled 10 strikeouts while walking nobody.

Freshman shortstop Leah Mashaw knocked in a pair of runs with a double and a sacrifice fly.

Maine capped off the double header with an impressive 11-1 win over the Eagles.

Thibeau threw a six-hitter, while Maine's offense banged out 15 hits.

Duprey continued her torrid hitting, going 3-for-3 and collecting five runs batted in.

Her grand slam homer in the fifth inning was part of a rally that turned a 3-1 lead into an 8-1 advantage.

Denise Boutin also had three hits, while Caron, Kerrie Higgins, and Hearty had two apiece.

"We were very consistent throughout the weekend," Anderson said. "Both our offense and defense played really well."

The coach noted that despite several fine individual performances, she is unable to single out any particular player responsible for the team's success.

"Everyone has contributed to the entire effort," Anderson said. "When one says 'the University of Maine softball team, there is a real emphasis on team.'"

Anderson said that even the bench has been a big part of every game, with substitutes sporting "rally caps" during big innings, made famous by the world champion New York Mets. Non-starters also do some running and loosening up in between innings and all find a way to somehow stay in the game.

"The atmosphere is much different this year," Anderson added.

The busy schedule continues this weekend, as the team will participate in the Husky Invitational hosted by the University of Connecticut.

Other teams in the event are the University of Massachusetts and the University of North Carolina.

The Bears will play UConn Friday at 1:30 p.m. in the opening round. Maine has not beaten last year's ECAC runners-up in any of their previous 12 meetings.

"We're going in with a lot of determination," Anderson said. "We feel we have as good a chance to win this (tournament) as the other three teams do."

"We've got to play errorless in the field and keep the hitting going, if we do we should be in the tourney from start to finish."

Hoosiers tip Syracuse for NCAA title 74-73

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Keith Smart, a junior college transfer, scored 17 of his 21 points in the second half, including, the game-winner with five seconds left Monday night to give Indiana a 74-73 victory over Syracuse and earn Coach Bob Knight his third national basketball title.

Smart also intercepted Derrick Coleman's floor-length desperation pass as time ran out.

Syracuse had a chance to win but Howard Triche missed the second of two free throws with 38 seconds left and Coleman missed a 1-and-1 with 28 seconds remaining.

In between, Smart, a quick 6-foot-1 guard, grabbed the rebound of Triche's miss and drove for a goal to cut the Orangemen's lead to 73-72. He hit the game-winner from just inside the 3-point mark at the baseline as the Hoosiers finished the season with a 30-4 record.

Knight joined the select company of UCLA's John Wooden, with 10, and Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, with four, as coaches who have won more than two NCAA crowns. Knight, who won titles in 1976 and 1981, saw the fulfillment of the recent adjustments he made. Previously, he was reluctant to sign junior college transfers and had been opposed to using zone defenses.

But those changes helped Knight share the Big Ten title with Purdue this year and ultimately took him to New Orleans.

Steve Alford, Indiana's all-time leading scorer, added 23 points, hitting seven of 10 from 3-point range. His only other goal was a layup.

Forward Daryl Thomas added 20 points and Dean Garrett, another junior college transfer, had 10 points and 10 rebounds.

Syracuse, which shared the Big East title with Pittsburgh and Georgetown, got 20 points from point guard Sherman Douglas, 18 from center Rony Seikaly and 12 from guard Greg Monroe.

Coleman, a 6-9 freshman, grabbed 19 rebounds, two short of the tournament record set by Bill Spivey in Kentucky's championship win over Kansas State in 1951.

Indiana trailed most of the first half, but two straight 3-pointers by Alford put them in the lockerroom at halftime with a 34-33 lead.

Indiana took a 41-37 lead in the second half, but Syracuse outscored the Hoosiers 15-3, with reserve Derek Brower contributing five points and Seikaly four points for a 52-44 lead.

The Hoosiers bounced back with a 10-0 run as reserve Joe Hillman made two steals and Garrett blocked shots by Seikaly and Coleman. Smart's jumper capped the run for a 54-52 Indiana lead.

Syracuse came back with seven straight points, the last on Douglas' 3-pointer.

Indiana came back to tie it at 61 on a basket by Smart. After three more ties, Seikaly scored with 2:03 remaining. He was fouled on the play, but missed the free throw.

Smart then tied it at 70 with a quick move to the basket with 1:20 left.

Triche then made a goal with 56 seconds remaining for a 72-70 Syracuse lead. Smart, from nearby Baton Rouge, then missed a shot with Triche grabbing the rebound. But Smart came back to hit the final two baskets.

As Coleman went to the free throw line with 28 seconds left after being fouled by Smart, no Syracuse players joined him along the lane. When he missed, Indiana had an easy rebound. Smart, named most valuable player, then took over.

Syracuse, bidding for its first NCAA basketball title, finished the season 31-7. The Orangemen's only other Final Four appearance was in 1975, and they finished fourth.

Indiana won its fifth title overall, also winning in 1940 and 1953 under Coach Branch McCracken.

Syracuse, a poor free-throw shooting team with a 64 percent mark this season, made only 11 of 20 Monday night. Both teams shot 48 percent from the field and Syracuse outrebounded the Hoosiers 38-35.

The Hoosiers' route to the title started in Indianapolis, where they beat Fairfield and Auburn to advance to the Midwest Regional in Cincinnati. There, they beat Duke and Louisiana State to get to New Orleans.

On Saturday, the Hoosiers beat top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, 97-93.

Syracuse, the No. 2 seed in the East, beat Georgia Southern and Western Kentucky on its home court, then won the regional by beating Florida and North Carolina at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

The Orangemen beat Providence 77-63 to advance to the final.
