Addition near completion

by Melissa Buxton
Staff Writer

Construction of the two-story addition to the Alfond Arena is in its final stages of completion.

The construction, which began in early September, is expected to be completed the third week of April.

Shawn Walsh, head hockey coach, said the overall cost of the project totals $415,000, with $25,000 coming from the president's discretionary fund and the rest from private donations.

Bruce Crowder, assistant hockey coach, said the main purposes of the new facility are to better serve the hockey players and to help recruit more students into the hockey program.

He added that many schools are trying to upgrade their athletic facilities in order to attract better recruits into athletic programs.

He said when high school seniors are trying to decide between two schools having the same academic program, they will probably choose the school with the best athletic facilities.

The new facility consists of a locker room about three times the size of the old one, a weight room, and a lounge.

"The new lounge will serve as a better place for hockey players to meet and talk after the games," Crowder said.

Previously, the team has had to go to other places, such as the Wells Commons cafeteria, for banquets.

However, the new addition is equipped with a kitchen. Hockey players, parents, and fans can now

Legislature undecided on speed bill

by Christina Baldwin
Staff Writer

Maine representatives are still debating the feasibility of a bill that would raise the speed limit on stretches of interstate highways outside of urban areas.

Rep. John Bott, R-Oroho, said after last week's promise from both houses of Congress to override President Reagan's veto of the bill that it was time to look at the law that is being habitually broken.

"When you have a law that is being universally violated, then it doesn't say much for the law," he said.

Bott said that it was time to re-evaluate the 1974 law that brought the speed limit down from 70 mph to 55 mph.

"The '74 law fulfilled the goals it was established for," he said. "It was set up to conserve energy and save lives and it did that."

Representative Patrick Paradis, D-Augusta, a member of the highway safety committee, said he agrees.

"It did help to conserve energy," he said. "But we need to keep conserving. If we don't, we'll be in the same situation we were in in 1974."

"If I owned an oil field, then I would be advocating the 65 mph speed limit law."

Bott said Americans do not need to conserve energy as much they we did in 1974 because of the fuel-economy cars that have been marketed since then.

But both agree the real issue is the safety of giving states the freedom to raise the speed limit on stretches of interstate highways outside urbanized areas.

Bott said that high speeds are not a factor in highway fatalities.

GSS hears from Lick

by Mike Laberge
Staff Writer

During a General Student Senate meeting which featured heated discussion on the $200 student life fee, concern was voiced about the image of the student senate and an act to impeach Student Government President Christopher Boothby was tabled.

During Wednesday night's meeting, which lasted more than four hours, Garry Higgins, off-campus senator and sponsor of the original resolution to impeach Boothby, put forth a petition which called for the immediate resignation of Boothby.

The petition was signed by 500 students and, if approved by the student senate, will require Boothby's immediate resignation.

If it is defeated by the GSS at next Wednesday's senate meeting, the matter will be placed before students in a re-call election.

Carl Robbins, president of the senate, said the new resolution was the equivalent of "double jeopardy" for Boothby.

Boothby said that Higgins, by drafting the petition, was trying to do "the same thing twice."

He said he had received assurances from senators that the original impeachment resolution would have been voted down.

But throughout the meeting, senators and members of the audience argued back and forth about Boothby's status.

John O'Dea said that the movement to impeach Boothby was not "just Higgins and O'Dea."

"These issues are hot issues at this university," he said.

O'Dea said the impeachment resolution was not a personal attack on Boothby, as had been suggested.

"I haven't lost anything to Chris, I have lost something from Chris. That is my confidence in him," he said. "Christopher Boothby betrayed the student body."

Boothby said the results of the student life fee poll were never binding.

"It said that right on the poll," he said.

Boothby said he had researched the issue, and that he had acted in the best interest of students in voting for the concept of the student life fee.

But Tom DuBourg, off-campus senator, felt otherwise.

"I don't agree with what he did. I think he has acted in bad faith," he said.

Dan Tremble, board of trustee representative to the GSS, had mixed feelings about the issue.

"I think that Chris was very wrong in the vote he took. I think he flagrantly misrepresented students," he said.

But Tremble said impeaching Boothby would do more harm than good.

"You're trying to restrict his freedom of speech and I think that is a greater offense," he said.

Den to stay open later

by Susan J. Plourde
Staff Writer

Liability is the primary reason for the changes in hours at the Bears' Den, according to manager Steve Wong.

By extending the den's hours on Wednesday and Thursday to 1 a.m., Wong hopes to curtail students who have been drinking from trying to make last call at other establishments.

Dave Rand, Memorial Union director, agreed and said changing the hours "somewhat minimizes the idea of going somewhere else."

"By closing earlier we were putting most of them on the road," Wong said. "It increases the probability that we can be sued."

Other precautions taken by Wong include methods to reduce the number of underage students gaining access to the den.

Crews begin to repair winter's ravages on roads

by Marc Larrivee
Staff Writer

One of the most brutal Maine winters in recent memory has created an abundance of potholes on the roads of the University of Maine campus.

Brian Page, assistant director of operations, said road crews are currently out trying to deal with the damage caused by the hard winter.

"Right now we're frantically patching up the holes as fast as we can," Page said.

He explained the process which brings about the appearance of potholes.

"The frost which gets in the ground during the winter comes out at the least of resistance in the pavement, and breaks up those parts of the roads," he said.

Specifically, work is being done on the cratered areas adjacent to Alford Arena and Hitchner Hall, he said.

Also, Page said, crews are working on Long Road and on a road leading to the farm area on campus which has been washed out due to the melting of snow and the recent rainfall.

More extensive road work, he said, won't be done until the late spring or early summer.

Merton Wheeler, associate director of operations, said each year after the winter ends, the road crew does a survey of all the damaged roads on campus and decides which ones are most in need of resurfacing or reconstruction.

"At that time we establish estimates for the cost for this type of work," he said.

In regard to the amount of money available for major road repair, Wheeler said he couldn't quote any figures.

"I really don't know because some of the money will come from next year's budget," he said.

Currently, the university is in the process of creating the campuswide budget for next year, he said.

Wheeler said the source of funding for these projects is drawn from both the current year's budget and the following year's budget.

"What we use is a combination of both budgets," he said.

He said their current budget has been greatly depleted due to the high cost of snowplowing during the winter.

"It was a hard winter in terms of snow, which causes more breakdown of equipment and more money to be put towards paying people for overtime," he said.

Wheeler said the crews will do as much as possible with the money available to improve the roads.

"We have to keep up with repairing the roads so their deterioration doesn't get out of hand," Page said.

WMEB survey shows student tastes

by Mike Laberge
Staff Writer

In an effort to attract more listeners, the new general manager at the University of Maine radio station has conducted a survey to determine the musical tastes of students.

Joe Khoury, WMEB general manager, said the survey, which he conducted in February, was an attempt to open lines of communication between students and the station.

"We want to increase our listenership," he said. "The campus is our target audience."

Although he would not comment on possible format changes for next fall, he did say, "We'll use it (the survey) as a guideline."

"I feel it would be better if we try to adapt to the needs of students."

Khoury said he interviewed 300 randomly-selected students for the survey. Of the students polled, 250 live on campus and 50 are commuters.

"The hardest part was having off-campus students represented," he said.

About 51 percent of those surveyed were male, and 49 percent female.

Of the 300 people interviewed, 37 percent were freshmen, 28 percent were sophomores, 21 percent juniors, 11 percent seniors, and about 3 percent were either fifth year seniors or graduate students.

In the survey, Khoury asked students what types of music they liked, which radio stations they listened to regularly, and whether they listened to WMEB.

Question 3 asked students, "What types of music best describe your preference?"

Khoury said students were allowed to vote for more than one category of music for this question, and it received 587 responses.

Of that number, 29 percent said they preferred Top 40 while 15 percent indicated Sixties/Seventies for their preference and 8.5 percent listed progressive music.

Question 4 asked students, "During the past month, which of the following radio stations have you listened to regularly?"

Khoury received 614 responses, as students again were allowed to make more than one choice.

Thirty percent said they had listened to WWFX (Fox-104.7), 17 percent had listened to WKSQ (Kiss-94), while WWMJ, WTOS, and WGUY received about 10 percent each.

The next question asked students to indicate their favorite station.

Of the 278 responses, 37 percent listed WWFX, about 16 percent preferred WTOS, about 14 percent WWMJ, about 13 percent WKSQ, and about 5 percent said WMEB was their favorite station.

The rest of the survey concerned WMEB alone.

When asked, "During the past month, how many times per day or per week did you listen to WMEB-FM," 25 people said they listened to it at least once per day, while 23 people said they listened to the station at least once per week, with the average being about 2.5 times.

The question asking when listeners tuned in to WMEB received 72 responses, as students often listened more than once per day.

Of the 72, about 28 percent tuned in between 8 p.m. and midnight, 25 percent said they listened between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m., and about 24 percent said they listened between noon and 4 p.m.

When WMEB listeners, numbering about 50 of the 300, were asked what they would like to hear more of, 26 percent said the format was "O.K. now" and 14 percent said they wanted "more oldies."

stay in the same building and talk after games.

Crowder said the lounge is available to other sports teams for use and is open on a first-come, first-served basis to other coaches.

The lounge is also available to other clubs and organizations on campus as long as they are connected with the university, Crowder said.

In addition, there will be a weight room and a better video room to watch game videos.

The videos, until now, have been shown in the same room where the equipment is stored. But with the space the addition will provide, the videos now will be shown in a separate room.

There will also be a hall of fame wall and a case set aside for hockey awards in the new addition, said Crowder.

Walsh said the old locker room will be divided into two rooms after the players move into the new facility.

Because of the growing number of high school teams and local groups using Alfond Arena, the additional space is definitely needed, he added.

MET project helps boy

by Dave Greeley
Staff Writer

Every year, the University of Maine's senior mechanical engineering technology students must complete a senior project in order to graduate.

This year, the project will also help an 11-year-old boy who suffered a traumatic injury.

Chris Hinse of East Millinocket ran through a glass door when he was seven years old. After extended hospitalization and physical therapy, Chris is able to walk and run again. He does have poor balance and his right hand is not yet functional, however.

This year the senior METs are building a four-wheel bicycle for Hinse for their senior project.

"When we got into class this year we had to start thinking about our senior projects," said David Godbout. "We wanted to make some kind of vehicle so that there would be a competition within the class. With this, Chris will use it for himself after we get done with it."

Hinse will pick the vehicle that he wants out of the four different models designed by the students.

The students will compete with their vehicles in a contest on May 2.

The vehicles will race around the mall, climb the library steps, participate in a tug-of-war, go through an obstacle course, and climb a hill near the bike trail.

Although Hinse will pick one, Godbout said that he hopes all of the vehicles will be used.

"We'll try to find people who can use those as well," he said.

Ron Nelson said that the idea of contest makes the project more fun for everyone.

"We try to focus the main idea around a contest so that we can have some competition," he said. "I think it's fun. Everybody's trying to hide their idea from everybody else."

MET professor Herb Crosby said that the students came up with all of the guidelines for the project.

"The students really do all of the work," he said. "It's their idea. They sat down and worked out all of the guidelines. The project uses all of the machine design principles that they have learned."

Crosby also said that, although the project is important for the students' grades, it is rarely difficult to grade.

"The grades are usually excellent," he said. "I don't usually have to worry too much about the quality of the work."

"We've ordered an alarm for the back door," he said. "And we have extra people checking IDs."

Vandalism at the basement level of the Memorial Union is also a concern. Rand said the men's room is particularly abused.

"We don't have a lot of destruction but we do have some," he said. "It is beer muscle."

Other changes at the den include changing the location of the cash registers to enhance the traffic flow and installing glass in the doors for increased visibility, Wong said.

"With people going in and out of the same doors, I am amazed that more people were not getting clunked on the head," he said.

New items have been added to the den's menu including a line of flavored seltzer water.

"We received 18 cases after break," Wong said. "In a day and a half they were all gone. We just can't keep them in stock."

Wong also said that in light of the recent Coke-Pepsi controversy on campus, Pepsi is now available in the den where the specialty coffees are sold.

"Now that we have it available to them (the Pepsi drinkers), they don't take advantage of it," he said. "We haven't had a flood of people breaking down the doors."

Wong said the changes were designed to make the den more efficient and more professional.

"Everything is moving a bit smoother and morale is the best it has been in a long time," he said.

Wong said he has many more changes in mind but has to take things slowly.

"Some of the things I'd like to do, like remodeling the kitchen, are cost prohibitive," he said. "Others have to wait until time or money is available."

Rand said he was pleased with the changes and with Wong's initiative.

"The changes are giving the den a bit more vitality and making it a more active place in our community," he said.

UMaine Patrons chosen

Seventeen new members were recently chosen to serve on the executive committee of the University of Maine Patrons of the Arts.

The new members include: Glory and Peter DeAngelis of Orrington; Annie and Richard King, Estelle and Roger Sabin, Rae and Basil Smith, all of Orono; and Norma and Howard Berg, Shirley Ginn, Ellie and Stanley Israel, Cynthia and Hervey Triplett, Sally and Bill Zoidis, all of Bangor.

These people join members from the community who comprise the executive committee of the Patrons of the Arts, a group dedicated to providing moral and financial support of art programs — music, art, poetry, theatre, and dance — in the community, local schools, and at UMaine.

Executive committee chairperson Leonard Minsky of Bangor said, "All of these people have exhibited interest in the group. They also have a great interest in the university."

The Patrons of the Arts was formed in the early 1960s. Since its inception, the 275-member group has supported several UMaine activities.

According to Minsky, the group contributes to the University Singer's spring tour, the poetry program, the dance company, the theater's touring program, and guest lectures by internationally recognized artists.

"We have a dual purpose," he said. "We try to have enrichment programs on campus as well as an outreach program that provides cultural enrichment to the community."

Minsky said the Patrons of the Arts greatly support university programs that go to schools as part of the outreach program.

As part of this, he said, they support UMaine's traveling art exhibit which is shown in schools across Maine.

Minsky said he looks forward to working with the new members.

"They're excellent people," he said. "We're looking forward to their participation."

UMaine in process of reviewing applications

by Matt Mullin
Staff Writer

The University of Maine Department of Admissions is expecting 2,050 incoming freshmen for the 87-88 school year, February reviewing cases," Munsey said.

"We moved the application deadline from March 1 to Feb. 1 because the March deadline was too close to the financial aid application deadline," he

"We do not have just one freshman class, but seven: one for each college," Munsey said.

Each college of UMaine has its own admission standards and numbers requirements.

Munsey said, "The numbers of applicants we receive gives us a couple of alternatives. We can either turn down more applicants, or we can invite the students who were turned down by the college they applied to, to attend University College.

"University College is an access route for those students who need the help of a two-year liberal studies program before entering a four-year specified college."

The "regular pool" of applicants must have a non-refundable deposit paid by May 1, to ratify their acceptance.

"It gives a much better sense of who the freshmen will be," Munsey said.

"It has been a very good year for the admissions office. Right now we are in the middle of a phone-a-thon, and are planning our spring open house," he added.

Joyce Henkler, assistant director for enrollment management said, "The open house program is a wonderful program. The spring open house will be held April 20 in the performing arts center (Maine Center for the Arts).

"We get good representation from five to six different states. Maine is the state with the largest interest, followed by Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey. People come from all over," Henkler said.

The admissions programs hold open houses in the spring, fall, and summer.

"In the summer we have a lot of drop-in visitors. And all together about 3,000 people attend our open houses," Henkler said.

"University College is an access route for those students who need the help of a two-year liberal studies program before entering a four-year specified college."

William Munsey, director of Admissions according to Dr. William Munsey, director of Admissions.

"Right now we are in the process of reviewing applications for regular admission. The deadline for applications was Feb. 1, and we spend January and said. "We are ready to begin notifying applicants of their acceptance in March."

Although the deadline is Feb. 1 the admissions office will continue to accept applications, depending on the openings in the colleges.

Mike D'Angelo, fraternity senator, said impeaching Boothby would turn the student senate into "a farce."

Matt Thomas, Cumberland Hall senator, said Boothby should be given a chance.

"He didn't represent the students on one issue, and we want to impeach him," he said. "I think that is going a little too far."

Later in the evening, UMaine President Dale Lick responded to questions about the $200 student life fee.

Lick said the university is not a democracy, but that students, administrators and faculty can work together.

"The university is not a democracy. It is not a totalitarian state, either," he said.

He said he went forth to the BOT because the ad hoc mandatory fee budgetary committee had not presented him with a solid proposal.

He said much of the work of the committee was marred by people who began attacking the fee while it was still in the planning stages.

"When you are creating something, you don't go out and start attacking it. But you don't go out and start promoting it either," he said.

"The National Transportation Safety Board has determined that it is speed variations that cause the problems," he said. "In actuality, it is the 55 mph speed limit that may be unsafe."

The problems occur when a driver is going 55 while someone else is driving at 75, he said, adding that because of the different reflex times it takes to stop the cars, fatalities increase.

He also said that by raising the speed limit, it would enable law enforcement officers to concentrate more on serious crimes like drunken driving.

Paradis said the safety factor would be sacrificed.

"If the speed limit were raised to 65 mph, everybody who was driving 65 to 70 mph will be driving 70 to 80 mph," he said. "Any car that goes over 65 increases the rate of fatality to astronomical proportions, whether they are driving a Subaru or a Lincoln Continental."

Paradis said this is because reflexes aren't fast enough to react to the increased speeds.

"It is senseless to raise the speed limit because the present one saves so many lives without any effort at all," he said.

But Bott said he has a proposal for those who would disobey the new speed limit.

"I want to propose enforcing heavier fines for the people who do break the law," he said.

But Paradis brought up another problem involving the proposed increased speed limit.

"Now we'll have to deal with the drunk driver who is out on the road going faster than he was before," he said. "He is seriously jeopardizing everyone he comes in contact with: more so than before because of the increased speed."

Paradis said that he sees no rational basis for raising the speed limit.

"I have too much respect for the innocent people who will be affected by it," he said.

According to a March 28 Associated Press article, President Reagan is in favor of the amendment to raise the speed limit. What he does not agree with is the highway bill addressing the $80 billion budget for highway and mass transit projects that the amendment is tacked on to.

In the article, Reagan said he would send his version of the bill to Congress in hopes a compromise can be reached.

QUIT

WHILE YOU'RE AHEAD.

If you continue to smoke, your chances of bringing every successful thing you've done to a grinding halt at age 45 are three to four times greater than if you quit today.

Look at it this way. It could be the hardest thing you'll ever do. So what are you waiting for?

Signs such as this on rural roads may be a thing of the past soon.

NEW COURSE ANNOUNCEMENT

The TECHNOLOGY AND SOCIETY PROJECT is pleased to offer a new course, TSO 398 - Special Topics in Technology and Society (Cr. 3). Prerequisite: Sophomore standing in any college on the Orono campus.

PATTERNS OF INVENTION

Description: This course, which explores the characteristics of invention and inventiveness, is about the patterns of invention to be found in modern technology from the lightbulb to the laser, from Morse telegraph code to binary machine code, and from the phonograph to the holograph. These patterns relate to fundamental physical processes invented and reinvented in different contexts. Such patterns provide keys to understanding diverse fields of modern technology so that the nonspecialist may understand inventions from klystrons to xerographic machines.

Perhaps of more importance, these patterns illuminate the process of invention itself. The strange becomes familiar and the fundamental patterns themselves become tools for invention, for devising new solutions, and constructing new frameworks of understanding.

Through numerous examples over the past century, six fundamental processes will be examined. These processes provide the keys for sorting out the complexity of technical devices and systems. Thus, apparently dissimilar technologies are connected and associated.

Assignments: Following study of each of the fundamental processes there will be a take-home exercise. Suitable readings, including ones in the social and behavioral sciences, will be assigned throughout the course.

Instructor: DANIEL H. KANE, JD. Mr. Kane, a practicing patent attorney, has been involved in obtaining patents for many different inventions and handles patent matters for the University of Maine. In addition to his legal training and experience, Mr. Kane has a degree in physics and philosophy.

ENGINEERING STUDENTS MAY USE TSO 398, "PATTERNS OF INVENTION" AS A HUMANITIES/SOCIAL SCIENCE ELECTIVE.

TSO 398 will be offered on Tuesday evenings, 7:00 - 9:30 p.m. during the fall 1987 semester.

Further information on this course may be obtained from Professor Mark Levinson, ext.2127, 208b Boardman Hall.

McKernan declares Maine a disaster

AUGUSTA Maine (AP) — As the state's major rivers continued to swell, Maine's Governor John McKernan issued the declaration needed to qualify the state for federal disaster funds and alerted National Guard troops that they may be mobilized.

No serious injuries were reported. It was "far too early" Wednesday afternoon to estimate damages, David Brown, director of the Bureau of Civil Emergency Preparedness, said during a news conference with McKernan after an emergency planning meeting.

Low-lying clouds forced McKernan to reschedule a planned helicopter tour of the worst-hit regions to Thursday morning, said spokesperson Willis Lyford. Instead, the governor planned to walk through downtown Augusta, which was inundated, Lyford said.

Overflowing streams and rivers isolated downtown Rumford and parts of Farmington, said police. The National Guard used large trucks to move more than 100 people from a nursing home in Canton, Lyford said.

Statewide, Brown said, at least 250 people had been forced from their homes, but reports from local authorities suggested the figure was much higher.

A concrete bridge was washed out in Farmington, a historic covered bridge was washed downstream from Guilford and remained pinned underneath another bridge. Two bridges in Strong also were wiped out, said Brown, and 80 highway systems were closed due to "washouts or threatened washouts."

Schools were closed early in many communities and detours around flooded areas caused numerous traffic jams, authorities said.

The state Department of Transportation urged residents to stay away from the flooded areas. DOT spokesperson John Stanley speculated that many people were eager to view the flooding but, "right now, they're just apt to get in the way."

In Kenduskeag, a man drove a tractor over a flooded road to deliver heart medicine, then carried an injured man to an ambulance. Holmes did not know what caused the injury.

A Guilford woman who was about to deliver a baby had to be rescued by boat. Fire Chief Dick Williams said Wanda Ames was stranded in the town, which was virtually cut off by rising water, and was taken by boat to an ambulance which transported her to Mayo Regional Hospital in Dover-Foxcroft. The hospital was on auxiliary power because electrical service was cut off intermittently.

Ames had not delivered the baby by Wednesday afternoon, hospital officials said.

Japanese visit U.S. to talk about semiconductors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, while standing fast to its plans for sanctions on Japanese electronics imports, has agreed to a Japanese request for "emergency consultations" in the intensifying dispute over computer chips, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

A team of Japanese trade specialists will arrive in Washington on Friday for negotiations with their counterparts in the departments of State, Commerce, and office of U.S. trade representative, the officials said.

The semiconductor talks, to get under way in earnest on Monday, will be followed later in the week with meetings in Washington among higher-level trade officials of both nations, government spokespeople said.

However, U.S. officials held out little hope that the dispute over semiconductor pricing practices could be resolved in time to avert the proposed duties on $300 million in Japanese products from taking effect on April 17.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, who has said there would be "no last-minute reprieve," will propose the sanctions be slapped on for a three-month "trial period," said Baldrige spokesperson B. Jay Cooper.

AIDS overexposed in news

The problem of AIDS is a good example of how the mass media have hyped up an issue to the extent that no one wants to hear about it anymore. It has been beaten to death by the press. In the media, an important story will be written, rewritten, and overwritten until no one wants to hear it anymore — much like Top 40 music.

Consider the attention given to the plight of dying Ethiopians a few months ago. Rock stars raised money for them, aid was sent for food and medicine, and stories were published daily about the country's famine.

Ethiopians are still dying, but how often do the press or networks give them coverage?

One of last year's hot stories was about missing children. Every day papers and magazines carried stories on how to protect your child from kidnapping. Products from milk to color film ran pictures of missing kids on their containers.

Do children no longer get abducted? Have all missing children been found? Or is it that the public got tired of hearing about that cause and so moved on to another?

The media doesn't seem too interested in covering the South Africa crisis anymore either. To my knowledge apartheid hasn't ceased but, thanks to typical media overkill, a lot of people have lost interest in hearing about that country's problems.

Admittedly, the AIDS story has hung around longer than, say, the Libyan terrorism story did. But I think many people are getting weary of reading and hearing about AIDS.

There really isn't much more to be said about the disease until a cure or vaccination is discovered for it.

New angles on the AIDS story are getting scarce. Look at yesterday's Associated Press requisite AIDS story. It dealt with the fact that wise investors are now hoarding stock in condom manufacturers since, short of abstaining from sex, condoms provide the only known protection from the disease and are therefore seeing a significant rise in popularity.

An example of capitalism at its best.

Another reason people may not like hearing about AIDS is because it reminds them that modern medicine, while removing much disease and illness from our lives, has by no means made us infallible.

Compared to the threat of tuberculosis a hundred years ago, AIDS is less of a danger to the general public and is much harder to catch.

Yet people are so used to being cured of all illnesses these days that when an incurable disease like AIDS appears, they feel personally threatened and vulnerable.

Fortunately, people seem to be tiring of the deluge of AIDS-related stories. Perhaps the media will turn their attention to another issue and only inform the public of truly important AIDS facts.

Water on the brain

All right those of you who feel that it is time for another break, stand up and be recognized.

I believe that there is a majority of people out there who desperately want to go home and sleep.

Is it a university plot to schedule all their tests during the week and a half after break, or am I just feeling persecuted? We have been back to school for under two weeks and already I have had more tests than I did all the rest of the semester combined.

I am ready for a break. Although all I did over the last one was clean sheep pens and go ice fishing.

While I'm complaining about things, how about that weather? I apologize to all of you who are from out of state and are not used to this stuff. I assure you it is all very natural. There is a cute little expression that you can see folksy people on milk ads say: "If you don't like the weather just wait five minutes and it will change".

Of course the person who wrote that probably lived in Tampa, and doesn't even drink milk.

The weather means a lot to us down here in the Dungeon. Last night, due to the rain, the production room flooded. Luckily for us the editor does not wear socks or shoes so she felt the water rising. Just wait, it will be a front page headline story on Monday.

Another problem we have with the weather is that we are usually down here so long we forget what the weather is doing.

This has been especially fun the days that it has rained. There is nothing like stepping out of a nice, warm building into a nice, cold drizzle without the rain coat that you left down stairs because you figured that it couldn't possibly be raining out still.

This weather isn't all bad though.

Now I can play one of favorite games, called Ped Hunter. Ped is short for pedestrian and the object of this game is to line a ped up by a large mud puddle and try to get them soaked. This game can be quite fun, unless you make the mistake of splashing someone who likes revenge, or is a pitcher for the UMaine baseball team. You can go through a lot of windshields that way.

Another game that I play with my brother when we go driving is the "Do the Adolf Hitler Salute at Passing Cars and Watch Them Bum Out". This game also explains the picture at the top of this column.

Matt Mullin suggests that all critical mail about this column be addressed to Becci Smith, because she made me write it

Richardson irks student

To the editor:

I would like to nominate Harrison Richardson Jr. (board of trustees, UMaine) for the Earl Butz Foot in The Mouth Award for his comment in the Bangor Daily News (March 27) about the mandatory student life fee. In the aforementioned BDN, Mr. Richardson states that students should easily be able to come up with the additional $100 per semester by foregoing one six-pack of beer a week, which is the most condescending, paternalistic, IGNORANT remark I have heard from an administrator in my four years at the University of Maine.

I am a thirty-one-year-old full-time student, my wife is a part-time student and neither of us drinks. Mr. Richardson seems to think that all students drink and party first and worry about academics last. What we do, Mr. Richardson, is struggle to attend school while raising a family, hoping that the stress and anxiety we are going through will pay off in the long run. So, what is $100? After all, it doesn't sound like much, but with an increase in tuition and who knows what else, it is called being nickeled and dimed to death.

So, what's that you say Mr. Richardson, if you don't like it here go somewhere else? Well, Mr. Richardson, it is not the money that bothers me, we will get through. What bothers me is your attitude, and by association, the attitude of the board of trustees. Supposedly, in order to address student needs and represent student opinion, we have student government (go get 'em Chris), student polls, and ad-hoc committees, but in reality these are simply ploys of the university administration to create the illusion of a democratic process while doing whatever they (the administration) want to do anyway. This is my perception of how things work at the university after hearing your remarks Mr. Richardson, and perception is 90 percent of public service, in case you didn't know by now.

I'd like to express my feelings more clearly Mr. Richardson, but that will have to be face to face. An apology is not necessary, your resignation will suffice.

Anti-apartheid rally

To the editor:

On Monday, April 6, members of the university community will have the great privilege and honor of hearing first-hand about the struggle against apartheid in South Africa.

Victor Mashabela, a member of the African National Congress (ANC) mission to the United Nations, will speak at a rally on the steps of Memorial Union at noon, and in 101 Neville Hall at 7 p.m.

The ANC is the foremost anti-apartheid group in South Africa. Its president, Nelson Mandela, has been imprisoned by the racist South Africa regime for over twenty years and is the focus of a tremendous international campaign for his release. Apartheid, South Africa's system of racial separation and subjugation, is an abomination of humanity. It amounts to a system of modern slavery.

The University of Maine Foundation has maintained its complicity with the South Africa regime by refusing to divest its funds from corporations that do business in South Africa. And the United States government meanwhile continues its complicity in apartheid by assisting brutal, South Africa-backed, anti-government forces in neighboring Namibia (Southwest Africa), Angola and Mozambique; by refusing to invoke serious sanctions against South Africa; and by turning a blind eye to military and nuclear cooperation between South Africa and our client state, Israel.

This visit by Mr. Mashabela represents a rare opportunity for members of the university community to hear a first-hand account of one of the most dynamic struggles against oppression currently being waged. It is also an opportunity to demonstrate against University of Maine Foundation and U.S. support for apartheid.

All are welcome and strongly urged to attend.

When writing

For those not overcome by apathy and wishing to write a letter to the editor or a commentary, Maine Campus welcomes them. Letters should be 300 words or less; commentaries, about 450. Name, address, and phone number must be included. Anonymous letters are accepted, but names will be withheld from publication only under special circumstances. The Maine Campus reserves the right to edit letters and commentaries for length, taste, and libel.

Remarks

To the editor:

Just a few remarks. Mr. Richardson's apology is not worth the paper it was written on, he should resign. Chris Boothby may not have been legally obligated to vote as the student poll directed, but head as student government he had an ethical obligation to represent the students' wishes, he should resign. And as for President Dale Lick and his new idea on student-staff-faculty committees on how to spend our money, bring back Arthur Johnson.

Response

Bigotry should not be a part of college life

To the editor:

Monday afternoon in the Union as a student friend of mine and I left the Yankee and walked down the corridor toward the display area, we passed the Memorial Room. Two male students sitting in that room loudly called out several rude remarks directed at my friend, who is gay. According to my friend, they had done the same thing a short time earlier when he passed them on his way to the Yankee. They had possibly recognized my friend as one of the individuals invited over the past several years to talk to the class in Human Sexuality or perhaps as a speaker in the Peer Education Program. That is not important. What is important is the fact that those two should be dim-witted enough even to make the kind of hate-filled remark one would expect from crimp-minded cretins and blatant bigots and not from university students.

If you sense my anger and outrage at their remarks, you have received my message loudly and clearly. Such remarks are totally and unambiguously unacceptable on a college or university campus and we should immediately focus our attention on such mental rot whenever it occurs. It shows that these two students have completely failed to recognize that the diversity that one can find on a university campus is a strength that offers all students a chance to expand their understanding of those different from themselves in many possible ways, whether the difference is represented by race, background, creed, age, sex, or even sexual orientation. An attempt to understand such differences and to tolerate viewpoints other than one's own is one good sign of an educated person. (Need I point out one good sign of an un-educated person?)

Unfortunately a recent report indicates that a wave of bigotry is affecting college campuses nationwide, encouraged, some contend, by the present administration's tacit lack of commitment to protect the civil rights of minorities. There has already been one ugly incident in Maine; I hope the University of Maine is not the site of another one.

The decent thing, of course, would be for those two young men to apologize to my friend, but in my experience those who exhibit such infantile stupidity are neither men enough nor gentlemen enough to come forward to offer an apology. In their cowardice they normally elect to remain anonymous. I don't know who they are nor do I want to know since I typically avoid narrow-minded fools and crude social mifits who display such a moronic lack of common decency. They know who they are and I hope they realize that, in my opinion, they have a genuine problem that may need professional help.

Aroostook DGB strongly supports Boothby

To the editor:

We are very distraught over recent actions taken by Senators O'Day and Higgins to impeach Student Government President Chris Boothby. We fail to see why they deem it necessary to attack Chris on the basis of one vote, the vote concerning the Mandatory Life Fee. If you sit down and analyze the whole situation, you will quickly realize that only 1600 students voted on a recent poll conducted concerning the fee. That in itself does not constitute a majority of what the students feel. After all, there are roughly 10,000 students here at the university.

We contend that the actions taken by Senators O'Day and Higgins are merely a personal vendetta against Chris, who has beaten them both in past elections. By getting Chris out of office, they feel that they can also get Vice President Carl Robbins out of his office as well, and further get their own people in. It has already been shown that Chris and Carl have the support of the Senate, by it's actions not to go through with impeachment proceedings against Carl earlier in the semester. The whole situation is ludicrous and is without merit.

We hope that the student body will open their eyes and see how ludicrous this all is. After all, it is we, the student body, who elected Chris and Carl. We wouldn't have done so if they weren't the right ones for the job. Maybe, just maybe, Senators O'Day and Higgins should be the ones to lose their seats in the Senate. It is blatantly obvious that they don't represent the views of all the students on or off campus.

Furthermore, we feel that it is imperative that the Campus get Chris' side of the story. It appears to us that the editor has been negligent in her duties in that respect. Which only leads me to believe that she believes everything she hears from O'Day and Higgins.

Come on fellow students, let's rally behind Chris and Carl to ensure a stable Student Government and university community. It is obvious that they (Chris and Carl) are trying to better the university as are President Lick and the B.O.T. To allow O'Day and Higgins to have their own way only serves to set the university further behind other universities throughout the country, a fate that we can't allow to happen.

It is time for O'Day and Higgins to put aside their differences with Chris and Carl and work together with them to make the University of Maine a more competitive and fun place to live and develop each individual's future.

Michaud's review of Platoon was not accurate, says veteran

To the editor:

Lt. Colonel Michaud expresses the opinion that "Platoon" was not an accurate depiction of the war in Vietnam. If he means that it is not a complete picture then I would agree with him, but to say that it is not accurate seems to imply that the events portrayed and the reactions of the soldiers did not happen. I spent a year from 1969 to 1970 in Vietnam as an Infantry Platoon Leader, Battalion Intelligence Officer, and Battalion Adjutant and there was not a single event in the film which I did not either experience or have a close personal knowledge of. The foot soldier in Vietnam did many things of compassion for the Vietnamese. He also did many things which were cruel and brutal. In Vietnam, the good happened along side the terrible. It was a place where everything happened. No single movie can be expected to encompass the whole of the events which took place. Let's not discount "Platoon" for showing that portion of the truth which was a part of the American soldier's experience.

I am also disturbed by the Colonel's view that the soldiers "died with more honor" than indicated in the movie. There was no single script for the appropriate way to die. Men died in as many different ways as they lived; some quietly slipped into death and others screamed in fear until the end. Most just simply went into shock and then died. I don't know what an "honorable death" is. It seems to me that it is an idealized attitude that helps us distance ourselves from the reality of another young man's experience of premature and painful death.

There was a great deal of the Vietnam experience which was not in the movie. It didn't show the teenage prostitute who died from the reaction to a penicillin shot given her by a medic. It didn't show the deaths of soldiers killed because one in their midst was playing with a hand grenade as though it were a beanbag. It didn't show the terror and frustration which filled a soldier's mind after over half of his platoon has been evacuated do to boobytraps with no enemy in sight. It didn't show the senseless deaths of ten men who died because their helicopter's transmission was not properly maintained.

I will not judge the accuracy of "Platoon" for Director Stone's experiences. My personal experience differed from the movie in many ways. We can debate the balance of the film, but let's be honest and admit that the events did happen. Michaud says, "Things like that happen in every war, but this story shows only one piece of the puzzle." It is because things like this happen in every war that our society should view war as the ultimate human tragedy, and recognize the terrible price paid by the young men we send to war in the name of defense.

Book return requested

To the editor:

Monday afternoon, I left one German textbook and two red notebooks in the bookshelves next to the indoor entrance to the University Bookstore. Fifteen minutes later, when I went to pick up my books, they were gone.

I don't believe anyone in his right mind would deliberately steal those books, since they are no use to anyone but myself. Therefore, I will assume that they were accidentally taken.

Will the person who took them please return them as soon as possible? I strongly need them for my classes. I think I never bothered to put my name on them, which is why I don't have them now.

Also, I strongly suggest that those who don't have their names and local addresses on their books do so, in case someone accidentally takes your books too.

Prince Edward poses as rock star Prince

LONDON (AP) — Prince Edward, youngest of Queen Elizabeth II's four children showed up in disguise at a radio studio Wednesday to help a disc jockey play an April Fool's joke on the air.

DJ Mike Smith had invited listeners to his "Breakfast Show" on the British Broadcasting Corp's Radio 1 network to tune in for an interview with the American rock star Prince.

But instead of the singer, it was 23-year-old Edward who arrived disguised in flowing cape and large hat.

BBC switchboards were jammed as listeners rang to find out what was happening, and photographers expecting the rock star were caught off guard.

Prince Charles spits out Kenya tea

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Prince Charles, on the second day of a three-day working visit to Kenya, had a bitter experience Wednesday when he was called upon to sample the product of a tea factory. The prince was asked to sample the broken orange pekoe tea that Kenya's lush tea-growing region prides itself on.

He dipped a spoon into the brew, sipped the tea, and then grimaced in disgust before spitting it into a spittoon.

"It would have been better with milk and sugar," said the prince, who appeared embarrassed by his reaction to the first tasting. He went on, however, to sample three other grades of the broken orange pekoe without reaction or comment.

Idaho's potato plates ruled constitutional

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho's "Famous Potatoes" license plate slogan is constitutional, but a state law against covering up the slogan is not, a judge ruled Wednesday.

The slogan was challenged by Boise silver miner Andrew Freese, who argued that Idaho motorists' constitutional rights were violated by being forced to display an advertisement for a product without compensation.

Freese's suit, filed in January, also contended that the slogan discriminates against other Idaho products, such as timber, cattle or silver.

District Judge George Carey agreed with the state attorney general's office, which argued that it was within the authority of the Legislature to determine what slogan should be included on license plates.

Still, he said it was all right for motorists to cover up the slogan. State police had said motorists would be cited for covering the slogan.

"The statute that prohibits covering the slogan is unconstitutional," Carey said, citing a 1979 U.S. Supreme Court decision on a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of New Hampshire's "Live Free or Die" license plate slogan.

Attorney General Jim Jones said he was surprised by that ruling, but declined further comment until after he studied the decision.

Man kills aunt with knife and blender

DETROIT, (AP) — A 29-year-old man says he used a knife and a kitchen blender to stab and beat to death his aunt, who helped found a group to combat teen-age violence, according to testimony.

Michael Wimbush was ordered Tuesday to stand trial on a charge of first-degree felony murder in the March 9 killing of Lula Mae Wimbush, 50.

She became an active member of Save Our Sons and Daughters after her 15-year-old niece was killed by gunfire last year.

According to court testimony Tuesday, Michael Wimbush told police on March 14 that he beat and stabbed his aunt repeatedly and then took her purse and went to a movie.

Homicide Sgt. Lee Claudill testified that Wimbush described the slaying to him after a day of questioning, but said the defendant later refused to sign a statement.

Delta employees fired for drug use

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta Air Lines has fired at least a dozen ground crew workers for using drugs while on duty, Atlanta Constitution reported Wednesday.

Delta officials refused to confirm or deny the report, citing confidentiality of personnel files.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified mechanic as saying he and about 20 other employees were fired after they were accused of using cocaine and marijuana while performing maintenance on airplanes.

An unidentified Delta source placed the number of fired workers at about a dozen, the newspaper said. All the employees worked at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesperson Roger Myers said the FAA did not know of the firings but is interested because some of the mechanics apparently held certificates with the agency.

Jackson tries to heal Yates of his politics

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson used a religious technique to jokingly influence the politics of an Arkansas legislator.

Jackson, a possible candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year, was introduced Tuesday to Sen. Joe Yates of Bentonville and was told Yates was a Republican.

Jackson put his hand on Yates' forehead and said "Heal," and the Senate erupted in laughter.

Aquino sells house in Massachusetts

BROOKFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Philippine President Corazon Aquino reportedly is selling her summer home and its 16.5 acres to a developer who plans to build 100 luxury condominiums on the lakefront property.

The Boston Globe reported Wednesday that the purchase price was about $600,000 for the Lake Quaboag property, including a house with about 10 rooms, a separate garage, swimming pool, and a tennis and basketball court.

Aquino and her late husband, Benigno Aquino Jr., bought the property in 1983, shortly before he was assassinated when he went back to Manila to challenge then-president Ferdinand Marcos after three years of self-imposed exile.

Aquino began divesting herself of the family's U.S. property shortly after she was elected president. Their home in Newton was sold earlier to the Benigno Aquino Memorial Foundation, a non-profit organization.

Baseball team travels to Wheaties Tourney

by Mike Bourque
Sports Writer

The University of Maine baseball team will be in the air Thursday morning en route to Minneapolis, Minn., to participate in the Wheaties Tournament this weekend.

The Black Bears will be in the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome to face such national powers as the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Michigan along with the University of Minnesota and the Cuban National team.

Coach John Winkin will send Steve Loubier (2-2) and George Goldman (2-1) against Michigan and UCLA on Friday.

Saturday Maine will send Kevin Farnworth (1-1) and Jim Dillon (1-2) to face Cuba. The Black Bears will finish the trip on Sunday with junior righthander Jeff Plympton (1-4) taking the hill against Minnesota.

"Our biggest goal is to get ready for our conference schedule," said Winkin.

"We've been forced indoors (because of the weather) and we must use this tournament to regain the mental and physical edge that we got in our southern trip," he added.

Winkin said he was pleased with the way things are going but especially likes his pitching depth, which will be important with his Bears playing eight games in the next 10 days.

"I like the fact that we can use all of our pitchers. That will allow us to see just how much depth we have," Winkin said. "We have solid relief pitching with Mike Leblanc and Jay Kemble in long relief and Marc Powers and Dale Plummer in short situations."

Maine will be at Central Connecticut State University next week before opening up at home against the University of Hartford on April 11 and 12.

3-point shot rule to remain: NCAA

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 3-point shot will stay at its present distance of 19 feet, 9 inches for at least another season of college basketball, and intentional fouls will be more expensive, the secretary of the NCAA Rules Committee announced on Wednesday.

"The 3-point rule did exactly what it was intended to do," said Ed Steitz, the committee secretary. It increased scoring, opened up the game and reduced rough play under the boards, he said. Despite howls of outrage prior to the rule's implementation for this past season, a late-season poll showed overwhelming support for retaining the 3-point shot in some form, Steitz said. Overall, he said, 1,448 coaches returned their questionnaires, and 80 percent favored keeping the 3-point shot. Of those in favor, 35 percent wanted it kept at its present distance, and 36 percent favored moving it back nine inches to the Olympic distance, he said.

Three changes were voted in for next season, Steitz said. The most-obvious change involves intentional fouls.

"All intentional fouls will carry a two-shot penalty plus possession of the ball," he said. Currently, an intentional foul carries a two-shot penalty, but the offending team gains possession of the ball.

The new rule would not have changed the outcome of Monday night's Indiana-Syracuse championship game, he said. Derrick Coleman of Syracuse was fouled by Indiana's Keith Smart with 28 seconds left in the game. Coleman missed the front end of a one-and-one, and Smart wound up scoring the winning basket in a 74-73 Indiana victory.

Soccer team to host round-robin tourney

by Christopher Hames
Staff Writer

The University of Maine soccer team will conclude this spring's indoor program Saturday when it hosts a six-team round-robin tournament in the Memorial Field House.

The UMaine White and Blue squads, the Maine Alumni team, Bridgton Academy, Maine Maritime Academy, and Thomas College will all be participating in the ninth annual event.

According to head coach Jim Dyer, this tournament is the last of the three major competitions that the team had scheduled this spring.

"After this weekend, we hope to get outside to hold practices for the fall season," he said.

According to Dyer, the indoor program exists primarily to get his players ready for the regular season.

"It's something we do to give the players experience during the off-season," he said.

"Our spring season philosophy is aimed more at developing players, while in the fall, of course, we compete as well as we can."

However, Dyer said the fact that the spring tournaments are essentially training grounds does not decrease the intensity with which his squad plays.

"The players we have in this program are serious about soccer," he said.

Many of them, Dyer said, are here because UMaine is fortunate enough to have a year-round soccer program.

"They want to continue to be a part of this program and so they are constantly striving to develop themselves as players," Dyer said.

The head coach said his players meet for morning practices and participate in weekend tournaments frequently as part of the spring program.

Saturday's tournament will be a day-long affair beginning at 9 a.m., with the two teams remaining after playoff rounds, meeting in a final scheduled for 7:15 p.m.

Dyer said indoor soccer, with its small playing field, is an exciting sport for spectators.

"I think the game is exciting because so much of the action is potential goal-scoring action," he said.

"You're either attacking or defending at all times," Dyer said, referring to the fact that the transition from offense to defense is quicker than in the outdoor game due to the limited playing area.

Dyer said that the numerous opportunities for scoring goals is what makes the indoor game appealing to fans.
