ASAP seeks new location, improved student access

Editor's Note: This is the second in a two-part series on desktop publishing at the university.

Many student groups and faculty members consider the Association of Student and Administrative Publications a valuable resource. But because of a Memorial Union Council decision, the service is not as accessible as it should be, ASAP members say.

ASAP is a student organization that enables various groups at the University of Maine to present published material to the general public free of cost.

Michael Scott, ASAP coordinator, said his organization is too valuable a resource to be thrown to the side.

Scott said ASAP's present location, in the basement of Chadbourne Hall, offers poor accessibility to students. By putting the organization in this location, he said, the administration has shown a less than desirable attitude toward student organizations.

"It's just a reflection of (the administration's) commitment," Scott said. "It's contrary to what it should be."

During its first year, ASAP was centrally located on the second floor of the Memorial Union, but the large inventory of equipment had caused the space to "become cramped," Scott said.

Although he approved of the union location, Scott said ASAP would have needed more space to perform effectively.

Quake rescuers die in crash

LENINAKAN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Rescuers in this earthquake-devastated city battled a lack of equipment and poor organization Sunday to free a dwindling number of survivors trapped in mountains of concrete and twisted metal. Adding to the tragedy of this stricken city, a Soviet military transport plane carrying soldiers to help in rescue efforts crashed as it approached the airport, killing 78 people, according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev wound up a two-day visit to the disaster area, calling the situation in Armenia "a grave disaster, simply a tragedy."

"I have seen so many people in trouble who have lost near and dear ones, whole families," Gorbachev told Soviet television. "I have simply been shaken by everything I have seen in these two days. It is simply difficult to bear this in human terms, it is unbearable."

He exhorted rescuers to speed their cleanup efforts, warning that an epidemic could break out within days.

Gorbachev and his wife Raisa were shown consoling survivors and speaking with rescuers in Spitak, a city of 16,000 that was virtually destroyed by the quake, and in Kirovakan 10 miles east.

The estimated death toll increased. Doctors Without Borders, an international relief organization, said in Amsterdam that Health Minister Yevgeny I. Chazov told workers the quake had claimed 50,000-60,000 lives. The previous estimate was 40,000-50,000.

Officials taking action to clean up image of fraternities, sororities

by Cynthia Beckwith
Staff Writer

The University of Maine is cracking down on fraternities and sororities.

William Lucy, dean of Student Activities and Organizations, said a gap has developed between standards greek organizations have claimed for themselves and the reality of their day-to-day behavior.

"When it's working the way it was meant to work, (the greek system) is invaluable," Lucy said. He added, though, that some fraternities have strayed from the stated goals of greek life, standards the university must help to uphold.

Last Friday, campus police raided Beta Theta Pi and found steroids, stolen signs and evidence of gambling.

Two Beta members have been summoned to court, and an investigation is still under way, according to police reports.

Members of Beta have been advised by their attorney not to comment on the situation, said Roger Brown, a Beta member.

Lucy also could not comment on the Beta incident because it is still under investigation.

Pete Merfeld, president of Tau Epsilon Phi, said he thinks the Beta raid went too far.

"I think a lot of their reasons for doing things are kind of thin," Merfeld said.

Ron Bergeron, president of Sigma Phi Epsilon, said university administrators should not expect changes from fraternities and sororities overnight.

"They (university administrators) want all the changes right away," he said.

Bergeron said the university is trying to clean up the image of fraternities and sororities, an effort he agrees with in some cases.

"Fraternities are under the microscope because of the 'Animal House' image," he said. "It seems unfair."

"Animal House" was a movie made several years ago that depicted fraternity members as drunks who were concerned only with partying and socializing.

Graduation planners expecting large crowd

by Jonathan Bach
Staff Writer

The list of graduates at the University of Maine is long this semester, and seniors are being asked to return any commencement ceremony tickets not allocated to family and friends.

About 550 students have applied to graduate, said Del Anne Rowe, assistant to the registrar.

More than 260 students are expected to participate in the ceremony which will take place Dec. 17 at 10:30 a.m. at the Maine Center for the Arts.

Each senior was given five tickets to give to family and friends, but because of the size of the graduating class, Rowe hopes that seniors will only give tickets to members of their immediate families.

"We've asked graduates to return the tickets they don't use," she said. "We're putting people on the honor system."

Rowe attributes the large number to the date of the ceremony.

"Last year it was after finals week," she said. "Because it's before finals week this year, more people will be here."

Faculty will be seated on stage to save the 1,620 spaces available in the arts center, Rowe said.

"We're trying to get every seat possible," she said. "We hated to limit it. It's too bad, but we just had to do it."

The commencement address will be given by Eve Bither.

Greek protesters want U.S. bases out

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — More than 5,000 leftist demonstrators marched through Athens on Sunday calling for the removal of U.S. military bases in Greece.

"Out with the bases of death," the demonstrators chanted as they marched through the city and gathered at the foot of parliament to demonstrate.

The demonstration, organized by the Panhellenic Movement for the Removal of the Bases, came at the end of a two-day conference on foreign military bases in the Mediterranean region.

A declaration issued after the conference called on Premier Andreas Papandreu's socialist government to get rid of the four U.S. bases when their current operating agreement expires in mid-December.

Greece and the United States are negotiating a new bases agreement to replace the existing five-year accord, but officials from both countries say there has been little progress after a year of talks.

Four U.S. bases have operated in Greece since the early 1950s — two near Athens and two on the southern Aegean island of Crete.

Study: black students punished more

NEW YORK (AP) — Black students are twice as likely as whites to be suspended from school, physically punished by school authorities or labeled mentally retarded, a new study concludes.

At the same time, only 8 percent of black youngsters get placed in gifted and talented school programs even though they make up 16 percent of the nation's enrollment, according to a report issued Sunday by the Boston-based National Coalition of Advocates for Students.

The study gives evidence of "the failure of schools to be peopled by adults who are skilled in handling students who are different in any sort of way," said Joan McCarty First, executive director of the coalition consisting of 21 student advocacy groups across the country.

"Teachers often overreact to black males. Interestingly, that's true even with black teachers," she said in an interview.

Overall, male students account for 80 percent of corporal punishment incidents and 70 percent of suspensions, the study found.

The report's findings were based on an analysis of biennial data published by the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights in 1986, the latest year available. The coalition study projected the rates at which students of different races suffered various school penalties.

While the statistics documented that school discipline seems to fall hardest on black students, the analysis shed little light on the reason. Many of the largest disparities found were in the South.

First said the results don't mean that blacks and other minority students are breaking school rules more often than whites.

Instead, "teachers tend to react out of their frustration and irritation," she said.

Eight killed in fireworks explosion

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A building where fireworks were sold and stored exploded and ignited two other buildings in a congested market area Sunday, witnesses said. A rescue worker said at least eight people were killed.

At least 54 others were injured, and 11 of them were hospitalized, said Jose Tinajero, the official on duty at the Red Cross.

Six adults and two children died in the explosion, said Hugo Ramirez, a rescue worker with one of the government health systems.

The shops "were all full of people buying," Luis Contreras, another rescue worker said.

Dense white smoke billowed from the site for at least two hours and for the first hour could be seen more than two miles away.

The fire spread to a building of candy stores next door, which was evacuated, and to another across the street, rescue workers said.

After the explosions began, an estimated 500 people streamed from the building screaming, "Get out, get out," said Fernando Dominguez, who was working in a shoe store less than 100 feet away.

American Rhodes Scholars named

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A doctoral candidate who entered college at age 12, a part-time waitress, and a taekwondo expert were among the 32 men and women named Sunday as American Rhodes Scholars.

Among this year's nominees, "There was a tremendous interest in working for the homeless and the hungry," said David Alexander, American secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust and president of investment in South Africa.

Many of the winners were politically active, Alexander said, and many expressed interest in AIDS education.

Alexander said three of the winners worked to support themselves, previously has not been a common activity.

The group includes students with aspirations in politics, medicine and writing.

The recipients of the 1988 Rhodes Scholarships for two years of study at Oxford University in England were chosen during meetings held nationwide Wednesday and Saturday.

The scholars came from 26 states, New York had four winners, Ohio three and Oklahoma two.

Officer in serious condition after fall from bridge

GORHAM, Maine (AP) — A police officer who fell about 35 feet from a bridge amid a bizarre chain of events remained in serious condition in a Portland hospital Sunday, officials said.

Officer Robert Henckel suffered multiple injuries after his cruiser hit a pickup truck carrying blasting caps, touching off a series of explosions, authorities said.

Henckel, who thought he was under gunfire, apparently dived behind a guard rail on the bridge to take cover and fell to the bank of a river below, Police chief David Kurz said. The incident occurred early Saturday on Route 202, as Henckel was responding to a reported accident.

Kurz said two police units had been dispatched mistakenly toward another bridge, about a mile farther down the road, when Henckel's cruiser, traveling at an estimated 65 mph, rammed an unlighted pickup truck lying on its side.

"We figure he had about 100 feet to detect that he had a vehicle that was on its side in the middle of the road," Kurz said.

Unable to stop, Henckel struck the pickup, which blew up.

The cruiser ruptured the gas tank, causing the explosion, Kurz said.

Blasting caps in the truck began to ignite in the flaming wreckage as the pickup's driver, Mark Faulkner, attempted to pull Henckel from the cruiser.

The officer, believing the explosions to be gunshots, then sought cover and fell from the Little River Bridge, striking the bank and ending up in the water, Kurz said.

"He thought he was under fire from somewhere," the chief said.

Lucy said people now are less tolerant of that type of behavior.

"Over the past two or three years we've had some societal changes," Lucy said. "People no longer think certain kinds of things are funny."

In the past two years, Lambda Chi Alpha and Phi Eta Kappa fraternities have been suspended by their alumni corporations.

Russ Wooley, president of the Lambda Chi Alpha alumni group housing corporation, said he closed the Lambda Chi house in the spring of 1987 because the quality of membership had deteriorated.

"Things were going on that shouldn't have been going on," he said.

Police raided the Lambda Chi house in December 1986 and found marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

Earlier this fall, the university revoked its recognition of Alpha Chi Omega sorority following a hazing incident.

Amity Bjork, a sophomore who was pledging Alpha Chi Omega at the time of the incident, said she feels the university is going about change the wrong way.

"They (the university) wouldn't mind if the greek system disappeared," Bjork said.

She said the problems of drinking and partying among greeks have been around for a long time and that the university is taking a strong stand just to get publicity.

Merfeld and Bergeron said they did not feel the university was trying to get rid of the greek system. They do feel the university is being less tolerant of illegal behavior.

Lucy said the university wants to improve the greek system, not get rid of it.

Bringing back the in-house advisor would be one improvement, he said. Live-in advisers were common among most fraternities 25 years ago, but the tradition has been broken within the last few years.

Today, 10 of the 15 fraternities at UMaine have live-in advisers, Lucy said. Wooley also agreed that live-in advisers will help to bring fraternities back to the standards on which they were established.

After struggling losses to Wisconsin College, the UMaine team was supposed to get its breath by Springfield College in the Auditorium.

But the best laid plan of Keeling and his men from Springfield was a 79-74 victory.

"The longer you stay up on you, believing they can't beat us," Keeling said. "All of a sudden I level...they us."

"This is our best here," Chief's Coach said. "All of a sudden I level...they us."

But Wissel had a happy about the guards. The two coach's son and I combined for 51 of Springfield's points.

And that was more so was the Chief's offense minutes. Along with the guards worked of the key that was seconds that UMaine comeback. Some shot clock wore down, Wissel (24 points) would hit it or get fouled. The two also had 18 from the

UMaine loses twice in Virginia

by Dan Bustard
Staff Writer

It was an up and down weekend for the University of Maine women's basketball team in the Virginia Commonwealth Commonwealth Tournament.

Mostly down. UMaine dropped two games, losing Friday night to the host school 70-64 despite a record-breaking performance from sophomore center Rachel Bouchard and Saturday to Connecticut 80-56.

Bouchard scored 46 points against Virginia Commonwealth, connecting on 19 of 25 shots and 8 of 13 free throws, but the rest of the team could not match her effort.

UMaine, taking out Bouchard's stats, hit a woeful 19 percent (7-37) from the field. VCU used a more balanced attack to subdue the Black Bears, led by Rhonda Jackson's 17 points, with 14 from Kelly Hoover and 12 from Lisa Stielpen.

Things looked better against

UConn Saturday, as UMaine trailed by four at the half, 36-32, before going scoreless for the first 8:25 of the second half.

By the time Tracey Frenette scored to end the drought, the Huskies were well in control and the game out of reach.

Both games raise several questions about the team's major weakness, offense, and in particular, outside shooting.

When they have a balanced attack, UMaine can usually compete with anyone on its schedule, such as Syracuse.

But when Bouchard is relied on too heavily, the outcome is different. Just ask San Diego, Virginia Commonwealth and Connecticut.

The biggest inconsistency has been the perimeter game, as UMaine guards Victoria Watras, Cathy Iaconeta and Beth Goodhue were one for 14 from the field against VCU.

Bouchard's performance broke the individual scoring record for a game held by Emily Ellis, who scored 42 points against Vermont in the 1984-85 season.

UConn was prepared for Bouchard, using a man-to-man defense which constantly sagged three players around the UMaine center, holding her down to only 13 points.

UMaine shot only 28 percent against the Huskies, while Kerry Bascom hit five three-pointers on her way to a game-high 26 points.

Head Coach Trish Roberts brings her team back to Maine with a 2-4 record going into two tournaments before the new year against slightly easier opposition.

Harvard, Howard and Georgia Tech come to Augusta next weekend before UMaine hosts Massachusetts, Providence and Georgia State in Portland Dec. 28-29.

Roberts went to the bench more in this tournament as both freshman Julie Bradstreet and sophomore Dee Ellis saw action for the first time this season against VCU and UConn.

Hockey team splits on weekend

The University of Maine's Guy Perron finished off his hat trick with a empty net goal to lead the Black Bears to a 6-3 victory over Vermont on Saturday in Boston Garden.

The goal came with just 1:12 left on the clock assuring UMaine of its 13th victory of the season. This win paired with Friday's loss to Northeastern leaves UMaine at 13-3. Vermont falls to 8-3.

For Perron, it was his 12th goal of the year and his fourth in the last two games.

Vermont had climbed to within two goals twice in the third period. First it was Dan Lambert who made it 4-2 at the 57-second mark of the period.

But UMaine's Steve Tepper scored at the 2:31 mark to regain the three goal cushion for the Black Bears.

Once again, though, Vermont got within two on a goal by Ian Boyce with 13:53 left in the game. Vermont never got closer and Perron accounted for the 6-3 final on the empty netter.

UMaine had gone out to a 2-0 first period lead on goals by Brian Bellefeuille (his first of the year) and David Capuano.

In the second period Vermont's John LeClair got his team on the board with 7:29 gone only to have Perron score twice in the next 7:02 giving UMaine a solid 4-1 lead.

On Friday at Northeastern's Matthews Arena the Huskies scored the games last three goals to grab a 4-3 comeback victory over UMaine.

NU's Brian Sullivan scored the final period's only goal at the 9:02 mark when he got the puck past

UMaine swimmers down St. John's

by Kim Thibeaudeau
Staff Writer

The University of Maine men's swim team gave a strong all-around showing on Saturday by downing St. John's University, 149-87.

The only event Maine lacked punch was the 200 yard breaststroke, the last event of the meet, where the Redmen took first, second and third place. Paul Sollee, Jay Ogren and Jim Kreuscher placed respectively for St. John's.

Maine swept the meet's second event, the 1000 yard freestyle, with authority and set the pace for the rest of the meet. Freshman Todd Dyer won the event for the Black Bears (10:18.63), with teammates Brad Burnham and Peter Small finishing second and third.

Small's time of 10:31.73 beat the time of St. John's closest competitor, Shawn Drum, by nineteen seconds.

Boston: a city in decline

Dan Bustard

20 years.

Yup, we've been having it our way for too long. The Patriots make the Super Bowl, the Red Sox hit the World Series, the Bruins qualify for the Stanley Cup, we have been pretty lucky.

But that is all changing now. The men in green are now nothing special, while the Remington Patriots may be moved to Hartford or Providence and the landmark of Boston sports, the Garden, might finally be left behind (if the people in charge of building the new place ever stop fighting).

For the University of Maine hockey team, Saturday night's win over Vermont in the Garden was one of the few wins they have gotten in that city.

The primary villain has been Northeastern, who did it again with a pair of fluke goals Friday.

Somehow, it would not surprise me if Shawn Walsh didn't want to go to that place again, or maybe even have it blown up.

Blow up Boston? Yes, what a great idea. That way, you could beat the rush to watch the teams decline into states of mediocrity and get a chance to start over.

Maybe Victor Kiam knows something we don't. Maybe he knows that Boston isn't the spot for a team anymore. Maybe it is time to leave.

One large nuclear armament should do the trick. We won't have to watch and wait for Brad Lohaus to try and become an NBA force inside (can anyone wait that long?).

We won't have to watch the Pats play "Please don't lose the game for us, little Dougie."

We won't have to watch goalies Reggie Lemelin and Andy Moog have low goals-against averages and losing records at the same time as the Bruins offense stagnates quicker than the national economy.

We won't have to see the demise of Boston College football, under former UMaine coach Jack Bicknell, and basketball, as even Dana Barros cannot do it all.

Boston, you have treated us well over the years, but now it is time for you to go. Maybe I'll move to Denver or Minneapolis, where they haven't had such success and it still gets pretty damn cold.

Dan Bustard is a junior journalism major from Presque Isle who is sick and tired of hearing from his father Fred just how great Bill Russell was in the old days.

Guards lead Chiefs past UMaine, 79-74

by Mike Bourque
Staff Writer

After struggling through double digit losses to Wisconsin, Rice and Boston College, the UMaine men's basketball team was supposed to have time to catch its breath by facing Division II Springfield College at the Bangor Auditorium.

But the best laid plans of Coach Rudy Keeling and his men went astray and the Chiefs from Springfield left Bangor with 79-74 victory.

"The longer you let a team like this stay up on you, the more they start believing they can beat you," said the Bear's Keeling. "...This is a team of players who couldn't make it at the Division I level...they got up to play against us."

"This is our best game since I've been here," Chief's Coach Harold Wissel said. "...All of our players had good games."

But Wissel had to have been especially happy about the play of his two starting guards. The two, Paul Wissel (the coach's son) and Derek Amalbert, combined for 51 of Springfield's 79 points.

And that was impressive but even more so was the way the two handled the Chief's offense in the game's final minutes. Along with forward Tim Kohs, the guards worked a weave near the top of the key that wasted away the precious seconds that UMaine needed to make its comeback. Somehow, each time as the shot clock wore down near the 5-second mark, Wissel (24 points) or Amalbert (27 points) would get an open shot and hit it or get fouled.

The two also hit for a combined 17 of 18 from the foul line.

"They hit their free throws and we didn't," Keeling said. "That could have been the game."

UMaine made only 13 of 23 of its free throws for 57 percent while Springfield made 27 of 31 for 87 percent. For UMaine, even the steady Dean Smith missed a pair of important foul shots while Guy Gomis, who was hindered by a bandaged right hand, made only four of nine.

In the second half the Black Bears were down as much as 12 at 54-42 with 15:05 left on SC's Mike Provencher's layup.

UMaine mounted a comeback led by freshman Derrick Hodge (21 points) and Smith (16 points) and tied the score at 66 with five and a half minutes to go. But the Chiefs got the next seven points to regain a fairly comfortable lead.

The Bears got within three at 73-70 on Hodge dunk with 1:20 left to play and SC made their free throws down the stretch.

In the first half it was the Black Bears who jumped out to the early lead, 19-14, but the shooting of Wissel (he missed just once in the half and hit three long-range three pointers) and Amalbert kept SC close enough to make a run at the Bears late in the half. The Chiefs went on a 15-0 run and wound up with 45-38 half time lead.

"They had a good game plan," Keeling said of the Chief defense that UMaine's senior scorer Matt Rossignol to just eight points in the half.

They used a box and one defense with Kohs guarding Rossignol.

UMaine will have some time to reflect on its 1-5 record until travelling to Hanover, N.H. for the Dartmouth Tournament on Friday.

The University of Maine's women's swim team brought their record to 4-1 on Saturday by toppling St. John's University, 139-97.

The Black Bears started the meet by winning the 400 yard medley relay with the team of Meg Briselden, Jennifer Boucher, Noreen Solakoff and Stacey Seabrease (4:15.17). The medley relay team came in almost three seconds ahead of St. John's only entry in the event.

Maine pulled further ahead of the Redmen after sweeping the 50 yard freestyle event, putting the score at 53-20 after four events. Seabrease led the Black Bears with a time of 25:58. Jennifer Denison and Robin Ottman placed second and third respectively.

Audrey Harlow, the Black Bears' only diver, remained undefeated in the one meter diving event by beating Charlie Jackson and Gerylan Chiasere.

St. John's got even in the other diving events by giving Harlow her lowest finish of the season. St. John's Chiasere and Jackson placed first and second respectively and Harlow finished third.

In the 200 yard backstroke, Briselden cruised easily for a first place finish, beating her closest opponent, Eileen McGloughlin of St. John's, by over four seconds.

In the final event, the 400 yard free relay, the Black Bears captured both first and second place. The team of Abrams, Seabrease, Marcie d'Entremont and Nancy Connolly won easily with a time of 3:51.63, giving them almost an eight second margin over the second place team.

Maine's record stands at 4-1 and its record in the New England Women's Intercollegiate Swim and Diving is 4-0.

The Black Bears will be training in Florida during Christmas Break.

UMaine goaltender Scott King.

UMaine was able to get 13 shots on the Huskie's Rich Burchill but the goaltender withstood them all including several in the last minute.

UMaine coach Shawn Walsh called two NU players for illegal sticks in the last 1:14 and was correct both times. Walsh then pulled King in favor of an extra skater but UMaine couldn't even the score.

In the first period the Black Bears had jumped to a 2-0 lead as John Massara and Perron each scored.

The Huskies Rico Rossi got one back at the 3:26 mark of the period but UMaine's Keith Carney countered less than three minutes later giving the Bears the lead at 3-1.

NU evened the score before the end of the period on goals by Sean Curtin and Dave Buda. These help set up the gamewinner by Sullivan.

UMaine will now rest for two weeks before hosting the Dexter Hockey Classic on December 27 and 28.

In the spring of 1988, Gordon Clapp Travel Agency tentatively planned to evacuate its two-room office on the second floor of the union.

Scott had made an informal request to the Memorial Union Council to obtain the travel agency's locale and, Scott said, was "promised" the location by the council.

Other groups bidding on the space were the University Club, the UMaine Student Credit Union — which wanted it for office space — and the Association of Graduate Students.

"The only space available, as of September, was in Chadbourne," Scott said.

In the late summer, Scott and a portion of his staff moved ASAP from the union location to the temporary Chadbourne location.

David Rand, Memorial Union director, said that this fall ASAP was denied the space partly because of the "effectiveness" of its Chadbourne location.

"The Union Council met three times to focus on the travel agency, (which) was supposed to move last spring, Rand said. "But that was postponed."

ASAP was eliminated from the council's decision because "Chadbourne was... meeting their needs," according to minutes from a September union council meeting.

The council's final decision was to allow the Association of Graduate Students and the credit union to share the agency space "if and when the agency leaves," Rand said.

The council made that decision partly because it believed the name, which includes administrative publications, was not in keeping with what the union represents.

"The union serves the students and the word 'administrative' seemed inappropriate," he said. Rand said the term administrative held little relevance to the purpose of a student union.

He agreed with Scott that the union location would be more accessible to students seeking ASAP assistance, but said the travel agency space it requested would have had to be shared with another student organization.

Rand added that he believed that the ASAP's Chadbourne office was more spacious and "much more adequate."

He said the kinds of space ASAP was looking for were varied and could not be completely allocated.

Scott maintained that the association should be located in the union because of its function.

Rand, though, said he wished the union could be big enough to "meet everybody's needs."

Correction

An article in Thursday's paper about ASAP incorrectly stated the nature of the conflict between the group and the UMaine administration.

Administrators feel the group competes with the university's printing office, not the Department of Public Affairs.

It was a reporting error.

UNH downs UMaine in last two events

by Dan Bustard
Staff Writer

All this week during the preparations for the indoor track meet against the University of New Hampshire, Head Coach Jim Ballinger and his assistants foresaw a problem.

The final two events of the meet were the mile and two mile relays, in which Ballinger knew the University of Maine would have trouble.

UNH won those two events and the meet, 75-70, as UMaine could not build a big enough lead to hold off the late charge by the Wildcats.

"We just did not have enough people to bring back for the relays," Ballinger said. "You try to win a meet usually before the relays, but we couldn't."

Ballinger pleased by team's Harvard Open performance

by Dan Bustard
Staff Writer

Patience is a virtue, especially in the coaching profession.

For Head Coach Jim Ballinger, his handling of the women's indoor track team involves a lot of waiting.

Ballinger was pleased with his team's performance in the Harvard Open, one of the bigger December meets in New England.

But in taking only 14 athletes, the emphasis is placed on working on technique, getting better and maybe achieving personal bests.

"I was impressed with Angie Wheelchel," Ballinger said. "She ran the 800 meters for the first time for us, and did pretty well."

"I had talked about that this week, and I felt we might need one more quarter miler."

Ballinger had nothing but compliments for UNH, which he lost to for the first time in 10 years.

"UNH has really improved over last year. Both teams did a good job in this meet."

With sprinter Carl Smith still hampered by a bad ankle, Ballinger moved Paul Richardson to the 200 meters to take his place.

"With Carl (who finished second in the 55 meter dash) still bothered by his ankle," Ballinger said, "we had to bring Paul back for the 200, which is very close to the running of the mile relay. I was leary this week about who to use in place of Carl in the 200."

Wheelchel's time of 2:22.2 did not place, but Ballinger was not looking so much for results against other runners as much as the continued improvement of his team.

The 1600 meter relay team did place sixth, as Heather Killion, Kris Merikanto, Wheelchel and Barbara Dupuis ran a time of 4:16.3.

Freshman Kim Pierce had the best race of the UMaine quarter milers, clocking a time of 1:01.7.

Debbie Cox reached a new personal record in the 20-lb. weight with a throw of 30' 9 3/4". Ballinger described Killion's time of 7.7 seconds in the 55 meter dash as "respectable."

Also performing well for the early stages of the season was Michelle Mathieu, who triple jumped 34'.

New Hampshire was led by Randy Hall, who captured first in the 1,500 and 3,000 meters, and Anthony Ross, winner of the 55 meter dash and the 200 meters.

Several strong performances were put in by UMaine, including a difficult triple by freshman Jeff Young.

Young won the 1,000 meters in 2:38.4, three-tenths better than UNH's Dick Gebhardt, ran a strong last lap to almost sneak into second in the 1,500 (4:10) and added a strong leg in the two mile relay.

"Jeff ran exceptionally," assistant coach Emily Spiteri said. "He was in fourth by a lot going into the last lap but took off and almost caught the second-place finisher."

Senior Dave Johnson led the UMaine jumpers by winning the triple jump (44' 11 1/4") and grabbing second in the high jump (6'6") and long jump (21' 5 1/2").

Steve Trefethen won the high jump (6'6" on fewer misses), while Steve Woodcock was second in the triple jump (42' 7 1/2") and Mike Norman third in the long jump (21' 3 3/4").

Richardson placed first in the 400 meters in 51.9 seconds, while John Kachmar won the 55 meter high hurdles in 7.9 seconds.

Dale Nealy showed perhaps the biggest improvement, winning the pole vault with an effort of 14' after not clearing any height last week.

Both indoor teams will have another meet until January, and Ballinger said that the rest will allow UMaine to better prepare for meets.

The University of Maine Fire Department wishes you a happy and safe holiday season

Christmas decorations are beautiful and remind us of this joyous time of year. When you decorate your room, office, or workplace for the holidays, please be safety conscious. Natural greenery is highly flammable even when it is still living, and is therefore prohibited from being used in any building on campus. All Christmas lights should have an attached UL or FM approved tag, and should be in good shape. Wrapping paper, crepe paper streamers, large paper murals, pyroxylin plastic decorations, and other loose flammable decorations must be free from dorm rooms, offices, around doors and hallways. Artificial trees and greenery are permissible provided they are not obstructing a hallway or exit. Please help us help you. Let's make our holiday season memorable for its joy and happiness, not for a tragedy that could have been avoided.

The Black Bears had an easy 32 points added to their score in the diving events. There were no divers that competed for the Redmen in the meet. For Maine, senior Brad Russell took the top spot in both the one and three meter events. In both events, freshmen Rick Keene placed second and Rich Allen followed up in third place.

The Black Bears performed well in the freestyle events against the Redmen, losing first place in the 50 yard event only. Bob Leonard won the 100 yard freestyle (49.26) and finished second in the 50 yard. Senior Scott Wescott placed third in the 50 yard.

Junior Russ Verby captured first place in both the 200 and 500 yard freestyle events, with respective times of 1:46.77 and 4:57.66. Freshman Ed Haibon placed third in the 200 yard and Burnham took second in the 500.

St. John's had one standout in the meet in Sollee. He won both the 200 yard breaststroke and 200 yard individual medley and was the second swimmer on St. John's winning 400 yard medley relay, swimming the breaststroke.

Maine now has a record of 3-1 on the season. The Black Bears next meet will be on Jan. 5 at Colby College.
