Elections postponed

Confusion, mismanagement plague polls

by Jon Bach
Staff Writer

Confusion and mismanagement prompted the postponement of student government elections Tuesday.

The Fair Election Practices Committee of student government voted to cancel the elections at 1:30 p.m. and reschedule them for Feb. 14.

FEPC member Mike Scott said students running the polls had incomplete and outdated lists of voting students. At the same time, he said, Valti-dine machines used to count and record the votes malfunctioned.

Scott also said students who were operating the polls weren't briefed on proper voting procedures.

"It's FEPC's fault. We screwed up. We weren't all where we should have been," he said.

Contributing to the decision to cancel was a front page error in the Daily Maine Campus that showed incorrect captions for the two sets of student government candidates.

The error caused confusion, said FEPC member Gary Fogg.

"It was misinformation," he said. "A lot of students don't know who the candidates are. People remember faces, not names."

He said students talking to a set of candidates might not remember names, but would remember faces. Because the photos and names of the candidates were transposed in the Campus, Fogg said it wasn't proper representation.

Scott agreed.

"(The Campus) has a major impact at the university. It's the main focus of information," Scott said.

Eric Ewing, chair of the committee, was unable to be reached when the committee decided to cancel the election. He said he doesn't think he would have canceled the election, but he respects the committee's decision.

"They have their reasons," he said. "They're a committee. If they say cancel then it should be so. They had a bird's eye view of what was going on."

Scott said FEPC should have had one big meeting before the new election.

FEPC member Jim Moorhead said a fair election is the most important consideration.

"People are going to respect us a lot more if we postpone," he said. "We have to plan and organize."

"It's too bad that we had to go around scurrying," he said. "We lacked the organization. We're doing what we can to make sure it doesn't happen again."

Candidates had mixed reactions to the cancellations.

T.J. Ackermann, candidate for student government vice president, said he knows mistakes were made, but they were not caused by anyone in particular.

Ackermann said he and John Gallant, candidate for president of student government, are unaffected by the

UMaine employees lack access to health center

by Doris Rygalski
Staff Writer

When students at the University of Maine are ill, they can go to Cutler Health Center.

When university employees get sick, however, they must either consult their insurance manuals or find health care elsewhere.

"Employees have a health insurance plan, but we don't have access to health-care facilities on campus," said Dr. Roberta Berrien, director of Cutler Health Center.

The UMaine health insurance program for employees is covered by the Employee Benefit Plan Administration of New Hampshire, said Marvis Hussey, a workers' compensation assistant.

According to the UMaine Benefits Summary brochure, EBPA benefits are paid for by the university. Coverage includes hospital and health-care expenses.

On-campus health care for employees, though, is non-existent, Berrien said.

There has been talk of a possible employee health-care program, but, she said, little action has been taken so far.

"I've always had an interest in faculty health," she said. "I hope they'll begin a program."

Berrien said that because of the health center's limited funding and staff, Cutler isn't prepared to handle the program alone. But she said Cutler could offer its knowledge of health maintenance to help initiate an employee program.

"We could give advice on what's useful and important with health," she said.

If an employee health program were started, Berrien said, new people would have to be hired to deal specifically with employees.

"There is barely enough funding and staff to deal with students alone," she said. "It wouldn't be right that we would have to deal with employees, too."

Berrien said that at one time a Human Performance Center run by Joseph Pechinski, professor of physical education and education, provided UMaine employees with a means to evaluate and assess the status of their health.

Ruling on fraternity suspensions delayed

by Doug Kesseli
Staff Writer

President Dale Lick postponed Tuesday the final decision on the suspensions of the Beta Theta Pi and Delta Upsilon fraternities.

He said he withheld a decision so that he could put the situations into perspective.

Lick said he expects to notify both fraternities of his final decision within five days.

Both fraternities have appealed to the president to reduce their suspension times for their involvement in hazing incidents last December.

In mid January a university Conduct Committee upheld the university's December decision to suspend both fraternities but reduced their suspension periods. Lick, accompanied by William Lucy, associate dean of Student Activities and Organizations, listened to and spoke with representatives from both fraternities in separate meetings Tuesday afternoon.

"We just presented our point of view," said senior Tim Hooper, recent past president of DU.

Response to Palestinian uprising violated human rights, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's response to the Palestinian uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip "led to a substantial increase in human rights violations," the State Department said today in its annual report on human rights conditions worldwide.

The wide-ranging study also hailed "remarkable changes in the Soviet Union" under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev during the past year.

The report criticized Israeli troops for practices that resulted in "many avoidable deaths and injuries" during the 14-month uprising.

From time to time since the violence started in the occupied territories, the State Department has expressed criticism of Israeli efforts to bring it under control, but the report appeared to go beyond the earlier statements.

The report said Israeli authorities in some cases prosecuted or took disciplinary action against soldiers or settlers who had killed Palestinians.

But it added, "Regulations were not rigorously enforced; punishments were usually lenient, and there were many cases of unjustified killing that did not result in disciplinary actions or prosecutions."

Investigation of AMHI concludes

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — On the sixth and final day of legislative hearings on the Augusta Mental Health Institute, a state Human Services Department official said AMHI's loss of Medicare funding was among the reasons the department launched a probe into care of state wards at the mental hospital.

The report, based on an investigation in September and October 1988, found that only 12 of 45 state wards were receiving adequate treatment, Peter Walsh, director of the Bureau of Social Services, told the Legislature's Human Resources Committee.

Walsh said the department study also was prompted last summer by "concerns" about patient treatment raised by their advocates and the chronic overcrowding that was the subject of a special commission's investigation last year.

In the wake of a report issued in November, Probate Judge James E. Mitchell recommended that other probate judges no longer refer mental patients to AMHI.

On Tuesday, Walsh told the legislative committee that all 33 cases in which wards were found to have been receiving inadequate treatment were referred to the state Bureau of Adult Protective Services, medical consultants, occupational therapists and others for further study.

Federal regulators take over S&Ls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators, wasting no time in implementing portions of President Bush's savings and loan rescue plan, announced Tuesday that they had begun taking control of more than 200 insolvent savings and loans institutions that are still operating.

Officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures deposits at commercial banks, and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which performs the same function for S&Ls, announced that combined regulatory teams from the two agencies had been put into place at four insolvent S&Ls located in Maryland, Florida, California and Texas.

Within a month, officials said they hoped to have federal regulatory teams in place at approximately 224 S&Ls that are still operating even though they are technically insolvent.

The announcement came just a day after Bush unveiled the administration's plan to overhaul the S&L industry. Officials said they were moving with dispatch to emphasize the urgency of the problem.

Officials said that all of the insolvent S&Ls would continue normal operations. However, their operating decisions will be subject to approval from the federal regulators. The institutions will remain under government control until regulators can find buyers.

Trucker's death called suspicious

YORK, Maine (AP) — State police termed suspicious the death of a 60-year-old Massachusetts truck driver whose body was found early Tuesday beside his car that was stopped on a bridge along Interstate 95.

The body, discovered shortly after 3 a.m. along the northbound lanes on the York River bridge, was identified as that of Oliver C. Skidgell of Lynn, Mass., according to state police spokesman Stephen McCausland.

The car found near the body was identified as Skidgell's 1978 red Volvo station wagon, and investigators said anyone who might have seen the vehicle in the area early Tuesday should contact state police.

Skidgell was identified as a Maine native who also had a residence in Mattawamkeag, where his parents live. His body was identified by his wife Karen, who drove to Maine from Lynn, Mass.

Colleges taking steps to butt smoking off campus

by The College Press Service

It's getting harder to be a cigarette smoker on American campuses.

A number of schools have announced even tougher smoking restrictions in recent weeks. From Big Bend Community College in Washington state to the East Coast, campuses that began limiting student smoking as long as a decade ago have taken the last big step this school year:

"Smoking is pretty much banned now" at Big Bend, spokesman Doug Sly reported of the new rules, implemented Jan. 1.

In 1976, Penn State University was one of the first U.S. campuses to ban smoking from its laboratories and classrooms. On April 1 of this year, it will forbid smoking everywhere except certain dorm rooms.

"It's too strict of a rule. I have a smoking habit and I don't feel like standing out in the rain or snow (to smoke)," said Penn State senior Mary Helen Moran.

Stanford University in 1988 banned smoking even at outdoor events.

"Some colleges have been setting the pace," said Dr. John Longest, the former Mississippi State University student health center director and America College Health Association official who has led efforts to combat smoking on campuses for several decades.

The drumbeat of new restrictions has been constant.

Colorado's Metropolitan State College's bookstore stopped selling cigarettes in November, while Georgia State University banned such sales in 1986. Scores of other schools, including the universities of Texas, Illinois, Nebraska and North Dakota, and Tulane, Mankato State, and Southwest Missouri State universities also have restricted campus smoking.

School officials cite health concerns as the reason.

"We have practical, even moral reasons to restrict smoking," explained William Hetrick, director of Penn State's human services department.

"Colleges need to recognize young people are at a volatile point in their development of habits," said John M. Pinney, executive director of Harvard's Institute for the Study of Smoking Behavior and Policy. "Colleges can influence their young people by letting them know smoking is not acceptable."

But even among the new campus bans, there are signs college students may be smoking again.

Some 10.1 percent of this year's freshmen, up from 8.9 percent of last year's first-year collegians, smoke cigarettes, the annual American Council on Education-University of Los Angeles survey of 300,000 students found in mid-January.

"The key question is how do we get to these teen-agers?" a frustrated Longest said of the survey results. "There's so much more resounding proof that smoking causes cancers, emphysema and heart disease than we had 10 years ago."

"Teens experiment," Pinney said, "and they'll stop and start again. It's not until their late teen and early twenties that they really form a habit. One year does not a trend make. But this is a signal that we haven't made as much progress as we thought."

New shuttle aids travel on campus

by Jaime Osgood
Staff Writer

Students and faculty at the University of Maine who hate long walks around campus — especially in adverse conditions — have reason to smile, at least for the next four weeks.

The ad hoc task force on parking, made up of UMaine students, faculty members and administrators, hopes it has come up with a solution everyone can live with.

The answer is The Run Around, two yellow mini buses running every 15 minutes around campus.

The shuttle will run Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. from now until March 3.

The task force has been soliciting ideas from members of the UMaine community since its creation in September. It is under the direction of Thomas Aceto, UMaine vice president for Administration.

Jeanne Ma, the director of Facilities Planning and head of the task force, said suggestions for creating the Run Around came from letters the task force had received and from ideas brought up at open forums held in December.

"We have been very open to the ideas of students," she said. "We've evaluated the suggestions for a shuttle, and want to test the feasibility of it."

People riding the bus will be asked to fill out a questionnaire, giving the task force information about when, where and if students will use the bus.

"There have been concerns about walking after dark, in severe weather, and especially the distance from some of the parking lots," Ma said.

Maxine Harrow, associate dean of Student Services, said she thought the shuttle would help people who have to park in the peripheral parking lots, like the Steam Plant lot.

"We (the task force) do not know if the shuttle will be ideal, but we are hoping it will help the problem we have," she said.

Ma defined the parking problem by saying, "There are enough parking spots, but they are just not convenient."

The shuttle project, which will cost $6,480 for the four weeks it will be running, is being funded by Aceto's office, Ma said.

If response to the shuttle is good, she said, the university will look into ways to fund a more permanent shuttle program.

Lin Largey, a junior commuter student at UMaine, said she thought the shuttle was an excellent idea.

"I'll use it probably in the fall and winter when the weather is bad. No one likes to walk in rain or snow," she said.

Harrow said although the UMaine campus isn't large enough to present a problem for most students and faculty to get around, during the winter walking is sometimes a hardship.

"Hopefully the bus will be able to take that hardship away," she said. "This isn't an easy, or a cheap solution, but we are looking for the best one."

The bus will be stopping at the Steam Plant lot, Alford Arena, Memorial Gym circle, Cumberland Hall, Oxford circle, the service building, Hauck Auditorium circle, Estabrook Hall and Chadbourne circle every 15 minutes.

The contract for the two mini buses and two drivers was made by the university with John T. Cyr and Sons Inc. of Old Town.

Congress votes down 51 percent raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress voted Tuesday to take away its 51 percent pay raise and rushed the legislation to President Bush, who was expected to sign the measure before a midnight deadline.

Lawmakers were anxious to end the public outcry against the $45,500 increase, which left them feeling, in the words of one representative, like "cannon fodder for trash television and talk radio."

First, the House voted to reject the raise by a vote of 380-48. Less than three hours later, the Senate followed suit by a vote of 94-6. Although Bush had supported the raise, spokesperson Marlin Fitzwater said his boss "will abide by the wishes of the Congress."

The congressional votes also denied large raises for too federal executives and federal judges. Some lawmakers predicted that defeating the raises would accelerate an exodus from government service.

Indeed, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said in a statement; "I deeply regret the congressional action, which has prevented the federal judges in this country from receiving a well-deserved pay raise. ... We will not be able to attract and retain the kind of judges we need ... unless we pay our judges fairly and equitably."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Bush told Senate Republicans Tuesday he might ask Congress to approve lesser raises for the judges and executives.

With its votes, Congress rejected raises proposed by a presidential commission and endorsed by then President Reagan, Senators and representatives would have seen their salaries rise from $89,500 to $135,000.

During its less than 30 minutes of debate, the Senate heard Jesse Helms, R-N.C. and a foe of the raise, proclaim that the vote shows the American people that "you can fight city hall and you can take on the Congress of the United States with all its legerdemain and all its legislative ability."

The Senate last week voted 95-5 against the raise, but the wording of that resolution differed from the House version approved Tuesday. Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt., who had voted against the raise, voted for it Tuesday.

Jeffords said he cast his vote Tuesday to make clear his view that judges are badly in need of a pay raise and because, unlike last week's measure, this one did not curtail lawmakers' rights to make speeches for fees.

The other senators voting to sustain the raise were Democrats Christopher Dodd of Connecticut, Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Spark Matsunaga of Hawaii; and Republicans Frank Murkowski of Alaska and Ted Stevens of Alaska.

Despite the overwhelming House margin, members were clearly torn between their desire for a pay raise and the public scorn heaped upon them for considering the increase.

The chamber applauded loudly when Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., told colleagues in a rousing speech before the vote, "Each member of this House, Democrat and Republican, is worth a salary of $135,000 a year."

The irony of the House's dilemma was reflected when Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., a pay raise defender, introduced the resolution to reject the increase — but voted against the resolution.

"We face reality here today," Fazio said. "We're doing what has become inevitable."

Fazio chided his colleagues for not having "the courage to speak out" in their own defense and said, "We became cartoon cannon fodder for trash television and talk radio." He added, "There are Supreme Court justices who make less than their clerks the day after they (the clerks) retire and go into private practice."

were ethics reforms that lawmakers had hoped to pass once the raise became law.

These included a ban on fees for speeches and appearances in both houses.

Earning pay

Money, Money, Money.
It comes hard to all of us who are scraping by looking for our own little future role in the world, while we also try to just get by today.

Now it seems like there are a few people who are, and have been affiliated with the University of Maine who are earning their money and not being required to do the job they were hired to do.

The latest "continuing story" or soap opera, whatever you prefer, has revolved around the Cutler Health Center.

Dr. Roberta Berrien announced, in a very brief staff meeting last Thursday, that she had decided to resign as the director of the health center.

It may seem extremely sudden, but is it? She has not been the most well-received new faculty member the university has hired in the past few years.

And her resignation is prompting action by Dwight Rideout, dean of Student Services, and Vice President of Student Affairs John Halstead. The two now have to find an interim replacement and a new director.

An interim director was not found at Monday's meeting. Rideout said earlier in the week that Cutler staff, students and others involved with the health center would be attending the meeting. He also said plans for a new director would be discussed.

Now one aspect of the entire ordeal that has already been decided is that Berrien will remain at Cutler until June 30 without any cut in salary with her position only that of a consulting physician.

Berrien does not deserve to get money for a job she is not performing. Plain and simple. Give her a salary for the job she is doing.

And as far as the Cutler Health Center is concerned, some real organization and administration is needed. Not only to cope with the business aspect of the job, but the person will hopefully be able to deal with, with some degree of respect, the staff and students.

Aid to El Salvador

Guest column by Brent A. Singer

The crisis in El Salvador has reached its critical point. What happens in the next two months will determine whether there will be hope for peace and economic reconstruction, or a new wave of terrible bloodshed and repression instead. United States military aid to El Salvador has had a profound role in shaping this present crisis, and I urge you to use every means at your disposal to act on behalf of democracy, human rights, and social justice for the people of El Salvador.

More specifically, national elections are scheduled in El Salvador for March 19. Because of the current election laws there, as it now stands, the ARENA party would probably get the most votes from those who are allowed to participate. ARENA is the party of the old oligarchy. During the last eight years their forces have waged a war of village massacres and death squad disappearances which have taken the lives of nearly 70,000 civilians. Their election "platform" is that if they win they will begin a total war against their enemies who resist and fight against them for human and economic rights such as fair wages, safe working conditions, decent housing, health care, and educational opportunities for everyone.

ARENA's model for total war is that of the Guatemalan government's efforts in the so-called "scorched-earth war" of 1978-1985. During that time more than 440 Guatemalan villages were burned and at least 100,000 civilians were killed.

ARENA admires that program, and, if they win, their "total war" will be open exaggeration of their efforts over the last several years.

The United States is itself responsible for much of the present crisis. Our aid to El Salvador has been over $400 million annually for many years, and in 1987, our total aid to El Salvador of $608 million exceeded that country's own contribution to its national budget ($582 million).

Furthermore, in a recent report to Congress, Rep. Leach (R-IA), Rep. Miller (D-CA) and Sen. Hatfield (R-OR) state that 75 of this aid goes to finance the violence in that country and its effects instead of going to address its root causes. Indeed, even the Reagan administration has felt in the past that ARENA is too far to the right, and they have tried to keep the Christian Democrats, led by President Jose Napoleon Duarte, in power.

However, despite United States support, Duarte (who is seriously ill) and his party have proven to be totally ineffective against the military and ARENA. He and the Christian Democrats lack support from both the left and the far right since they are perceived as the puppets of the United States. In addition, the widespread corruption and weakness of the Duarte government has meant that ARENA and the military have been the principal beneficiaries of United States aid to that country. In this way, massive United States aid goes to support death squads and village massacres, despite the

A would-be sex addict?

There's a scene in Elia Kazan's "On The Waterfront," where Marlon Brando, bruised, bloodied and incredibly alone, walks toward the gate of the strike-bound dockyard.

The camera slowly pans across the crowd where the union thugs sneer and Brando's fellow workers stand in stony silence. Then the screen fills up with nothing but Brando, his steady walk pounding out the triumphant beat of American individualism.

One man's victory against the mob.

To me, Wade Boggs is that man.

Yes, Wade, who last week bravely announced to the public his horrific affliction, his perhaps, debilitating disease.

Yes, friends, Wade Boggs of Red Sox fame told us that he was addicted to sex.

Ohmagod. Say it isn't so Wade.

"I was watching Geraldo Rivera a couple of weeks ago and there was a show on about oversexed people and things like this. Geraldo had a psychologist on there ... and they were calling it a disease," Boggs said in a live interview from Florida with WNEV.

"I feel that's exactly what

has happened — that a disease was overtaking Wade Boggs," he continued.

Poor Wade.

But now he has come forward and told us that after four tragic years of suffering with this ordeal, this terrible cancer, alone in his silent and lonely solitude, he has finally found a cure.

That cure, it seems, came in the form of a bitter pill named Margo Adams. Or, more specifically, in her threat to reveal all Boggs' seamy sexual exploits while he was afflicted beyond his control, a mere helpless babe cradled in the sordid arms of the devil's nurse maid.

Yes, friends, Margo demanded Wade pay her $100,000 or she would tell all.

Oh my.

She "has vowed to ruin Wade Boggs' life," Boggs said.

As you can see, one side-effect of this horrible disease is that Wade now refers to himself as someone else.

When he is hungry he says something like, "Wade Boggs wants to eat dinner now."

Hopefully, in time, this condition will pass.

Yet in his coming forth, in his revealing his affliction to the public, Boggs has opened the door leading to a cure for others similarly afflicted.

And don't kid yourself. There are thousands of people suffering from this disease. Some, perhaps, even on this campus. In fact, I, yes, I, am a sex addict.

Well, I guess that wouldn't be quite accurate considering I haven't had a date in a while.

But I am a would-be sex addict. Yes, definitely a would-be sex addict.

Thank you Wade. Thank you for giving me the chance to cure myself. Yes, God thank you Wade.

Marathon

To the editor:

Another year has gone by, bringing the Fiji Marathon upon us once again! This year the Marathon begins at 12:00 noon on Saturday, February 11, and ends at 12:00 noon on Sunday, February 12. For those of you who are new to this annually held run, the Fiji Marathon is a 24-hour marathon sponsored by the fraternity Fiji to help benefit the American Cancer Society. I have been a devoted Fiji Marathon runner for the past four years. I have experienced the excitement that is characteristic of the event; and, in essence, has kept me coming back year after year. The Marathon is definitely a college experience in which most everyone should consider taking part.

To get you off on the right track, Residential Life's Nutrition Team and the fraternity Fiji, are holding a Pasta Pigout Dinner the evening before the Marathon, February 10, between the hours of 5:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. in the Damn Yankee. Pasta is high in carbohydrates and will fuel your muscles to take on the Marathon the next day. Dave Pickering, the noteworthy chef from Jasmine's Restaurant, will be helping us prepare the dinner. Marathon runners can eat free of charge, others pay $3.00. So get your running shoes on and come join us at the Pasta Pigout!

No tenure, no job

To the editor:

It was very disturbing to read in your CPS review of Charles Sykes' "Profscam" that "Sometimes the very finest teachers are let go... when they fail to devote as much time to research and publishing as their tenured colleagues," says Dr. Jonathan Knight (of the American Association of University Professors) while ironically opposing the elimination of tenure.

Tenure seems to be the carrot which keeps the professors racing onward while students and society stand in disbelief watching the mental food wagon pass them by. Are books more inspiring than teachers? One minute with the Great Teacher, Jesus, would have been worth more than the entire Bible to me.

"Many of the ages' greatest thinkers - from Socrates to Jesus to Galileo to Freud to even certain scholars during the McCarthy era in the United States - lost jobs, money, reputations and even their lives pursuing ideas that the political or religious leaders of their day found offensive," says the CPS review.

Yet, "Tenure arose as a way to protect them and the masses of more anonymous college teachers from the political whims of administrators, who might otherwise succumb to community pressures to punish professors engaged in misunderstood or unpopular research."

The above named "great thinkers" did not have the security of tenure. And if they had they would not have found the inspiration to challenge the system which gave them their tenure. Such is the nature of subconscious gratitude.

Teachers should not be expected to seek publication. Great teachers are written about. Students are great self-teachers if and when they have the rare good fortune to sit before inspired guides who have been liberated from the wasteful expectation of book-writing when they are not moved by the spirit to do anything but fire-up their students with a burning desire to please their teacher with their excellence, while preparing themselves for a position of service to society.

Nature gives tenure to none of its creatures, because it's against natural law. There's a great new freedom blowing in the wind, and nothing can stop it.

Band warned

To the editor:

For those of you who attended Thursday night's men's basketball game against Canisius, you probably witnessed an incident, involving the Pep Band getting warned about "blowing our horns" while the opposing team attempted their freethrows. The official threatened us with a technical. The only problem is that the band wasn't responsible for the outbursts. It was the fans, with their air horns. Another thing is, the official didn't even give us a chance to defend ourselves. This makes the band look bad in the eyes of the opposing team, our team, and the spectators.

This is not the first time that this has happened to us, and I would like to set the record straight once and for all.

It seems pretty bad if the referee can't tell the difference between a trumpet, and an air horn. The Black Bear Band is very respectable about keeping quiet during gameplay, and getting blamed for incidents that we were not a part of really give us a bad look. I hope this letter will prevent any further wrongful accusations toward the Black Bear Pep Band.

"good intentions" of the Reagan and Bush administrations.

In response to this crisis, the FMLN has made a drastic and very positive proposal regarding the March elections.

The FMLN, a popular liberation front fighting for human and economic rights for the people of El Salvador, has officially proposed that the March elections be postponed until September 15, which is independence day in El Salvador. There are several reasons for this.

To begin with, the current election rules exclude nearly 2 million Salvadorans from voting. Registration for voting ended last September before many people had a chance to register.

In addition, there are about 800,000 citizens without a home in El Salvador because the military has bombed or burned their villages, or has otherwise forced them to leave. These displaced people could not have registered, even if they wanted to, because they did not have valid "addresses." There are also about 1 million people who have been forced to flee the country into Honduras and other places, and there have been no provisions to allow them to vote. As it stands, ARENA would win the "election" because it is their supporters, the wealthy, who can vote. If this happens, there will be a "mandate" for total war.

In contrast, the FMLN proposed that everyone be allowed to vote, and it proposes that on the day of election, both sides put down their weapons and remove all their forces from the places of voting. The FMLN also agrees to abide by the results of this kind of free election. If everyone can vote without the threat of death squad retaliation, the FMLN is confident that ARENA will not win (although ARENA will have the right to participate in the election along with other parties.)

Needless to say, ARENA will oppose postponing the elections under these conditions, and it is therefore necessary for the United States not to abandon the mess which it has made. The United States can do this in several ways. First,

WE OUGHT STRONGLY TO SUPPORT THE FMLN INITIATIVE. Second, WE OUGHT TO WITHDRAW OUR MILITARY AID FROM EL SALVADOR. Third, WE OUGHT NOT TO LEND OUR SUPPORT TO ANY PARTY IN THE SEPTEMBER ELECTIONS (which is also a part of the FMLN proposal). The United States has regularly attempted to buy elections in poor nations by giving huge amounts (in terms of the economies of poor nations) to the party of our choice through the CIA and other covert agencies. The FMLN instead proposes that all parties be allowed the same amount of money - or, at least, something near the amount that ARENA can afford - in order to campaign.

In closing, I want to stress that thousands of innocent lives are at stake. If the March elections near, if the United States does not support the FMLN initiative, and if ARENA is about to win an "election," the people who know that total war will follow will have nothing to lose. Instead of preparing for elections in September, they will be forced to take action to protect themselves in March. If this happens, and if there is a massive popular insurrection led by the FMLN, I hope that the United States acts wisely.

I say this because on December 23, Mr. Reagan announced the sending of 1,900 U.S. troops to Honduras in late January.

In addition, during the third week of February, 10,000 regular active duty troops will begin to be deployed in Honduras in waves of 1,200 at a time.

All together, a total of 14,000 U.S. troops will participate in three different sets of maneuvers in Honduran territory surrounding El Salvador. If there is a popular insurrection in March in El Salvador against the forces of ARENA, the military, and Duarte's government, can you guess what Reagan and Bush are sending these troops for?

Now is the time to begin to shift our policy of foreign intervention and to begin to turn war into peace. I urge you to help win democracy in El Salvador by actively supporting the FMLN initiative and by keeping the United States and the CIA out of the elections next September.

"We're going to act like nothing happened," he said.

The decision will affect Royce Albert and Clyde Armstrong, the other candidates in the race.

"We had our views out in the open," Armstrong said. "Things were looking good for us today. We have to organize a little bit and try to pick up the momentum we had and go from there."

The decision also affects Dwight Dorsey, candidate for president of Residents on Campus, and his running mate, Jodie Mahon.

"I neglected schoolwork to make sure people know what we stand for," he said. "Now it's going to drag on for another week."

He said the voting procedure wasn't handled "professionally."

"Emphasis on employee health is cost effective," Berrien said.

Results "may take time, though," she said. "Maybe even 10 years."

But right now, she said, the programs are barely in the talking stage.

Berrien said she is not certain there will even be an employee health-care program.

Hockey team sweeps broomball tourney for local charity

Funds raised for local Big Brothers Big Sisters

by Kim Thibeau
Staff Writer

With the goaltending of David Capuano and three goals scored by Matt DelGuidice, the University of Maine hockey team swept ...

Wait a minute? What is wrong with this picture?

David Capuano in goal and Matt DelGuidice blazing down the ice scoring goals?

Does it sound like you're in the Twilight Zone?

Relax. This was all part of the third annual Broom Hockey Tournament to benefit Downeast Big Brothers/Big Sisters last night at Alford Arena.

"This is great for the kids and the community and it's neat for the participants," said Head Coach Shawn Walsh.

The Legend All-Stars, the Ill-Legal Beagles, and the Clean Sweeps, representing Eaton, Peabody, Bradford and Veague, each challenged the Black Bears.

The benefit game started with idea that the hockey team had three years ago.

"We wanted to do something to help a certain cause. (Big Brothers/Big Sisters) is a good cause," said Walsh.

"We (the team) decided on it because we have all been so fortunate and we wanted to make other fortunate."

A crowd of 500 saw the spills and thrills of the three games while seeing the comic antics of the Anah Temple Shrine Circus' "Keystone Kops".

Local sports personalities Ron Lisnett and Tim Throckmorton added to the festivities, acting as the games' referees.

Walsh also participated in the games, playing forward and in goal. The UMaine coach almost scored a goal for the Black Bears, but claims that he "was robbed" on the play.

The Black Bears also managed to achieve a milestone in the benefit.

"This is the first game this season that no one has gotten hurt in," said Walsh.

The chair of the tournament, Bruce Flynn, said that with the ticket proceeds and the teams' entry fees that over $1000 was raised for the organization.

Daily Maine Campus Athlete of the Week

Rachel Bouchard wins the Athlete of the Week award for the second time in leading the University of Maine women's basketball team to three wins. The sophomore center averaged 28 points a game and 14 rebounds, with highs of 30 points and 23 rebounds against Hartford Saturday.

Notre Dame has good high school recruiting class

(AP) — Notre Dame, coming off its first national football championship in 11 years, is about to score another dramatic victory.

Wednesday is the national signing day for high school prospects and the Irish loom as runaway winners, according to Allen Wallace, publisher of SuperPrep Magazine of Costa Mesa, Calif.

Notre Dame has received oral commitments from 17 of the 161 players given All-America status by SuperPrep, including the top-rated prospects in two of the magazine's nine categories—quarterback Rick Mirer of Goshen, Ind., and tight end Irv Smith of Pemberton, N.J.

Mirer was SuperPrep's No. 1-rated quarterback, as well as Midwest Offensive Player of the Year. He led his team to the state championship by completing 259 of 420 passes for 3,973 yards and 30 touchdowns while rushing for 480 yards and 22 TDs.

Mirer played safety on defense, intercepting eight passes, and also did the placekicking.

The 6-foot-4, 230-pound Smith is rated the best tight end in the country although his team's wishbone offense limited him to 18 receptions. He made All-State as a defensive back.

SuperPrep's top-rated offensive lineman, 275-pound Bob Whitfield of Wilmington, Calif., has committed to Stanford, as has the top place kicker, Paul Stonehouse of Los Angeles.

The No. 1 defensive lineman, (see Irish page 11)

Hockey East heating up

Hockey East is quickly approaching the proverbial crunch time of its season.

With less than a month remaining before the Hockey East playoffs, the University of Maine can not afford to slow down after getting back on track last Saturday.

The Black Bears' 6-4 victory on Saturday against the University of New Hampshire broke a three-game losing streak and raised UMaine's record to 14-6 in Hockey East and 24-8 overall.

That gives UMaine 28 points and second place in the Hockey East standings, only one point behind Boston College.

The Eagles are 13-4-3 in league play for 29 points. BC is ranked fourth in the WMEB-CHSB Hockey Poll to UMaine's fifth-place showing.

The Beanpot is the big priority on the minds of the Eagles. The annual tourney includes BC, Harvard University, Boston University and Northeastern University.

Boston College suffered a tough 5-4 loss to 18-1 Harvard, ranked second in the nation, on Monday night in the Beanpot's opening round but the tourney games will not count toward the standings in Hockey East.

Joe Grant

But after this weekend's series with the University of Lowell, the UMaine hockey team will be completely focused on BC.

The Black Bears host the Chiefs on Friday and Saturday this week while BC will have a home-and-home series with Providence College.

The Chiefs are 3-17-1 and in last place in league play while PC is fifth at 9-11-1.

Pending the outcome of those two series, the showdown for the Hockey East championship will likely follow.

UMaine will travel to Boston to face the Eagles in two contests. The first on Friday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m. and on the following Sunday at 2 p.m.

The two squads battled on Jan. 3 at Alford Arena and UMaine came out with a 6-3 victory.

Black Bears goaltender Scott King had a stellar 30-save performance and senior Bruce Major scored a pair of goals, including the eventual game-winner, in a 47-second span of the second period, leading UMaine to the win.

But of course you have to worry about this weekend with the Chiefs. The two teams played on Jan. 17 at Lowell and UMaine earned a 9-2 victory. That win helped the Black Bears rebound from a 7-4 loss to Colorado College three nights earlier.

So now it's back to another old adage, "one day at a time." Let's get through this weekend and then worry about the Eagles.

UMaine senior defenseman Vince Guidotti is expected to miss at least this weekend's series against Lowell.

In the final minute of Saturday's game at UNH, Guidotti suffered a shoulder separation. He may also miss the BC series.

Joe Grant is a junior journalism major who thanks his lucky stars he decided to go to a university with a daily newspaper and wouldn't want it any other way.

Bjorn Borg may have attempted suicide

MILAN, Italy (AP) -- Five-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg swallowed barbiturates to ease an upset stomach, a friend said Tuesday, but a news agency reported the retired Swedish tennis player apparently had attempted suicide.

Borg, 32, was hospitalized at Milan Polyclinic for three hours Tuesday before he returned with his Italian finance, rock singer Loredana Berté, to her apartment.

The ANSA news agency said initial police investigators indicated Borg had tried to commit suicide but that it could not get official confirmation of its report.

Borg's personal adviser said he had taken barbiturates after becoming nauseous and another friend said Borg had been stricken by food poisoning.

"I'm fine, it's all over," Borg told reporters outside the apartment.

"Go away all of you," snapped Berté, 41, before slamming the door. During the drive from the hospital, a photographer gave chase on foot and bumped into the couple's taxi, prompting the driver to get out and slap him.

Hospital officials confirmed that Borg had been treated, but refused to give any details.

ANSA quoted unidentified hospital sources as saying Borg apparently swallowed about 10 pills.

Mara Savastano, a friend of the couple, said the singer told her that Borg had suffered from food poisoning.

Ingmar Alverdal, Borg's personal adviser, told the Swedish national news agency TT that Borg took barbiturates to fall asleep after he became sickened while dining at a restaurant Monday.

Borg retired from tournament play in 1983 at the age of 27.

Women's swim team visits Colby today

by Andy Bean
Staff Writer

The University of Maine women's swim team travels to Waterville on Wednesday to take on Division III Colby College in its last regular season meet.

The last time Colby, who has a 6-2 record, competed against UMaine, it was in the 1983-84 season and the Black Bears won, 86-44.

UMaine, 7-3, will use the meet to prepare for the New England Championships being held in Rhode Island on February 17-19, according to Head Coach Jeff Wren.

"It will give us a chance to move people around," Wren said, "and let them compete in some different events."

Wren added that the swimmers' performances in this meet will help him decide what events they will do at New England.

"We still have one person, Marcie d'Entremont, trying to qualify for New England," he said.

d'Entremont missed qualifying for the championship meet in the 100-yard freestyle by .03 of a second on Saturday against Boston University. She needs a time of 58.99 seconds to qualify.

Breaststroker Jen Boucher will return for UMaine after missing five meets with a leg injury.

Wren said, "Jen looks real good. She's been doing a lot of upper body training the last three weeks."

Colby's Sally White is one of the best Division III swimmers in the country and could give UMaine's Noreen Solakoff a tough race in the 200-yard freestyle, according to Wren.

Sanders reportedly will stay in school

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -- Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders refused Tuesday to confirm or deny a report in his hometown newspaper that he had decided to return to Oklahoma State University for his senior season, instead of opting for the NFL draft.

Sanders was in Philadelphia to pick up the Maxwell Football Club trophy as the outstanding collegiate player of the year. The Philadelphia Eagles' Randall Cunningham, quarterback of the NFC East champions, received the Maxwell's Bert Bell award as the outstanding pro player.

In Tuesday editions, the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle-Beacon quoted the 5-foot-8 Sanders as saying: "I'm planning on returning (to Oklahoma State). Right now I'm in school getting ready for next season and some exams."

But in Philadelphia, the Heisman Trophy winner said: "I don't remember saying that. I've done a thousand interviews this year. I can't remember what I say."

Sanders shattered 20 NCAA records last season, gaining 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns for an average of 232 and 3.5.

Sanders told the Associated Press Sunday that he had made his decision but was not ready to announce his intention.

The 20-year-old Sanders was asked why he would want to return to Oklahoma State, which has been suspended for three years from bowl games and for two years from television appearances because of recruiting violations.

"It's my intent to get a degree," he said. "A lot of times I think I'm not old enough to go out in the world."

Sanders has been urged by his father and by his brother, Brian, a running back at Northwestern, to leave college and turn pro.

"My brother told me that he'd ring my neck if I don't leave," the running back said. "My father realizes that this is my decision. I have to make it. I'd like to make my father happy, but I'll decide."

Sanders said that he has not hired an agent.

"I don't trust too many people. If I make a decision to go, I don't know if I can trust anybody with my money," he said.

Because he is a junior, Sanders would have to plead special circumstances to the NFL to become eligible for the regular April draft instead of the supplemental draft several months later.

Cunningham apologized for missing the Maxwell news conference last month to announce his selection for the Bell Award, named in honor of the late league commissioner Bert Bell.

Cunningham said the furor awakened him to his off-field responsibilities.

"I'm seeing myself grow as a person," Cunningham said. "I've matured and a lot of people helped me."

Cunningham, whose passing and running led the Eagles to the title and himself to the Pro Bowl, said he now realizes that his time is really no his own.

"I was wrong in thinking that just because the season is over I don't have anything to do. I realize now how much time it takes to show my appreciation to people. It's just not my life anymore. I belong to Philadelphia," Cunningham said.

Cunningham said that he would not attend the winter workouts, which start Feb. 26.

"I was told by the club to take a vacation, take some time off, get away from it for a while or I'll burn out," Cunningham said.

The quarterback also went out of his way to assure people that neither money nor success had turned his head.

"I'll be the same guy. I won't get big-headed. The money may swell my wallet," he said.

268-pound Sean Gilbert of Aliquippa, Pa., Defensive Player of the Year in the Northeast, says he will attend Pitt. The No. 1 defensive back, Eric Geter of Newman, Ga., is headed for Clemson.

Curtis Conway, a quarterback with exceptional speed who ranks No. 1 in SuperPrep's all-inclusive "athlete" category, has declared for Southern Cal.

Two No. 1 players are still uncommitted-running back Terry Kirby of Tabb, Va., and linebacker Jessie Armstead of Dallas, SuperPrep's choice as the overall No. 1 high school player in the country after leading Dallas Carter to the Texas Class 5AAAAA championship with 302 tackles, nine sacks and five interceptions, two of which he returned for touchdowns.

Clemson, Michigan and UCLA each have commitments from seven SuperPrep All-Americans while Florida State, Ohio State, Southern Cal and Texas have lined up six apiece.

TUB bringing entertainers to campus

by Debbie Dutton
Staff Writer

Comedians who have performed in Boston and New York are just some of the acts coming to the University of Maine this month.

The four comedians, brought to UMaine through The Union Board, will be appearing in the Damn Yankee in what is termed the "Comedy Series in After Hours."

At 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Sue McGinnis and Paul Wayne will be performing and on Feb. 22, also at 8 p.m., Nick DiPaolo and Walli Collins will appear.

McGinnis is the 1988 winner of the WBCN/Stitches Comedy Riot. WBCN is a Boston radio station that co-sponsored the event with the Boston nightclub Stitches. Her act includes character sketches and impersonations.

Musical parodies are the specialty of Wayne, who has performed with well-known entertainers such as Dionne Warwick and Kenny Loggins.

DiPaolo, a UMaine alumnus, is a regular at the comedy clubs the Improv and Dangerfield's in New York City. He does straight, observational comedy, said Tucker Goodman, a sophomore TUB member.

Collins has worked with Sam Kenison and, Goodman said, has a style unusual to many of today's comedians.

"He is a very high-powered, clean comic," he said. "He is very funny but isn't obscene and doesn't swear."

Other events planned by TUB include a "Sizzling Saturday Series" beginning Feb. 11 with the "Dating Game" in the Bears' Den. The host will be Broadway performer Tom Acousti and will follow the format of the television show.

"It will be one guy interviewing three girls behind a screen and then the other way around," said TUB member Chris Wallace. "The prizes will be a dinner for two at Sugarloaf or something along those lines."

Also in the Saturday Series, on Feb. 18 "The Sighs" will perform in the den. "The Sighs" are a New England band that has recently played in such Portland clubs as T-birds and the Old Port Tavern. They have also appeared at Benjamin's in Bangor.

Singer Paul Strowe, the last performer in the series for the month, will perform Feb. 25 in the den. Strowe was selected outstanding coffee-house entertainer of 1988 by the National Association of Campus Activities.

Wallace said the Saturday series was created to give students weekly programming.

"We want to give them something to look forward to each week," he said.
