Military Set Will Acclaim New Colonel

Cup To Be Given At Military Ball

By JIM BARROWS

Scabbard and Blade members and pledges are looking forward to tomorrow night's ceremonies, when the student-elected Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel will be presented by Jo Josslyn, last year's colonel. During the Military Ball intermission, Scabbard & Blade members will escort Ruth Ellingwood, Voncille Leonard, Jan Hovey, Jean McIntire, and Pat Coyne, the five Scabbard and Blade nominees.

One of the five campus beauties will be given a gold loving cup by Jo Josslyn. Col. Leslie Staub, head of the ROTC detachment, will bestow the honorary commission on the newly-chosen coed.

The Scabbard & Blade has been waiting for the students' decision since Tuesday, when elections were held in the Library foyer.

Corey's Orchestra Plays

Scabbard & Blade captain, Richard Swanson, said he had received confirmation from Al Corey, that the latter's orchestra will play at the Military Ball again this year. Corey, who is well-known to many Central Maine people, has played at Island Park and at many Waterville dances.

The dance, the first big formal of the school year, has been publicized through loudspeakers and portable

Alpine Holiday Is Carnival Theme

Everyone at Maine is invited to take an Alpine Holiday during the week end of Jan. 12, 13, and 14. That will be the theme of this year's Winter Carnival, and all events and arrangements on the program are being planned in keeping with it.

According to Jay Winter, chairman of the Carnival committee, work is underway on various phases of the week end festivities. Sub-committees have been named for particular events.

Heading sub-committees, arranging various phases of the Carnival, are: Nancy Knowles, arrangements for king and queen; George Morse, Ice Revue; Sewall Hobson, general ticket sale; Bob Cormier, publicity; Martha Pratt, women's intramural athletic events; and Don Waterman, men's intramural athletic events.

Nancy Knowles is secretary of the Carnival committee, and Bob Donovan is treasurer.

No Drips At Alumni Hall

Entrants to Alumni Hall by way of the side door no longer need duck their heads. As a result of repairs begun on the building last week, the eaves over the doorway are now being waterproofed to the extent that water from the roof will no longer fall on the heads of passersby, but will be carried away in gutters.

The Student's Task Today: A Letter From Dr. Hauck

Because of today's historic meaning, which has been emphasized by the present international crisis, editors of THE MAINE CAMPUS invited President Arthur A. Hauck to address a message to the students of the University of Maine. His letter follows:

On this seventh day of December, 1950, we and other freedom loving peoples are beset with problems and anxieties that seem as arduous and baffling as those we faced when Pearl Harbor was bombed.

The events that crowd in upon us bring particular issues to each one of us as individuals and as members of the University community. No one at this time knows what the future necessities of our country may demand of us. But this we do know, that in any crisis, the colleges and universities of the country are bound by tradition to serve sacrificially and effectively.

At the moment our main task is to be, above everything else, a community that goes about its work with calmness and fortitude. We know from the special arrangements provided for college students this year by Selective Service and from the increase in ROTC quotas, that our country places a high value upon a college training. The skills and capacity for leadership that come from study will be greatly needed as we struggle to preserve our freedom and way of life.

Here I should like to suggest that any changes in the plans for the service of college students will be reported to you promptly. A faculty committee on Military Service has been appointed to keep you informed, so do not depend upon rumors for your information.

The compelling obligation of every student is to give his best to the immediate job at hand. In doing this he will be rendering the best possible service to his country. Besides, if there should be an interruption in his college course, he can, when he returns, more effectively resume his program here, as did 85% of the students who left the campus for service in World War II.

We are living in a critical period in the world's history. To us is given the privilege of serving our country with loyalty and devotion. As members of this University community, we shall face the ordeals that lie before us with confidence and courage, determined that ours shall be a worthy contribution.

First Nighters Split Opinion On Masque's Hellman Drama

By MARILYN HOYT

Monday evening marked the opening of the Maine Masque play, "Another Part of the Forest."

Obviously, opening night is the most difficult one for the cast. First-night tension, resulting in stiffness and loss of memory, is something that must be overlooked.

When the curtain fell on the first act the audience was divided in its reactions. It seemed to be the general agreement that a lot of hard work had gone into the production. Admittedly there was a lot of talent on the stage, but there were differences of opinion as to the caliber of this talent.

Tears and Titters

The play, a three-act drama packed with emotion, seemed to some to border on the melodramatic. Religion entered somewhere into the theme of the play. Whether it was supposed to be a tittery or tear-jerky matter is still in question—the audience responded both ways.

To the sterner exponents of theatre art, the play was the least stimulating that the Masque has done in a long while—with the exception of the scenery.

To the other half of the audience,

the play was a moving drama, full of pathos and tension. Just to prove its point, this audience appeared at the reception with tear-stained faces.

Good and Bad Points

Taking into consideration the dual response of the audience, this reviewer feels that the production had many good points and many bad points.

In the first place, Beverly Bouchard did an extremely fine piece of acting. Not only did she project her emotion out to the audience, but not even a fleeting facial expression was out of character. Most of the cast might take a lesson from Miss Bouchard and realize that there's more to acting than just vocal projection and good lungs.

In the second place, those with minor roles—Lynn Hatch, Dick Newdick, Jerry Matus, and Elaine Smart—gave excellent performances. Many felt that, in this play, the minors became the majors. Regardless of opinion, it was the best supporting cast I've ever seen.

Newcomers Show Talent

The newcomers to the Masque stage—Frances Willett, Donn Walters, and Sidney Cronsburg—showed talent. Whether they over-acted is still dis-

Annual Yuletide Vespers Scheduled For Sunday; To Feature 110 Voices

Traditional Program Has Become A Major Event In University Year

A five-piece brass ensemble will sound the opening of the Christmas Vespers in Alumni Memorial Gymnasium next Sunday afternoon with Bach's choral prelude "Vom Himmel Hoch, Da Komm' Ich Her."

Traditional for many years here at the University the program of choral numbers, congregational singing, and orchestral pieces will begin at 4:15 p.m.

Following the chanting of the antiphon, Shaw's "Fanfare for Christmas," the 110 robed, candle-bearing singers of the University Glee Club will be joined by the congregation and the University Orchestra in the processional singing of "Adeste Fideles."

Major Event

Open to the public, this yuletide service has become one of the major events of the University calendar year.

The Prophecy and the Christmas Story will be read by William Macfarlan. The orchestra will be led by Stanley Cayting. Prof. Lewis H. Niven, head of the music department, will lead the brass ensemble and the congregational singing; James G. Selwood, music instructor, will lead the glee club.

The annual vespers are sponsored jointly by the University Assembly Committee and the music department. This year, Prof. Henry Hawley, of the economics department and a member of the Assembly Committee, heads the committee on arrangements.

Committee On Arrangements

Serving with Professor Hawley are Professor Niven; the Rev. Charles E. O'Connor, director of the Student Religious Association; Lois Hunter, student member of the Assembly Committee; and Harold Harmon, president of Mu Alpha Epsilon, honorary music fraternity.

Six dozen evergreen trees and a truckload of boughs will be used to form the setting, according to Prof. Roger Clapp, of the horticulture department, in charge of decorations.

A capacity crowd is expected for the Vespers which will not be recorded and broadcast this year as was done last year. The complete program follows:

Audience Packs Memorial Gym To Hear Tenor

By BILL ROBERTSON

More than two thousand students and outsiders listened to the greatest Wagnerian tenor in the world in the Memorial gym last Tuesday night. Accompanied by George Roth, Lauritz Melchior, star of stage, screen, and radio, thrilled his audience with selections varying from Wagner to Rodgers and Hammerstein.

Dressed in a black silk lounging jacket, Melchior received reporters in his Penobscot Exchange hotel suite Tuesday morning. Undaunted by the heavy rains, through which he flew to Bangor the night before, his first question was: "Where can I buy two lobsters?" The Maine delicacies were for his wife, Maria, who stayed in New York because of the weather.

No Outlet For Talent

Although Melchior does not consider teaching, calling the profession "much too rough," he is extremely interested in the future role of classical music in the United States. Calling attention to the crowded American schools of music, he added that we must do more for New World art. "Many young people have the talent and ambition to become great singers, but too few have the financial means

Class Election Plan Set For Operation

The Elections Committee of the General Senate has announced that preparations have been completed for the holding of Class Officer Elections.

Al Pease, chairman of the committee, reports that the petition system, which was successfully introduced last year, will be used again.

Official nominating petitions may be obtained at the office of the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men at 11:30 a.m., Friday, Dec. 8. Deadline for the return of the petitions to either of these offices, with 50 student signatures, will be 11:35 a.m., Friday, Dec. 15. Printed regulations governing circulation will be given out with each petition.

Final elections for the class officers will be held Jan. 10 in the Louis Oakes Room, Library.

Assisting Pease on the Elections Committee are Brad Shaw, John Hall, and Bill Russell.

Campus Pool Draws Fifty Applicants For Rides

A glance at the Campus "ride pool" sheet Tuesday revealed that about 50 persons have already signed their names. This sheet is posted on the bulletin board in the Bookstore.

In addition to Maine, seven other states as well as Washington, D. C., and New Brunswick are represented by the ride-seekers. More names are expected as the holiday vacation approaches.

It has also been announced by Bill Heyne that a supplement to the Campus car pool is being set up for those persons wanting rides to New Jersey. The object of this plan is to establish permanent rides for vacation and special week-end trips throughout the year. Anyone who travels to New Jersey, even though he may have a full car for the Christmas recess, should contact one of the committee in order that a master sheet can be completed. Those on the committee are Bill Heyne of Phi Kap, Vin Heck of S.A.E., and Joe Zellner of Sigma Chi.

The list of those wanting rides for the Christmas holidays is as follows:

Cadet Of Week Honors Awarded To Two Men

Charles H. Goodwin, F Company, and Richard Cutting, D Company, received "Cadet of the week" honors at the regular drill periods last Monday. Col. Leslie Staub said that this was the first time such a choice had been made in the battalions, and that cadets will be named regularly.

Chosen for "outstanding appearance and conduct in drill," the cadets will each receive six merits, the equivalent of three grade points.

Naturalist Will Speak In Louis Oakes Room

Wibur Doudna, park naturalist at Acadia National Park, will speak Dec. 14, at 8 p.m. in the Louis Oakes room, library.

The talk will be sponsored through the combined efforts of the Maine Outing club and the Forestry club. The public is invited to attend. Peter Mount and Gordon Reade are in charge of arrangements.

There was really some excitement on campus last week end, with most of the fraternities having their annual fall houseparties.

Best of all was the clamor among the Freshman girls....most of them had "never been to a houseparty before, and I'm so excited."

How Now, Brown Cow

We note in passing that three University females, Lelia, Arabelle, and Prudence, all Holsteins, recently gained admittance to a select circle. They were admitted to membership in the 100,000 Pound club of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Lelia alone, we are told, in 11 lactation periods has made 158,912 pounds of milk and 5,030 pounds of butterfat. Translated into present-day milk and butter prices this is truly a stream of gold.

If Lelia had the receipts from her butter-and-milk sales she could enjoy a standard of living well beyond that of ordinary Holsteins. This seems to be an argument, either for or against, the socio-economic theory that the means of production should be owned by the producing laborer.

We'll take Labor's side this week, because we've heard a good story to support it.

Up by Deering Lake, near the Canadian border, there lives a farmer who had been exploiting a cow named Bess. Bess wasn't much to look at, but she "made" 16 quarts of milk a day.

One morning this fall the farmer went out with his pail, but Bess saw him coming and she jumped into the lake and swam across. The following afternoon the farmer borrowed a boat and rowed across the lake where he again approached his swollen cow. But Bess would have none of it. She jumped back into the lake and swam for home, the farmer following in the boat. But poor Bess foundered and sank in the middle of the lake.

Receiving condolences from his neighbors the farmer shook his head sadly and said: "I don't care so much about the cow . . . I can get another cow . . . but when Bess went down she took 32 quarts of milk with her!"

We're proud of Lelia, and we're proud to count her among the University's real producers. But the humanities are so important with us that we want her to know that we love her first for her pastoral significance and then for her milk production.

Good luck, Lelia.

Children Seen—Not Heard

There is, we think, more than meets the eye in last week's Administration brushoff of the Christmas vacation date-change petition. The committee's letter to Senate president Dwight Demeritt read like a report of a decision that had been a foregone conclusion from the start.

We were disappointed, not because the decision was necessarily the wrong one on the face of things. None of the reasons cited impressed us particularly, but that's not to say they may not have been perfectly valid. What did discourage us was the fact that the administration didn't appear much interested in helping boost the prestige of the Senate. Apparently, that factor—which to our mind should have been the decisive one—was totally ignored.

Fire And Brimstone

By AL MERSKY

Be careful, you of the frilly, long-curved, sweet-dispositioned, and supposedly weaker sex. We of the brawn and muscle brigade are beginning to catch on to your wiles and guiles. Your cute, camouflaged traps are being exposed, and your lures and allures are now common knowledge.

The latest of the male martyrs to delve into the cause of mankind's fall—women—is the renowned columnist-reporter-author-wit-thinker-philosopher, Robert Ruark. In a recent series of Esquire articles, this noble individual took it upon his shoulders to inform his fellow-men of the enemy's battle tactics.

All campus men who have ever been deceived by a dimpled cheek or a well-turned ankle, should locate, read, memorize, and swear by the facts which the right honorable Ruark has brought to light.

Members of the hairy-chested species have received the word on the clinging whine breed.

We all realize that modern women are little more than "engineering projects" built to enhance and protect and control their more salient abutments and designed to appear as something they are not.

As learned Robert phrases it, "basic woman seems merely an angular hat-rack festooned and smothered and cluttered with all kinds of gimmicks and gadgets."

It's public copy that every night before they go to bed, these creatures who are fattened on mushy movies, pulp novels, soap operas and cosmetic ads, howl up the universal prayer of "Viva the whalebone and elastic industries!"

The reason why so many of our male-female relationships hit the rocks today is the lady's pair of rose-colored glasses through which she mistakenly views herself as a "fairy queen" to be worshipped as a commodity only slightly baser than the angels.

Beware, thou creature-formed-from-rib! The day of reckoning is at hand.

Fishes Of Maine

By BOB WILSON

The Campus does not often review books. But this book is different. In the first place this book could easily fill a well-grown demand among sportsmen in Maine. In the second place you can't get a copy of it. This makes it an unusual book.

Dr. W. Harry Everhart, assistant professor of zoology here, and fishery biologist for the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, prepared the book. And a fine job he made of it.

It is an attractive, well organized, cleverly simplified, illustrated booklet on fishes found in fresh water streams and lakes of Maine. Together with readable spawning, feeding, and location data, the treatise uses an identification key system that is simplicity itself to use.

This book would be an invaluable guide to sportsmen for whom it was obviously intended. At long last, fishermen could have a common ground for those long, and at present futile, arguments about the classification and habits of fishes. But they can't get a copy of it.

This is the peculiar angle. On the basis of the book, published in 1950, Dr. Everhart recently received national recognition in the form of an "award of merit" from the National Association of Conservation, Education, and Publicity, for his "outstanding service to conservation as author of a book on fishes."

The Department of Inland Fisheries and Game printed the book. But requests to the Department for a copy brings only a letter that the book is being held for consideration as a high-school textbook.

There is one copy of "Fishes of Maine" at the Library; but if you want a personal copy (and you will if you're a fisherman), your best bet, at present, is to see that your kid sister or kid brother enrolls in an ichthyology course in high school.

Mail Bag

A Muted Voice

To the Editor: Last week the Campus ran on its front page a story which caused no little consternation among a number of students. The "Yule Recess Date Petition Killed At Top" seemed to indicate that the authorities missed an opportunity to smooth out the "administration vs. students" relationship.

The fact that approximately 2000 students, more than half the student body, signed the petition should have given the higher echelons a hint that the proposal wasn't a crack pot whim.

Most students felt, I think, that the refusal sounded curt and a little unnecessary. There was considerable speculation as to how much difference it would make in the calendar if the recess date were changed. It seemed a simple matter, and if students didn't understand the difficulties involved, perhaps it might have been wise to explain, rather than make such a statement as "short change notices should not be made in the calendar except in case of college-wide emergency."

The notion that faculty members cannot change travel reservations for one day bothered some. Just how many such changes would be involved?

At the time the change was proposed there was ample time to change plans if any doubt existed.

It seems to me that a weak argument was presented for the refusal of a move which would have been definitely in the interests of safety. The change was proposed so that students would not have to travel crowded highways during the holiday. It makes us wonder, when our daily papers confront us with lists of automobile casualties, if the authorities are sincerely concerned about the students' welfare.

This wasn't the elimination of senior finals. It was simple in comparison and might have given the senate some much-needed prestige.

DICK SPRAGUE

Take Back Your Samba

I am now an expert contortionist and acrobat endowed with an uncanny sense of detecting wild South African Swahili five-dance rhythms. Thank you, University of Maine.

Ever since my arrival, being an avid dance fan, I have tried to endure the cannibal-like ensembles which students have been participating in at the Maine gym. I have come to one sad conclusion, that jazz fans and jive have taken a strong hold on our naive enrollment.

I should like to propose a quiet evening of waltzes and invite these hep cats for a real relaxing dance after a tired day at the desk. Perhaps they would realize their foolish plight and come to their senses. How about it, Waltz fans?

NO NAME

Campus policy is to consign unsigned letters to the waste-basket. Modesty is usually admirable, but when our correspondents and critics are so self-effacing that they are unwilling to affix their real names to letters, the editors feel unwilling to assume responsibility for their publication. We have made an exception in the case of the letter above because it doesn't seem to be of the "crank" type, in the strictest sense of the word. There will, however, be no further exceptions. We will withhold correspondents' names on request, provided there is a good reason for such an omission. But all letters must be signed.

First Nighters Split Opinion On Masque Play

puted among the front row, orchestra and the back row, balcony.

Bob Chase was more than adequate. Dewaine Gedney, reputed to be the best find of the Masque this season, was also good although a little stiff. Keep your eye on Marjorie Cross who played the part of Birdie. Although a little weak on interpretation this time, Miss Cross shows great potentialities.

George Morse, as the scene designer, deserves a lot of credit.

Vividness Lacking

More varied approaches to interpretation, among the cast, might have resulted in a certain vividness that the play lacked.

This reviewer feels, however, that the trouble was in the script. If the Masque wanted to do a play by Lillian Hellman, why not one of her more acclaimed works. A script that calls for little contrast among its characters as far as vocal presentation goes loses variety which is still the spice of life—and the theatre.

Light And Heavy

When asked who was ready to take his place as the Number one Wagnerian tenor, he stated bluntly that there were none in the musical field "ripe enough." He added that many light tenors could sing Lohengrin, but none were heavy enough for Wagner.

Mr. Melchior left Bangor Wednesday morning to return to New York and various concerts. On Dec. 24 he is scheduled to appear as Santa Claus on Ed Sullivan's TV show. In April he will start work on his next motion picture, "Of My Life," in which he will play the role of Lauritz Melchior.

GAS TURBINE locomotive, first in U.S., is now on test. It's propelled by power unit akin to that used in aircraft jet engines.

REMOTE-CONTROL WIRING—new low-cost system controls lights from many points, or from master switch.

These new G-E developments are creating exciting new opportunities for G-E men

The gas turbine, drawing power from red-hot gases, is being applied by General Electric to the propulsion of locomotives, ships, and planes, and to the generation of electricity. More than 350 G-E engineers, physicists, and other specialists, assigned to this work, are in on the ground floor of a development that promises to revolutionize the production of power.

It's a similar story for the specialists working today in the development of G-E silicones, and for those who are helping to win a place for G-E remote-control wiring.

New developments like these are opening up new opportunities at General Electric, giving more college graduates the chance of finding exciting, satisfying work.

By placing prime importance on the development of talent and skill, by providing incentives for creative minds, General Electric keeps ahead in electrical research, engineering, and manufacturing.

WORO Seeks Actors, Scripts

Mrs. Phyllis Williamson, faculty advisor to campus radio station WORO, announced this week that students interested in working for the station should contact her immediately in her office at 240 Stevens.

WORO's staffs are already at work in preparation for the station's six-day-a-week broadcasting schedule. The station will be on the air 5-8 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Programming director Lenny Silver is arranging air time for those organizations or individuals who are planning to have their own programs when the station is in operation.

Station manager Al Weymouth reports that there is still room for technical men, announcers, actors and actresses, directors, scriptwriters and others on the various staffs.

Construction of the station's transmitter is nearing completion. Actual broadcasting will take place in the very near future, according to the WORO staff heads.

Bear Facts

BY BILL LOUBIER

The intramural season, now in full swing, has brought about the same age-old question: When are we going to have decent officiating at our basketball games?

This apparently simple question appears to have a simple solution, but such is not the case. The complaint has skyrocketed to a complicated situation, as it does every year. A host of suggestions and solutions have been proposed. None of them could bring about a satisfactory change, however.

Battling it out, we have on our right, the intramural players and on the left, the Physical Education department which has found no solution to the problem, as yet.

The players start out with the big question: Why not set up a test which all officiating aspirants must pass before working on the court?

This sounds logical enough, but it is not a new proposal. It has been tried in the past with poor results. Said Hal Woodbury, Assistant Professor of Physical Education, "We tried this a few years back with about 60 candidates—four of them passed. It would be quite impossible to run a 250-game intramural basketball system with only four officials."

The intramural players then lead off with another question: How about having the Physical Education majors, who are learning to officiate, take over the chores? They contend that perhaps, since some of these students hope in the future to roam the hoop courts with a whistle, intramural play could afford them a golden opportunity to gain experience.

At the present time there are about five Physical Education majors who are handling the ball games along with the others. "To increase this number by coercion is impossible," says Woodbury. "One can't force students after class hours to take time out from their studies and work on the court. We haven't got the authority."

Players and fans then come up with what appears to be the answer. Why not pay the officials more, thus creating a greater incentive for the jobs? They suggest that either one could raise the qualification fees, which now stand at $5 for the dorms and $10 for fraternities, or else cut down on the trophy and medal money and sink the difference into pay for the officials.

The University's maximum wage law puts the damper on this suggestion. It specifies that all wages paid to students for work done shall be 60¢ an hour. Therefore, all talk of raise in pay for the striped-suit boys is thrown out the window.

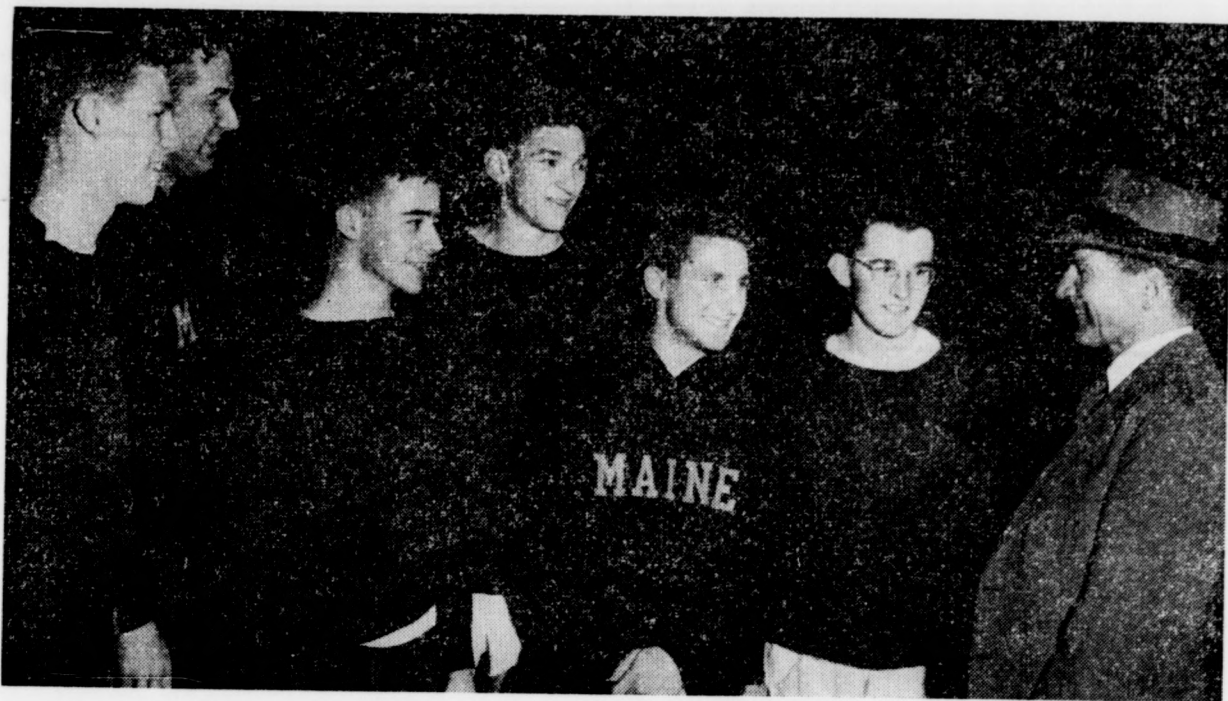

The students and the Physical Education department are both acutely aware of the situation but neither can offer a good solution.

Every leading book on the subject of intramural play treats this situation as the biggest problem but offers no adequate solution.

At present two officials work each basketball game as well as touch football and softball games. Besides this, one is needed at the volleyball games. The entrance fees just about cover what is paid to the officials along with the medals awarded the winners.

Whistle tooters will be whistle tooters and none of them escape criticism, even the bigger boys who roam the high school and college courts.

Bates Downs Maine In State Series Opener

Gathering around the Maine track coach, Chet Jenkins, are a group of lettermen with a number of hopefuls who are listening to some sound advice in preparation for their indoor season. The Maine team is out to better an unbeaten record of 20 wins in a row. The team is trying to preserve another undefeated season—something which they have enjoyed since 1946. Left to right are: Ken Lincoln, Floyd Milbank, Bob Stevens, Barney McLaughlin, Chet Tripp, Ed Perry, and coach Chet Jenkins. Practice has been going on regularly in the field house.

No JV Football Games Next Fall

Jenkinsmen Start Practice; Team Defends 20-Game Streak

According to an announcement of the University Athletic Board, there will be no scheduled games for the Junior Varsity football team next season.

The decision resulted from a shortage of men on the squad this year and an expected decreased enrollment for 1951-52.

The JV team will be attached to the varsity squad and will scrimmage against them. They will also play a few games with the Frosh club.

Director of Athletics Dean Wieman emphasized, however, that all candidates who are interested in football should still tryout for the Junior Varsity team.

Baseball coach Milo Lude has announced that all baseball players interested in competing for varsity posts this coming season should attend a meeting in the ROTC lecture room on Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m.

The Maine mentor said that pitchers and catchers will start working out about Jan. 18.

Coach Chester Jenkins, working again with his indoor track squad, hopes that the season can be "as successful as our unbeaten record of last year."

The indoor squad has a string of 20 straight victories which it will try to extend when the team meets another five opponents this year.

"The team reached its peak in the Springfield meet last year," commented Jenkins. The highlight of that meet was John Wallace's victory in the mile run.

The squad has not lost an indoor meet since 1946. This year it faces New Hampshire, Northeastern University, Springfield, and Boston University in dual meets along with the BAA relay meet at Boston.

Returning to this year's team are nine lettermen who will fill in on almost every position. They are Floyd Milbank, heaving the shot; Dick Gordon, the hammer and discus; John Wathan, running the half mile; Bill McLeod, on the pole vault; John Bowler, the quarter mile; Don Green on the dashes; Dick LeClair, on the hurdles; Malcolm Osborn, running the mile; and Dick Dow, the two-mile.

Ski Patrol Outlines Plans For The Year

The Maine Ski Patrol held its first meeting of the year Thursday. Plans for the year were made and the program was outlined to new members.

Meetings will be held every Tuesday at 7 p.m. at 22 Wingate Hall. The standard first aid course will be taught with Norman Moulton as instructor. Samuel Allen is patrol leader.

Horace Quick, a former instructor of U. S. army ski troops, will give special instruction on the ski slope during the winter.

Women's Sports

BY SALLY ARSENAULT

At the annual WAA Field Hockey banquet held last Monday evening, toastmistress Bertha Clark introduced Ina Van Hee, exchange student from Holland, who spoke on field hockey and other sports of her home country. She pointed out that girls there have about the same track rules but play a different game of basketball. Their hockey is played by mixed teams and is a faster and rougher game.

There are differences in the rules for hockey and "the amount of skill required is greater in Holland," said Miss Van Hee.

Announcements of awards and honorary All-Maine and All-Maine Reserve Hockey teams were given by Mary Belle Tufts, WAA president. The All-Maine Team is: Jane Ingraham, CF; Rena Ratte, RI; Helen Strong, LI; Lee Ambrose, LW; Barbara Jackson, RW; Rita Conti, RFB; Margo McCarthy, RHB; Rena Thorn-dike, G; Isabelle Stearns, LFB; Ruth Johnson, CHB; and Ina Van Hee, LHB.

Don Favor, class of '34, competed in the Olympics in Germany during the summer of '36 and placed sixth in the hammer throw.

Pale Blue Eyes First Victory Of State Series

BY BILL MATSON

Coach Rome Rankin's forces will travel to Bowdoin tomorrow night in their second State Series encounter of the year. Last night, the Bowdoin Polar Bear was an upset victor over the Colby Mule by a score of 56-47.

The Bears emerged from their opener with Bates last night on the short end of a 56-53 score.

Saturday night, the Pale Blue will play host to the Vermont Catamount in the first Yankee Conference game of the season.

In last night's encounter, "The Men of Rome" caught fire too late to close the gap between them and the Bates Bobcat, and lost 56-53. The Bears trailed 26-17, after a sluggish first half, but started to gain momentum in the second half. With three minutes left to go, the 12-point margin was cut down to three points, but a foul shot and two baskets by Bates pushed them ahead again by an 8-point margin, 56-48. Sophomore Woody Carville countered with five straight points, but it was not enough. Bates successfully froze the ball for the remaining forty-five seconds and clinched a three-point victory.

Fast Pace

The game opened at a fast pace after a Quimby foul shot for Bates. Maine scored five quick points on Jack Christie's foul shot and two baskets by Gene Lovely, followed by Larry Mahaney's two pointer. This ran the score up to 7-1. Carpenter tossed in three straight baskets with two foul shots to tie the game at 9-9.

From that point on, Maine lost ground steadily. Bates, paced by Larry Quimby and substitute Ralph Perry, countered repeatedly, and halftime saw the Bears behind nine points, 26-17. The Bears tried hard, but missed their shots, and saw the gap widen until Bates led 36-23, their longest lead of the game.

For Bates, Bob Carpenter was the standout. The smooth working forward displayed excellent shooting by dropping in 19 points. Glen Collins, a deceptive guard, also contributed to the Bobcat cause with his spot shooting. Both he and Larry Quimby, the tall 6'6" center, dumped in 13 points.

For Maine Jack Christie was outstanding with 16 points, most of them set shots from outside. The versatile Maine guard scored 13 of his 16 tallies in the second half. Larry Mahaney, Rankin's only returning letterman, played a good floor game while scoring 12 points. Carville of Maine, who saw limited action, counted eight times.

Frosh Lose

In a preliminary contest the middies of Maine Maritime Academy successfully scuttled the Maine Freshmen 62-34, last night as the Frosh opened its season in the preliminary to the varsity game.

The Middies displayed a fast breaking offense that was stymied at first by the Frosh, but really got rolling during the second half. They scored 34 points to the yearlings' 15 in that period.

Paced by Molke and Vickery, who both tossed in twelve points, the Maritime five completely dominated play throughout the contest. The Middies led in all quarters. In the first the score was 15-8, halftime 28-19, in the third period 47-25.

Step Up Initiations

Captain Swanson said it has been necessary to step up initiation ceremonies so that pledges can take part in the ceremonies at the Ball tomorrow night. Informal initiations were held for pledges last Thursday night after the regular Scabbard & Blade meeting.

Guards with swords stood at attention outside the doors of Estabrooke, Colvin, Balentine, and the Elms. Tree-borne sentries called out their watches with monotonous precision. Battalion commander, Dick Stillings, marched singing troops around campus.

Pledges Sing

As a climax, a chorus of pledges made an unscheduled debut at Carnegie Hall. They sang "America" through twice under the direction of Leroy Dymont.

Other pledge duties included the selling of tickets in Carnegie and the Bookstore this week.

Captain Swanson urged that dance escorts wear their service uniforms, rather than tuxedos, to the Ball.

The dance starts at 9 p.m. and lasts until 1 a.m. Two o'clock permissions have been granted female dormitory residents.

Dr. Hauck Speaks To Aid Polio Fund

Dr. Arthur A. Hauck and four University of Maine students were luncheon guests at the State of Maine pre-campaign meeting of the National Foundation For Infantile Paralysis, held Dec. 4 in Bangor at the Penobscot Exchange Hotel.

Dr. Hauck, a former State Chairman of the March of Dimes organization, was introduced by Brigadier General George M. Carter and spoke briefly regarding the importance of the National Foundation.

Those students attending were Richard Dennison, Joanne Mayo, Lois Welton, and Jo Cunningham.

This state-wide meeting was attended by a large group from all 16 Maine counties, including leaders in government, public health, educational, hospital, and business fields.
