Owing to the permanent increase made by another primary school (Miss Smith's), and a rural school (Grover precinct), the appropriation for the year—being the same as in 1897—was insufficient to have the usual length of school. When the appropriations were exhausted the schools were stopped in accordance with the vote of the Board. With the present number of schools additional appropriations seem necessary. Attention was called to this last year but without avail.

In repairs it was thought best to put in a new wall at Low's Bridge to preserve the house if other buildings were neglected. This was done thoroughly and well, at an expense of $127.20. With the insurance bill this, with the usual repairs, exhausted the appropriation.

For the ensuing year there is great need of appropriations sufficient to paint all the buildings, and do some interior work in the rooms under the hall, and at No. Guilford and Brown school-houses. New desks are needed in several houses also. A working room for the science classes was much needed, and Mr. Parsons succeeded in raising about 1-2 enough money for the purpose by subscriptions and little entertainments by the scholars. Of the balance a part was paid from the repair fund of the schools, and the balance to be paid the ensuing year. This was the understanding with the parties who furnished the labor and materials. The room is a fine addition to the working of the school, and much credit is due the principal and scholars for their efforts for the same. We would advocate a new foundation under the houses at Brown's district and the Grover district. Also considerable work is necessary to make the Primary rooms suitable for good work as referred to above.

The appearance of whooping cough in the schools for a time created some alarm, but a sharp and prompt quarantine stamped it well out with but little loss of time from any scholars.

The appearance of the grippe in December and January was followed by a general attack upon teachers and pupils so that the last weeks of the winter terms were much broken in point of attendance.

In this connection the question of heating the school-houses becomes of much importance, and we recommend that such appropriations be made that each house may be as well protected from the effects of inclement weather as is possible. From cold and wet feet come most of the ills of scholars.

We recommend the following appropriations :

Support of Common Schools,	$2,500 00
Repairs and Insurance,	600 00
Text-books,	500 00
Supplies and Appliances,	150 00
Free High School,	500 00

DAVID PEARSON,

Report of Superintendent.

As the last two reports—1897 and 1898—were quite lengthy and considered in detail our schools and their conditions, I will not repeat the arguments used therein, but confine this report briefly to a review of the year's work, and the needs that call our attention.

To my mind this is the most important of the departments in any town or city. The neglect of roads for one year may be repaired the next; a shortness of funds one year in the poor department may be remedied by additional appropriation the next; appropriations for those institutions that make a community better to live in, if neglected one year will not cause such deterioration but that attention the next year will remedy the ills resulting from the neglect,—but a child's mind, a child's soul, a child's mental vision, a child's outlook on life—once neglected, the want—the defect—can never, never be made good.

Therefore if you neglect the appropriations and the attention that the children in your community need, for but one year only, any future action, however well-meant, will not redeem the year that is lost.

No department for which a town raises money brings that fruit of reward or dissatisfaction as the department of schools and school needs.

I asked last year for certain appropriations. For some reason (to me unknown) my judgment was questioned, and the appropriations voted were less than absolute necessity required. For the first time in 10 years that I have had charge of the schools of this town, the appropriations that I urged as right and necessary, were opposed and lower ones voted.

In former years I have vigorously advocated the voting of good appropriations for schools, but last year when these were opposed, I determined to say nothing,—let the town vote whatever it would,—if it were nothing, without urging a different result, and then expend the same as judiciously as I could, and let the deficit fall on the children in the way of closed school-houses, when the money was expended. If you had rather your children would be out of the schools and idling about the streets, why, vote small school appropriations, and reap a harvest of idleness. Figs do not grow from a sowing of thorns, nor do grapes spring from the thistle-seed. The wages of our teachers could be reduced and old text-books used longer. But while I am in this position, do not expect me to lower our standard by employing inefficient teachers, and putting into the pupil's hand a text-book that his ancestors used. The rule that "what was good enough for the parent is good enough for the child" is changed as regards the school, in these latter days. For $10 you can get one week of excellent instruction from a first-grade conscientious teacher. For the same money you can get two weeks of poor instruction from a deficient, indifferent teacher. The one leaves the pupil alert, wide-awake, interested and inspired; the other leaves him dulled, indolent, indifferent and discouraged. The one forms a foundation for a good, bright American citizen; the other breeds a dissolute, shambling apology for civilization. If times are hard let us make them better by rearing smarter, keener men and women; if crops of the field yield poorly let us offset them with an abundant harvest of "cunning hands and cultured brains."

This year has been short in matter of weeks. The appropriations being less, made less weeks, but the work for the year has been up to the high standard of the past. Nine bright young students were graduated from the High School in May. The classes in the lower grades were much larger, and as they were advanced one grade throughout, the rooms were well filled. Mr. Ross, after five years of the best results, left us, to enter a wider and more profitable field. It is with the keenest pleasure that I review the five years with him and mark his sturdy manhood, his kind, and generous nature, and his great interest in the young of this town. Between him and me, either as Supt. and teacher, or as citizen and citizen, no jar, no discord, no friction, no trouble arose. I think all the teachers in the other schools can say the same. He was a gentleman, a student, a teacher, a man. A better opening invited him, and while I was loath to bid him good-by I could wish him God-speed with all my heart. He will do good work in his present position, and leave his individuality and memory well stamped on more than one student-mind in this vicinity. Mr. W. S. Parsons, succeeded him as principal. At the end of the winter term he was obliged to resign from over-work. Geo. W. Snow, an experienced teacher, was engaged, and at this time the prospect of good work seems in line to be realized, and carried forward.

Miss Sanger after two years of excellent work with us was called to a better position, and while it was with much regret that I parted with her services, yet I feel that I was very fortunate in finding as able an instructor to take the assistantcy as Miss Clary. Miss Clary's educational advantages have been of the best, and her work with us has combined the elements of good training, with judicious knowledge in teaching. Her efforts have been rewarded with the highest appreciation and good-will of her pupils, and satisfaction from myself. It is my hope that she remain with our schools.

The other village teachers remain with us. As to their work I can only repeat my commendation of past years, and add words of continued satisfaction and success. It is with pleasure that I find that Gullford teachers are regarded as of no mean type. They stand for thoroughness, advanced ideas, conscientiousness, zeal and progressive christianity. They believe in expansion first and last, but it is the expansion of a child's life and light, with an expanded American civilization rather than expansion of area of land, with a dwarfed citizenship.

Does it seem possible that Miss Briggs has been in our schools for 10 years? Yet so it is! And no more untiring efforts were ever put forth—in my opinion—by a teacher, than this lady has given the pupils of this town. Not alone have her labors been confined to the scholars of her school, but her interest and care has extended to each pupil, and to each teacher, with whom she has mingled. Miss Briggs is the pioneer teacher in our school system development, and I feel called to mention specially her long term of service.

In the rural schools good work has been done. The schools have each been larger than for some years. At the Grover school, North Gullford, Brown, and Centre, excellent results followed the instruction. At Low's Bridge, Mrs. Mae McCausland did some of the best rural school work with which I have ever come in contact. The attendance showed the great interest that prevailed, and the work was of such nature that this teacher should be retained in this town, whoever is in charge of our schools in the future.

We were unfortunate in having the grippe invade our schools during the winter term. Despite the care and prudence of the teachers this distemper so interfered with the school work that in some places I found it advisable to shorten the term as the attendance ran down to nearly nothing, and the attention and interest became distracted, without fault of the teachers. In those cases where disease keeps a pupil from his work and school, I would suggest that the parent endeavor to keep his mind still intent on his studies by working a little while he is at home, and at the proper time send him to school again. with the determination to recover lost ground. If a child is allowed to leave the school-room in case of a little indisposition, and while at home do nothing in his studies, and after he is able to again return to his work be allowed the privilege of idling about home for a time, his interest is sadly abated, and he will take up his studies with reluctance, and often have to fall behind into a lower class through the little neglect thus occasioned.

I wish to call attention to the rare cases of truancy the past few years, and to say that I have noticed a slight inclination to get back to old tricks the past term or two. And I will call special attention of parents and ask that you personally know that your scholars attend school regularly and timely. Don't keep a boy out to drive team one day and send him to school the next. He will get his books and his farming mixed up so that he wont know where the furrow leaves off and the rule of three begins. Work him in work-time and allow him his whole attention to devote to his studies in school time. It is poor policy to skip one or two feeds per day for your horses if you expect good draught from them, and the same holds good with the boy or girl who skips a day or two each week from the school-room. Attention to the subject in hand is what counts for success. Let me urge you to cultivate a close acquaintance with your child's work in the school-room. Know what he does, the amount and quality of his work, encourage him by attention to his studies, and an occasional visit to his school-room. Commend him for his success, and disapprove him in his shortcomings. Let him know that you are his monitor, and also his well-wisher. Go to the school-rooms, your interest encourages the teacher, and revives your own interest. The teacher will deeply appreciate the effort, and you will gain something of value at every visit. Your boy or girl may be the one who is to reflect credit upon his family, and upon his town. Look well to your stewardship. Develop your schools and you develop yourselves, your children, your town, your county, your state. Let us reason together that the greatest good may be wrought in our little sphere, all petty spite and petty jealousy will hide far, far away, and that era of good-feeling and good-manhood, which is devoutly to be wished, prevail.

J. S. WILLIAMS.

Board of Health.

We submit the following report. The following cases of contagious diseases have been reported during the past year. Typhoid fever, three cases, no deaths; scarlet fever, three cases, no deaths. But few nuisances have been reported the past year, we find the most trouble with sink drains and water closets and we urge better care taken of same. Free vaccination has been provided twice during the past year and 36 persons were vaccinated.
