For Stamp Collectors.......

The matter of defense savings bonds is a rather progressive one, at present, and a lot of interesting information pertaining thereto is now coming to light. In some instances, the public is not aware that a little insight on the situation may better enable you to arrange your own defense savings bonds. The Mack Service, a branch of the United States Post Office Department, Treasury Division, Staff, Treasury Department, Augusta, says: “Unrepealable demands for defense savings bonds, in our opinion, is having a great effect on our history on transportation facilities due to troop movement. Subscriptions for bonds, and renewal of subscriptions to inland areas, have caused temporary shortages in $25, $50 and $100 denomination Series E bonds.”

We are told that the Bureau of Printing and Engraving is under such a strain now, that orders a day, seven days a week.
Five million new bonds are being shipped weekly, the commence-tent date.

Stamp albums in ten, twenty-five, and fifty-cent denominations are reportedly the rage right now, in order for 60,000,000 albums currently in production. Not only that, but 2,900,000 albums have just been delivered to two distributing centers, Washington and New York.

That’s a kick of a lot, and we defy anyone to even

Students Don't Turn Radical in College
Four Year Survey Shows Only a Slight Increase in Liberalism

By Associated Colleage Press

Students do not "turn radical" in the academic years spent in college, a new study shows. While there is no radical change among the liberal-conservative leadership in the student bodies of various colleges, there is still a slight increase in liberalism as the students enter the world of adult life. A four-year survey released today by Prof. Bennington College in the state of Vermont shows that students do not change their political views during the period of approximately 10 college years, but continue along the same line of thought as in high school. This conclusion is based on the work of a group of experts who have studied the political leanings of students in a number of colleges and universities.

The survey, conducted by Prof. Theodore M. Newcomb, head of the psychology department at Bennington College, and his colleagues, is based on a study of 500 students who were enrolled in the college during the years 1935-1938. The students were divided into three groups: those who continued at Bennington, those who transferred to other schools, and those who did not continue in college.

The study showed that the majority of students who transferred to other schools did so because of financial problems or lack of interest in the college. Those who continued at Bennington showed a slight increase in liberalism, while those who transferred showed a decrease.

The average college student, according to the study, is conservative in his attitude toward social and political issues. However, there is a slight increase in liberalism as the students enter the world of adult life. This is due to the influence of the community and the wider world of adult life.

The study also showed that the majority of students who transferred to other schools did so because of financial problems or lack of interest in the college. Those who continued at Bennington showed a slight increase in liberalism, while those who transferred showed a decrease.
