German Propaganda Invaded America Says PM's Margolin

"German propaganda within and without the United States started immediately after the treaty of Versailles," declared Leo J. Margolin, PM editor who spoke to the students and faculty in the Little Theatre Monday on the topic, "The Role of Psychologic Warfare in Victory." The treaty was a blessing in disguise because it gave the Germans something to talk about, something that generated sympathy toward themselves. It all worked out in a pattern, and when Hitler came into power it shifted from low to high gear. America was actually invaded long before the war—not perhaps by armies in uniforms, but by subtle long range planners. Our short memories were taken advantage of by the Germans, and will be again unless we are on guard. The scapegoat of Anti-Semitism was a political weapon that was used in Europe and almost defeated the Allies, and it is possible that such methods will be tried again in the German fight of World War III. Psychological defeat can be almost as great as military defeat, and this is especially true during peace time.

One German officer who was taken prisoner told Margolin "America with its 252 national origins is a perfect set-up for conquest. It is simple to divide and conquer. We failed this time, but we're not going to fail again." Just because we won the war on the European battle front doesn't mean that the decision was in our favor. Because no matter how unpleasant it may be, we must face the fact that Germany won the biological war of Europe. By removing forty millions by murder, as well as on the battle fronts, the Germans have won and retained the biological balance of power.

Margolin's informal talk was highly emotional, and while it was factual to an extent he relied heavily on personal experience to hammer his points home. Unlike so many speakers on postwar problems, he did have solutions to offer. These solutions were not too definite—at least not definite enough to satisfy his collegiate audience, but he threw his ideas to the audience with the hope of stimulating though which might be provocative to action on the campus. By using polls and other methods of registering student opinion, an increased interest and understanding of all political problems will help broaden the average student who is usually interested in only "getting by."

'Lilies Of The Field' To Be Last Masque Show Of Year

The curtain will rise at 8:15 p.m. on John Hastings Turner's popular English comedy, "The Lilies of the Field," which the Masque will present as its last major show of the college year on Friday and Saturday evenings, June 8, 9, at the Little Theatre. Tickets for the show have been on sale in the bookstore and in the dormitories throughout the week.

Hershel L. Bricker will direct the three-act comedy, assisted by Jeanne Ross. Irma Miller is acting as stage manager of the show.

In charge of costumes for "The Lilies of the Field" is Mike White. Florence Sawyer is property manager, while Betty Lehman is manager of the backstage crew. Assisting on properties are Beverley Pitman and Lancy Carter.

"The Lilies of the Field," while it may be limited in its stage action, is far from limited in its humour and by-play. The entangling affairs of the Vicar's family are not lessened any by the techniques and tactics of his two intelligent but matrimonially eligible daughters. Cast as the two daughters are Cecil Pavey and Joan Greenwood. Both of these Masque members have participated in several Masque shows this year, both having had roles in the mystery-drama, Nine Girls.

Lee Davis is cast in the role of the English Vicar, and Lala Jones as his wife Ann. The role of Mrs. Rooke-Walter, energetic mother-in-law of the Vicar, will be played by Virginia Merchant, another veteran Masque-er. Al Dumais is cast as one of the two romantic leads, Bryan Ropes, while Roger Gould plays the part of Barnaby Haddon.

Pat Hutto will play the part of Lady Rocker, and Beth Clement is cast as Miss Flane, her inseparable companion. Completing the cast are Dick Pratt as Withers, and Irma Miller as Violet.

Tickets for "The Lilies of the Field" may still be obtained at the Bookstore, or from Pat Hutto, ticket manager for the production.

Summer Session Registration, June 13

Registration for students in the College of Arts and Sciences for the Summer Term, 1945, will be held on Wednesday, June 13. It is essential for administrative purposes that those students who plan to attend register on this date. Freshmen, and sophomores who have not selected a major, sign for appointment in the Dean's office not later than Tuesday, June 12; others, consult their major instructor.

Rev. C. H. Osborne To Speak Sunday

Reverend Clifford H. Osborne, pastor of the Pleasant Street Methodist Church in Waterville, will be guest preacher at the Sunday Worship Service in the Little Theatre June 10. A native of England, Mr. Osborne is a naval veteran of World War I. He has actively participated in numerous youth conferences and visited the University of Maine campus as a leader in the 1942 Embassy for Men. His significance as a college preacher is evidenced by the large Colby following in his Waterville pastorate.

The music for the service will be an anthem sung by the choir.

ROTC Rated High After Inspection By Colonel Smith

The annual ROTC inspection, which took place May 25, was the latest in a long series of inspections held here at the University of Maine. These inspections serve as an annual check on both the regular officers and the students, and for many years the unit has received an excellent rating. This year's rating has not yet been announced, but after the fine job done last Friday, the rating certainly will be good.

For the last few years the inspections have been a skeleton as compared to those of former years. In spite of the fact that the unit is small, a remarkably good job has been done by Colonel Alexander and his staff.

It is more of a job than the ordinary person realizes to take a group of students, many of whom know nothing about military science and tactics, and teach them to act like soldiers while the officers themselves do not possess the authority they would ordinarily have in the regular army. This staff here at the University of Maine has done a fine job this year, as was shown to its best advantage last Friday.

The inspection followed the usual course, beginning with individual inspection and ending with a dress review before the inspecting officer and the staff. Between these, several demonstrations were made, all by the Inconsequentialities...

Thoughts during a lecture: It certainly was wonderful to see a semblance of a return to house parties last week. Although they did not quite resemble them in spirit(s), they certainly did in name, and the week-end was quite a success...

We had a start towards a different way of life on campus a few weeks ago. To use a phrase from a "Letter to the Editor," it may be that we are beginning to emerge from an "Ivory Tower." If such proceedings continue, we may have a democratic way of life before we know it...

A great question has raised itself at South Estabrooke. Why does the knock which affected the radiators on the back part of the house now affect the front instead? A bevy of beauteous damsels has been stumped all term by this ponderous question. If anyone has a solution, please call 478 or 481...

Who said juniors and seniors couldn't live together? Haven't they been living together in Balentine for at least two years? Why the strange ratio of one class to another in any upperclass dorm? It seems to me that any girl old enough to be an upperclassman should have learned to get along with fellow women students. Perhaps the situation can be rectified in the future...

I hope you, the reader, will pardon this slight diversion, but my mind has reached the point where it needed a spring housecleaning. Now I feel better!!

Men's Senate Minutes Include Request For Action On Awards

The meeting was called to order by Vice President Hannemann, and it was moved, seconded, and carried that the minutes of the previous meeting not be read. Vice Pres. Hannemann explained that Pres. Smyth was ill and was unable to attend.

The secretary read a letter received from Mrs. Corbett, and it was moved, seconded, and carried that the letter be incorporated into the minutes of the meeting. The letter appears below:

166 College Road
Orono, Maine

Dear Mr. Holmes,

Will you please extend to the members of the Men's Student Senate my grateful thanks for the very wonderful memorial tribute paid to my late husband.

It fills me with pride and with courage to know "his boys," to whom he devoted his entire strength, so appreciated his many fine qualities and recognized and respected him as a real and understanding friend.

May the goals toward which he worked be an inspiration and challenge to each one of you.

Very sincerely,
Mabel C. Corbett
(Mrs. Lamert S. Corbett)

April 30, 1945

The secretary reported that the minutes of the previous meeting had been sent to Mr. Curtis with parts involving athletic awards underlined, but that no reply had as yet been received.

Vice President Hannemann appointed Kenneth Reed as representative of the Senate to see Mr. Curtis about the awards. Also it was resolved that the Men's Student Senate request that a meeting of the Athletic Board be called as soon as possible.

Vice Pres. Hannemann said that Mr. O'Connor had expressed thanks to the Senate for the manner in which the houseparties were conducted, and that Pres. Smyth had expressed thanks for the support of the Senate throughout the year.

The next business was plans for an organization to operate during the summer term. It was moved, seconded, and carried that the three members of the Senate who would be here during the summer act as a committee in capacity of the Senate with a representative of the entering freshmen. The committee is as follows: David Holmes, chairman, William Wilson, Roy McGee. It was resolved that this committee of three set the date for Senate elections next fall.

The Men's Student Senate expresses sincere thanks to Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Stewart for their assistance throughout the year, and to J. Robert Smyth, Jr., for his work as president of the Senate.

There being no further business, it was moved, seconded, and carried that the meeting be adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
David D. Holmes,
Sec., Men's Student Senate

MAINE ECHOES

Dear Mainiac—

Well, the big news of this week is the usual end-of-the-term shock—the finals schedule! Can you hear the groans way out there? Didn't realize that the time was getting so short till I looked up the other day and saw that thing staring me in the face. Oh, well, it's the last set for the year, anyway.

WAA had the last major banquet of the year last night. It seemed as though they were making hundreds of awards, but I guess there couldn't have been that many. The room only holds about two hundred.

The Masque is still breezing merrily along and is presenting the last full-length show of the year this week-end. It sounds as though it would be a good evening's entertainment. Personally, I'm going to have to see the play to have it proven to me that Cee and Jo can pass for twins.

The senior class parts for Class Day, the 23rd, are finally taken care of; and the kids can start work on them any time now. The gift situation won't be as bad as it has been in years past, anyway. The advantages of having a small class!

The populace of the University doesn't quite know whether to be glad that the warm weather is holding off or to be very put out about the whole thing. At least we aren't all having to study (?) out on the lawns while we're trying to get a little tan. Tan, what tan?

The Pops Concert, due next Friday night, is really taking shape now. All the groups have been spending hours (literally) rehearsing for the affair. All the Glee Club members are running around chanting, "Away, away, away."

Several Maine people have been around lately. Saw Tote Parsons, Dick Fuller, Phil Johnson, George Thompson, and Bob and Budge Paten. Phil and Barbie Stearns were married Tuesday—at long last, as Barbie says. They've been waiting months and have set the date two or three times.

Guess that's all for now. See you next week.

As ever,
Minnie Lou

ROTC Inspection - -

ROTC. Field stripping of the M1 rifle and extended order drill (battle formation drill) were but two of the more interesting ones. The University of Maine band, although not a military one, played throughout the inspection.

The inspection finished with a joint review of the ROTC and the ASTP by Colonel Smith and Colonel Alexander.

This year's inspection, in spite of the fact that the ROTC unit is small, was carried out successfully, and the unit will no doubt receive its usual excellent rating.

Pensive Pete

Just as every Briton displayed active interest in our elections last November, Americans are pricking up their ears to reports about the coming political test in Great Britain. Our interest probably will be rewarded; the number of candidates for seats in the House of Commons will soar above those chalked up in any recent election. Both the Conservatives and the Labor Party expect to put at least five hundred men in the field, and each party is boasting that by election time its ranks will swell to six hundred.

Recent polls in Britain show a marked swing to the left among the services. This means that Churchill's party has lost considerable hold on the younger generations; but there are still many service personnel for whom the word "Churchill" holds enough value to make them vote for the Conservatives. However, as there was some doubt, most experts felt that early summer was the most advantageous time for the Conservatives to call for an election. Mr. Churchill did just that. Off to a fast start, his unexpected political moves actually caught the Laborites and Liberals off their guard.

Authorities in the field of British politics have soberly predicted that the coming election, the first in ten years, will be not only the biggest but also the most bombastic. As if to prove their statements, BBC has announced that their mail boxes are literally deluged with requests for radio time. Already, each party is discussing national problems, policies, and platforms over the air. Of course, Sir Archibald Sinclair's Liberals still hold their usual small share of power, but they have announced their intention to run independently.

The main arguments in favor of reinstating Mr. Churchill's government are that the Prime Minister must be allowed to follow through the prosecution of the war against Japan with little hinderance, and that his conservatism will restrain the leftward swing in Great Britain from reaching untimely extremes. In their effort to attract the service vote, the Conservatives have already retired eighty of their 359 members of the House of Commons.

Though the Conservatives are quite positive in asserting that Mr. Churchill had authority to set the election date, the Laborites protested because they saw the act as a measure for excluding the service vote. Large numbers of discharged veterans are expected home by October. It was the plan of the Laborites to push the Conservatives into a defensive position by advocating elections this fall. They organized a conference at Blackpool which was all set to force the elections; but Mr. Churchill, master politician, jumped the trigger and stole the British and American headlines away from the Labor conference. The Prime Minister's compendious and speedy break-up of the wartime coalition government has won a political advantage, and many experts feel that the Laborites and Liberals will suffer set-backs because of it. By such political maneuvering, Mr. Churchill has been able to oust the Labor and Liberal elements of the coalition government. If he wins the July election, the resulting government will be wholly conservative. On the other hand, if the Labor Party and Liberals are able to rally enough strength, and every indication portends a very close race, they may take over the government, and Britain will probably continue the swing toward an Anglo-Saxon modification of socialism.

Preliminary Plans Underway For Fall Football Schedule

Ted Curtis, Faculty Manager of Athletics, reports that preliminary plans are already being made for football for next fall. Schedule plans will include at least four, and possibly five games with intercollegiate civilian teams. Last year the Maine team, consisting entirely of civilian students, over 90% Freshmen candidates, played a very successful four game schedule. Maine was the only college team in the state which supported a straight civilian team. Bates had a team consisting mostly of Navy men, while neither Bowdoin or Colby has supported a football team for the past two years.

This year Maine will again count heavily upon the freshman class to supply the largest part of the squad, but indications seem quite definite that several of this year's squad members will again report for the team.

To The Editor . . .

As usual I find it difficult to comprehend or agree with one of your feature writers, who in the issue of May 31 wrote the weekly editorial on the "immature students" and "degenerative suppression." After reading that editorial I visited the student art exhibit. Between the Postwar editorial and the art exhibit a thought occurred to me which I would like to present. I would suggest that the great majority of college students are not so immature as your editorial writer indicates—perhaps he is merely reflecting his own self-consciousness. I would suggest that while the students are not immature their maturity is being suppressed, unintentionally of course. Certainly the are exhibit, while admittedly not over sensational, indicates that if the students have the fair means of expression they can prove themselves to be more than the "immature students" that your writer typed them.

To recklessly label the students as "immature" is, to me, not a reflection upon them, but rather a reflection of the evil educational system that the American college is unnecessarily shackled to. While the United States is assumedly the land of free expression, its educational system, because of many and varied circumstances, is like "The Prisoner of Chillon" a "dungeon's spoil." Admittedly, once in a long while there is "the glimmer of the sun."

However, there is always hope. And as the school year of 1945 draws to a close let us, the students of the University of Maine, resolve in the coming year to prove that we are neither "immature" nor suffering from "degenerative suppression." For on the Maine Campus we have excellent potentialities for excellent opportunities. We can prove ourselves "mature" in spite of the odds. Let us do so in the school year of 1946.

"Let's resolve" is fine, but how about standing up on two feet and offering a constructive criticism of the situation. Don't weep on my shoulder, until you have done something about it.

After slushing across a muddy tennis court to find out the tennis court scores, and finding only a few results, I came to the conclusion that the weather hasn't been particularly conducive to tennis—nothing new to anybody. The results thus far: Hansen-Gee, Gee, default; Staples-L. Jones, Staples, 6-2, 6-4; Parent-Lesinski, Parent, 6-1, 6-0.

WAA managers for next year have been recently announced as results of the elections. They are: basketball manager, Esther Libby, assistants, Clarice Easler, Kay Mills; hockey manager, Mildred Byrnes, assistants, Helen Buzzell, Morna Kimball; archery manager, Peg Jameson; winter sports manager, Sally McNealus, assistants, Carol Denison, Janice MacDonald; volleyball manager, Faye Jones, assistants, Shirley Castner, Anna Crouse, Ruth Haynes; tennis-badminton manager, Nora Chipman. Carol Griffie is next year's president of Modern Dance Club, and Mary Hubbard, president of Square Dance Club.

Locker refunds will be given to all girls returning gym locks between the hours of 8:30-11:45 a.m., June 15, 16, and 18 of next week. If the locker is shared, the two sharing the locker should apply for the refund together.

BEAR FACTS

By Ivan Crouse

Two months of major league ball has now passed and still on top in the American League batting race is the veteran third baseman, Tony Cuccinello. Cuccinello, who is now thirty-seven, has been kicking around the majors for over ten years, having played with New York and Boston in the National League before being shunted to the Chicago White Sox as a washed-up player.

When the 1945 spring training started, the White Sox had a surplus of third basemen, therefore Cuccinello was given little consideration until opening day. The infield just wasn't clicking, so in desperation "Cooch" was given the nod for third base. Since then, Tony has played every game except a few he missed because of injuries and weariness caused by too many double headers. Not only has he played a good game afield, but he has been the steady influence on his young teammate, Cass Michaels, a green recruit, who has been holding down the shortstop position. Tony may not take the batting title in 1945, but right now he's the hardest man in the league to keep off the basepaths, while clouting a neat .355.

* * * * *

Year after year, the New York Yankees have taken the spotlight in the American League. Pennants and World Series have come as a matter of fact. Individual stars, smooth working infield combinations, hard hitting outfielders, and several of the greatest battery men have made history with their outstanding work.

The first of these great teams was built about Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri, Pennock, Hoyt, and Meusel. As years passed by, these men got by their prime, and the yell came out "Break up the Yankees." Try as the other teams might, the Yankees could not be cracked. When Gehrig passed out of the scene, he was followed by Dahlgren, Sturm, Hassett, and Etten. When Lazzeri dropped out of the picture, up came Gordon, and then the hard hitting, speedy second sacker, George Starnes. The Great Bambino, Babe Ruth, moved on to the Boston Braves in 1933, only to be replaced by George Selkirk, and then the younger stars, Keller, Henrich, and Joe DiMaggio. Those last three formed the most imposing outfield in the majors prior to their inductions into the service. Bill Dickey has been the Yankee's mainstay behind the plate for many years and aids in developing outstanding pitchers for the McCarthymen. Leading the parade of hurlers are Pennock, Hoyt, Hadley, Pearson, Ruffing, Gomez, and, in later years, Chandler, Borowy, Bonham, and many others.

The success of such a great team can be credited to three men. First to Joe McCarthy, perhaps the greatest of all Big Time managers. McCarthy, an easy going manager, is a fine handler of players and an excellent judge of playing ability. Secondly, credit must be given to Ed Barrows, president and general manager of the Yankees until the recent sale to ex-Dodger prexy, Larry McPhail. The third keyman in this setup is George Weiss, supervisor of the greatest farm system in the majors. These three men have worked together with perfect harmony, and as a result have made such a name for the team that even the mediocre ball player reaches stardom within the spacious area of Yankee Stadium. It has really shown a true example of team spirit and the part it plays in a winning ball team.
