DEAN STEVENS RESIGNS POST AFTER FORTY YEARS SERVICE
Ill Health Given as Cause of Action. Successor Will Not Be Picked
Until End of Semester

The resignation of Dean James S. Stevens of the College of Arts and Sciences was announced yesterday, because of ill health. Dean Stevens will continue his administrative duties in the University until the end of the semester.

A Dean to take his place probably will not be appointed until the end of the semester. Professor Peterson of the Spanish department is considered the leading candidate for the position.

Dean Merrill Points to Cooperation

Dean Merrill, Dean of the College of Agriculture, said, "Dean Stevens has always cooperated well with me and my personal association with him is very close. Certainly the real menage of the administration should be to be found in the thousands of students who have been associated with him and me through the years. I am sure that they will be able to name a successor."

Dean Louis P. Faubert as Dean of the School of Education said, "It is a pleasure to express an appreciation of the work of Dean Stevens and to say how much I admire his leadership. Certainly the real menage of the administration should be to be found in the thousands of students who have been associated with him and me through the years. I am sure that they will be able to name a successor."

Dean Corbett said he would resign in June, but as Dean Stevens has a number of years to live, he said he would resign on his own terms.
