- Mr. White and Mrs. White
- Mr. Irving and Mrs. Irving
- Mr. McCallum and Mrs. McCallum

The seniors had the right of way, and with Blair and Little back from their secret destination via down the forward positions last winter. If Soderberg is eligible he will prove to be a great addition to the backfield, as lie went big two years ago at center. The seniors have the experience of playing together.

"Prelims"

It has been a week of melancholy days. One morning we awoke to find the ground covered with sticky snow; the next morning we woke up to find the snow turned into a hard, icy, uncompromising crust; and the week end gale from the north set aspargus trunks for trucks for mere black shadows, and burning dead leaves; homes of those who dare are weathering storms with their windows in one hand and a cold shower in the other.

At such a time, mid-senior examinations do not increase our pleasure in living. The atmosphere is heavy, the sky is dark, and the streets are almost deserted. We are more conscious of the cold than of its discomfort. The only thing that brings us any comfort at all is the thought that another group of students has trampled on the football team we were so proud of only a week ago.

The college calendar is peculiar. With thirty days we have left mid-serous examinations and Thanksgiving.

Commenting on the recent statement of Dean E. W. Lord of Boston University, that our college has a financial value of $27,000, the Ohio Lantern (Portland Express) says:

"A college education is not to be put in terms of money. It is something a little finer than that. To us a college education is a chance for the young fellow to find himself. He has four years of comparative ease, with care for few things. He has an abundance of leisure in which to think and read and discover all the possibilities within himself. It may be that the time he spends in college education is not going to enable him to earn money more soon than it. But the thought of making money is the wrong thought. He is learning one's self and discovering how to enjoy life."

Registrar Garnett has received letters from executive officers of Alfred and Bowdoin Colleges commenting very favorably on the recommendations of the Maine athletic tribes for the coming season. The state athletic union is one for educators to debate, but the majority of students in college and even in high school are the former and the soonest and justest.

A professor of English, requested to speak to his men before he went home for Christmas holidays, observed, "High Episodes, does not expect the assembled merchants to question him on the life of Charles Lamb's mother."

Neither does a professor, who has prepared an address on the Spanish War, invite the audience to quote him on the price of hemp and sugar bananas in 1898.

Of course, such cases are ridiculous. But the question does present a great many of our contemporaneous professors. A good lawyer does not give an opinion on a problem that is controversial. A good professor does not deliver a lecture until he has made a careful study of the problem.

But consider the case of the college student. He studies the romantic move in the world. Occasionally, he finds it is important to know how a certain poet was affected by the death of his master. Occasionally, he finds the importance of a certain dramatic production.

But the subject is not much part of his life. He may delve into almost any subject and select the important points to learn that make up the totality of what subjects his grade.

It is unfortunate that this professional education should be so many of our contemporaneous scholars. The able student, we find, is the one who can see the other side of the question. We do not care to be honest enough to tell boys and girls and young men and women that we have to struggle to save them in an age of industrial revolution.

A talk on India was given Monday in Chapel by Dr. Albert H. Turner of the University of Minnesota. Mr. Turner has left the university in order to do a year's work in India. Mr. Turner has been a prominent member of the college faculty for a number of years and has been much in demand by students for his knowledge of literature and his skill in teaching. He is a man of great culture and has been noted for his ability to make his lectures interesting and entertaining.

Mr. Turner delivered a short, clear, and interesting talk on the subject of India. He spoke of the history, politics, and economics of the country, and also of the culture and social customs of the people. He emphasized the importance of understanding the way of life of the people in order to appreciate fully the culture and literature of the country. He concluded by saying that the study of India is a fascinating subject and that it is one of the most rewarding fields of study for those who are interested in the literature and customs of the Orient.

The talk was well received by the students, and they expressed their appreciation of Mr. Turner's clear and concise presentation of the subject. They also praised the way in which he managed to make the lecture interesting and enjoyable.

The talk was given in the main chapel of the college and was attended by a large number of students. The atmosphere was one of interest and attention, and the students showed their appreciation of Mr. Turner's talk by their enthusiastic response.

Mr. Turner's talk on India was well received by the students, and it was evident that they had gained a greater understanding of the country and its culture. The talk was a valuable contribution to the college's program of lectures and discussions, and it has been noted as one of the most interesting and informative talks given during the current semester.
