STUDENT ORATORS URGE COOPERATION AT CHAPEL ASSEMBLY CAMPBELL SUGGESTS NEW SCHEME OF GOVERNMENT OTHERS SPEAK

At a mass meeting of the students held in the chapel last Thursday for the purpose of considering the present student government and its share, past, present, and future, in regulating affairs which pertain to the student body and to the relations between students and faculty, it was decided by an almost unanimous vote that the students were willing to cooperate with the faculty in the matter of government. This meeting was called by the Senior Skulls and the Student Senate in order to clear up any misunderstanding which may exist and also to talk over plans for cooperation. After talks by John Behringer and "Fat" Campbell, the meeting was opened to the students for discussion and a lively interest was shown in the matter.

Mr. Behringer pointed out in the course of his talk that the opportunities for individual students here at the University of Maine have improved so greatly along all lines that practically the entire student body has become inert and too complacently satisfied with the status quo to assume the responsibility of improving things, and that the recent attempt on the part of Dr. Little to arouse an interest in the betterment of the college has met with little but dissatisfaction, disgust, and sullen indifference. We can not expect to run the college without some form of centralized government, he said, and the sooner we realize that the faculty are not trying to impose laws on us but to help

R. O. T. C. HAS ANNUAL HOP

Scabbard and Blade Entertains Visiting Officers

The annual Military Hop was held in Alumni Hall, Friday evening, April 24, under the auspices of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. A reception was held from eight to nine o'clock. Following the reception, taps were sounded, and an exhibition drill took place.

The hall was attractively decorated in blue and white. Streamers were stretched from one balcony to the other to form a canopy. Around the sides of the hall were the booths of the companies, and of the Scabbard and Blade. In front of each booth were crossed guns and sabres.

Music for an order of 24 dances was furnished by The Ambassadors. Favor dances, including attractive caps given to each couple, and miniature sabres added novelty to the party. At intermission mess call sounded and refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served. Punch was to be had during the evening. Dancing lasted until one o'clock.

Patrons for the evening were President and Mrs. Little, Dean and Mrs. Hart, Dean and Mrs. Stevens, Dean and Mrs. Chase, Dean and Mrs. Boardman, and Dean and Mrs. Merrill. Visitors from New England Conventions of Corps area at the Scabbard and Blade Convention held on the campus the past week-end were guests of the evening.

During the festivities attendant on the Military Hop of last Friday evening, President Little's Paige touring car was stolen from a local garage. Its whereabouts remained unknown until late the next day when it was found overturned near Carmel, completely wrecked. Blood stains were found on the windshield, which would indicate that the thieves had not escaped without injury. Top, hood and engine were a mass of wreckage.

The State Highway Police have been working on the case, but as yet have been unsuccessful in locating the guilty parties.

Trackmen Pile up Big Score in Initial Meet at Durham

The University of Maine track crew proved too strong for New Hampshire at Durham Saturday, and won by 79 1-2 to 55 1-3. Maine cleaned up in three events, the high hurdles, low hurdles and hammer throw. The team was strong in the dashes and counted heavily in the longer runs.

CAPT. CARL RING

The two mile run was one of the features of the event. Peaslee carried off the win after a gruelling battle. He passed Hillman in the second lap, and finished ten yards ahead of Clark. Peaslee also took the mile quite handily.

Peaslee, Brown and Davis were the high point men of the meet. Each got ten points. Two dual records went by the boards when Evans hurled the javelin 164 feet 9 inches and Coughlin lowered the 440, doing the distance in 51 4-5 seconds. The summary:

120-yard high hurdles, won by Ring, Maine; second, True, Maine; third, Torrey, Maine. Time 16 4-5 seconds.

100-yard dash, won by Brown, N. H.; second, Lawry, Maine; third, Donovan, Maine. Time 10 3-5 seconds.

1 mile run, won by Peaslee, N. H.; second, Hutchinson, Maine; third, Gero, Maine. Time 4 minutes 29 seconds.

220-yard dash, won by Brown, N. H.; second, Lawry, Maine; third, Roundsville, Maine. Time 22 3-5 seconds.

440-yard dash, won by Coughlin, N. H.; second, Cahill, Maine; third, Pettee, N. H. Time 51 4-5 seconds.

220 low hurdles, won by Torrey, Maine; second, Giddings, Maine; third, Standish, Maine. Time 26 3-5 seconds.

2 mile run, won by Peaslee, N. H.; second, Clark, N. H.; third, Hart, Maine. Time 9 minutes 54 seconds.

PRESIDENT LITTLE SPEAKS TO ALUMNI AT N. Y. DINNER THIRTY FIVE GATHER FOR SEMI-ANNUAL EVENT

By Edward C. Cutting '24

Thirty-five loyal Maine men attended the spring dinner and business meeting of the New York Alumni Association Friday evening, April 24, at the Fraternities Club Bldg. in N. Y. City. Good fellowship was the spirit of the evening and everyone became known when required to rise and state such intimate facts as name, occupation, present address and home town. Dr. J. S. Ferguson, '89, toastmaster, introduced Pres. C. C. Little as principal speaker and guest of honor. Wayland D. "Pep" Towner brought the greetings of the Boston Alumni, and received a cheer for himself and another for the Boston Association. Jesse H. Mason, '09, presided at the meeting.

Dr. Little, who was on a special visit to the New York and Philadelphia Alumni, covered a variety of subjects in an inspiring talk which was received by his listeners with enthusiastic approval. Starting with the State appropriation for the University, he laid bare a few political facts, and showed the inadequacy of the appropriation which allows not one cent for growth.

Secondly, the President outlined his future policies for the University, one of which is to "Educate the State to educate itself," and the other to endeavor to teach the students to get the most out of college, working on the theory that education does not depend on what students get out of books alone, and that an educated person should be able to do more than make money.

Dr. Little then became very newsy, and told all the facts which he could recall of interest to Maine Alumni, including some choice scandals. Later he answered questions asked by inquiring grads.

"Pep" Towner spoke informally regarding alumni problems, and told the news from Boston.

Discussion of dues and methods of increasing attendance occupied the business session. Officers for the ensuing year were announced as follows: Jesse H. Mason '09, president; Ray M. Boynton '20, treasurer; William Ellsworth '19, secretary; and Edward C. Cutting '24, assistant secretary.

The next regular meeting will be held next fall.

WRITING CONTEST

Students who have been chosen to represent the University in the state intercollegiate competition in writing for 1925 are the following:

Men's essay contest: Charles E. Johnson, George S. Brookes, Ernest E. Haskell, all seniors.

Women's essay contest: Alice M. Libby, 1925, Cecile E. Ham, 1926, Sylvia M. Kurson, 1927.

Women's poetry contest: Alice M. Libby, 1925, Amy B. Adams, 1927, Sylvia M. Kurson, 1927.

The University goes into the competition handicapped by the fact that there were no entries in the men's poetry contest. Judges have been selected, and an announcement of the winners may be expected probably in about three weeks.

Youngs Sets Campus Speed Limit at 15 Miles

Fifteen miles an hour is to be the speed limit for motor vehicles on the campus in the future, and all violations will be reported to municipal authorities.

This announcement was made Tuesday by Treasurer Frederick S. Youngs, who urges all students operating automobiles to be particularly careful in driving over the college roads.

PROFESSORS ENTERTAIN Faculty Actors Amuse Student with Melo Drama

By "Scoop"

Last Wednesday evening, before a crowd which far outdid any that has attended a University play for many moons, the faculty of the University of Maine, presented for the approval of students and fellow faculty members, A. E. Thomas' comedy, "Come Out of the Kitchen."

Out of the cast of eleven, appeared some real dramatic surprises. To begin with, Mark Bailey in the leading role of Burton Crane, blossomed out from the cocoon of staid professorship, and transformed himself into a sprightly young hero with romantic tendencies. His partner in this affaire de coeur was Miss Louise Bancroft of the Home Economics department, as Olivia Danglefield. Apparently the electrical law that opposites attract, applies to romance as well, for Miss Bancroft and Mr. Bailey were equal only in the excellence of their interpretations. But in this there was hardly a choice. Mr. Bailey, even with his previous reputation for dramatic eloquence, quite surprised the audience. Miss Bancroft with an obscure record in such things, created for herself a standard of which to be proud. She had in the first place, a voice that was pleasant to listen to, and mannerisms that were wholly in keeping with that voice.

The play itself was constructed on incidents arising out of a masquerade of four members of a proud southern family, as servants for a northern tenant. Miss Bancroft assumed the position of cook, and with it an Irish accent. Her sister, Elizabeth, Miss Pearl S. Greene, became the maid Araminta; while the two brothers, Paul and Charles, became Smithfield, the butler, and Brindlebury the bootblack, respectively. These parts were taken by Alvin C. Eurich and W. W. Chadbourne.

It would be impossible to review each moment of the play from curtain to curtain, but there are certain incidents which stand out, which being unexpected by either the cast or the audience are more or less interesting.

For instance, Mr. Eurich in making a graceful and furtive exit, counted not upon a slippery spot on the floor, and very nearly missed going flat on his white shirt front. Professor Pollard became so engrossed in something or other while lighting a three branch candelabrum, that he started to roast the end of his finger. But these incidents are not to be taken as deprecatory, for they are merely ludicrous diversions in a well presented play. Mr. Eurich was otherwise very dignified in his part of butler, and indeed, his rendition, was so completely different from his other more casual role of Olivia's brother, that it was a little doubtful. The average person, in the real life we always compare to the stage, could hardly carry off on a moment's notice, such a part and do it so well.

Mr. Pollard walked through his lines with the assurance of an old campaigner. In fact, in one incident, he outshone them all in introducing naturalness where nature was not. That was in the after dinner scene, where all four of the diners indulged in a cigarette. Mr. Bailey's puffs were short and looked none too sweet. But at all events he did not allow it to interfere with his lines. Those of Mr. Otto were veiled, since his back was to the audience, and although he may have made faces, it was not evident. Mr. Zeitler was openly rebellious for an unfortunate whiff seized his epiglottis, and it was several moments before he could successfully stifle his instincts to cough. But Prof. Pollard drew on his cigarette vigorously, and sent great fluffy clouds trailing across the stage with seeming relish. But he doesn't smoke either.

Miss Rose M. Davis proved to be a disgustingly nosy person and succeeded well in making her audience wish her in Timbuctoo or some such remote place. Miss Percie T. Hopkins as her (Continued on Page Four)

Members of the committee will begin the distribution of attractive, leather bound programs next Wednesday. These souvenirs are priced at $1 each.

Plans are going forward to make the junior promenade the best ever. A bower of cherry blossoms and novel lighting effects will serve to make the gymnasium look like anything but a class room for classes in physical training. (Continued on Page Four)

BALL TEAM GOES SOUTH

Sixteen Leave Monday Maine Beats Colby

A picked squad of 16 men started Monday night on the annual "southern trip." The team plays four games this week, tackling Providence College Tuesday, Brown Wednesday, Connecticut "Aggies" Thursday, and New Hampshire on Friday.

Crozier and Thompson are expected to come to the front. "Cuddy" says that both have been doing excellent work in practice games. Gruhn is to be the man behind the bat. The reserve battery consists of Repscha and Johnston for pitchers, and Paul, catcher. Cutts is the first baseman.

Gay and Durrell are holding down second while Capt. Drew Stearns is the only short-stop. Stanton and Cassista third base. Murphy is taking Meserve, Newhall, Hackett, and Wing to cover the outfield.

In the exhibition game, at Waterville, last Wednesday, the University of Maine defeated Colby by a score of 9-3. The fifth inning was the best for Maine. In this inning Wing and Hackett both scored three baggers which was soon followed by Stanton's home run.

The team's play at Waterville last week gave Coach Murphy a chance to correct mistakes, and while about the same lineup will be used on the road this coming few days, there may be a possible shift in batting order. Maine hit well in the pinches and turned in several extra base hits, although Colby garnered (Continued on Page Three)

"The unhappy man who once has trailed a pen Lives not to please himself, but other men."

Dryden
The time has come for the present staff of The Campus to surrender the responsibility for gathering, writing, and commenting on the news of our small, but highly critical, city. The next issue will be prepared by a new editorial board.

In retiring, the present board makes no boasts and offers no apologies. If our news stories have been reasonably free of error and uncolored by prejudice, we have done all that we set out to do. There is no achievement to which we can "point with pride," no tendency in college journalism which we "view with alarm."

Members of the departing staff have made an honest effort to make The Campus a mirror of college life, to represent all acts in proper proportion, to avoid driving hypocrisy and childish impudence. It is needless to remind us that we have failed. Hollow platitudes and lusty, bold sounding phrases will sneak into any paper despite the best laid plans, but the attempt to eliminate them is highly worth while.

As time goes on, The Campus will inevitably expand and improve. Any community gets as good a newspaper as it deserves, and the University is beginning to deserve better things. Student ideals are improving, and student interests are becoming broader. There is a healthy dissatisfaction with some features of the educational system, an encouraging ambition to restore the personal contact between the instructor and the instructed. Intercollegiate relations are not strained; it is no longer necessary to embark for a distant football game armed for battle. Professors are gradually coming to realize that a critical attitude is more often the distinguishing characteristic of the able student than passive receptivity.

There is, of course, another view of the picture. Every few weeks, some incident inspires sour reflection on what one twentieth century Jeremiah calls "the inherent and incurable hoggishness of mankind." Malicious destruction and defacement of property, petty thefts, purposeless dishonesty in classes—all delinquencies that the majority deplores—are frequent subjects for the deliberations of faculty committees. Class "spats" sometimes becomes the frenzy of a mob. In student politics, and in some of the so-called honorary societies, jealousy and prejudice occasionally overrule judgment.

The duty of the college newspaper, as we see it, is to steer a straight course, encouraging the expression of opinion by readers rather than taking sides on all trivial issues, fearlessly attacking whatever is cheap and unworthy, and defending what is good. Its main business is to present the news. Its editorials may be glib and uplifting or cynical and contemptuous, but they will not make two straws difference in college life. By its news columns a paper is judged.

To incoming editors, we bequeath a healthy paper which for a quarter century has been presenting the news and views of University of Maine students. We give up the burden without regrets, and with no anxiety for the future. In the custody of future editorial boards, we are confident that The Campus will live and grow, and will not degenerate into a handbill.

Three Maine Men Win Graduate Fellowships

Three University of Maine seniors have received fellowships at other institutions which will enable them to study for advance degrees. S. Dale Zysman has accepted a fellowship from New York University, Kenneth Field from the University of Illinois, and Leo Friedman from the University of Wisconsin.

Mr. Zysman's fellowship is in the department of history for the year 1925-26 and amounts to $900. In return he has to do some teaching and perform other minor duties for the department. The fellowship makes possible the acquirement of a Master of Arts degree in History in one year.

From the University of Illinois Mr. Fields will receive a scholarship of $300 and freedom from tuition and fees. This is the highest scholarship open there to students without an M.A. degree. Mr. Fields accepted this one principally because he did not wish to teach, but to spend all his time on his own graduate work. This fellowship is in the department of economics.

Mr. Friedman has secured a teaching fellowship at the University of Wisconsin in the department of chemistry. The amount of the fellowship is $600 and in addition he is exempt from tuition and fees. Although this appointment requires twelve hours of teaching, Mr. Friedman says it will be possible for him to complete a full year's work in the graduate school in one academic year and one summer session. He is planning to remain at Wisconsin for three years or longer if necessary, for he is going to work here for his Ph.D. degree in chemistry.

M. C. A. ELECTS NEW CABINET OFFICERS

Last week the election and installation of the new M.C.A. cabinet officers was held at the M.C.A. Building. The new officers are as follows:

Austin Wilkins, president; Edward Stanton, vice-president; Richard Dolloff, secretary; William Bailey, treasurer; Robert Scott, chairman of deputations; Ralph Swift, publicity chairman; Henry Trask, membership; L. E. Brown, chairman handbook committee; Henry Eaton, social service; Wallace Elliott, world fellowship; Paul Lamoreau, entertainment; Stuart Chapman, vespers; Henry Bearce, church relations.

Monday night a joint meeting of the M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. was held at the M.C.A. Building. Ray Culver, who spoke at the M.C.A. "officers training conference" at Bangor was the speaker. He spoke favorably of the joint meeting of the M.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. as something which would have been impossible ten years ago.

Over the week-end the new M.C.A. cabinet officers attended an "officers training conference" at the Bangor Y. M.C.A. building. Features of the conference were discussions of the work of the coming year and a series of lectures by Ray Culver, student field secretary of New England Colleges in the New England Corps area.

Library Becomes Place of Study with Fewer Numbers

At last the library is becoming a place in which to study according to the staff. Those who under the old regime used to drop in every afternoon and evening for a social hour and chat are gradually being weeded out and the library has ceased to be a community center. The new rules as to sex segregation seem to be causing very little disturbance. So far, Mr. Walkley says, the spirit has been fairly good and the librarians have had very little trouble in regard to enforcing the rules.

There is, however, a noticeable falling off in library attendance. Whether this is due to the rules or to the annual recurrence of spring fever which always strikes the campus about this time it is too early yet to decide. The general opinion of the library staff seems to be that it is spring fever with rather obvious complications caused by the rules. At any rate, fewer students go to the library but those who do go are there to study and there is less noise and talking. More reserve books are being taken out over night now, Miss Bowler says.

Among a small percentage of the students there seems to be an opinion that because there are no signs up the rules are null and void. This is not the case. According to Mr. Walkley the rules are to be observed despite the absence of signs.

Freshmen Trim Coburn in Slow Game 9-1

In a game which was slow and dragged out, the Maine freshman team opened their season on April 24 by sinking the Coburn Classical outfit to the tune of 9-1. Coach Brice's team played a snappy brand of ball, and Trefethren held the Coburn sluggers to three scratch hits.

Forestry Extension Program Favored by Maine Farmers

The College of Agriculture program of forestry extension, already under way this year, is getting State-wide support from farmers, who appreciate the value of timber as a crop on land unfitted for other farming operations.

Within the past two weeks planting demonstrations have been held in Waldo and Penobscot counties, the first of more than 50 such demonstrations which will be given this year by the College of Agriculture Extension Service under the personal supervision of its Forestry Specialist, Myron E. Watson.

At each of these demonstrations an acre of white pine (and a certain amount of spruce in some cases) will be planted, which means that more than 50,000 white pine and spruce two-year seedlings and three-year transplants will be added to the State's reforestation program.

All of the trees set in these demonstrations will be taken from the State forest nursery at Orono. They were grown from seed and are the type of trees that thrive in Maine soil and climate.

The trees are sold to farmers at cost—$10 a thousand for three-year transplants, and $7.50 a thousand for two-year seedlings, plus freight charges. Two men can comfortably set an acre of pine or spruce in a day, so the cost of reforesting an acre of land is negligible when compared with the value of the timber crop in a few years time.

The trees are set in rows six feet apart, and the trees are six feet apart in the rows. This is known as "six-by-six" planting, and has been proved the best method of planting forest trees in this section of the country. This scheme of planting makes it possible to set 1,210 trees to the acre.

CHAPEL NOTES

Religion in the public schools was the subject discussed by Prof. Pollard in chapel Monday. At present the Bible may be read without comment as part of the morning exercises in public schools in the majority of the states. In a certain western state thirty-six students walked out during the reading of the Bible. They were suspended by the school board and the Supreme Court supported the school board in its action.

The speaker expressed himself in favor of the platoon system of religious instruction as used in the Gary schools, Indiana, and in Detroit. Under this plan a certain period of time is set aside each day for religious instruction. During this period those children whose parents wish them to obtain religious instruction are sent to rooms where they receive this instruction from a teacher sent by their particular denomination. Those children whose parents do not wish them to receive this instruction spend the period on the playground. Under this system there is no quarrel with any denominational feeling.

"The American home," continued the speaker, "at present is putting too much responsibility on the school and at the same time is not willing to pay the price to secure the very best trained teachers. The home and the church should be made responsible for all the moral, ethical, and religious teaching. No home has the right to shirk the responsibility of religious teaching in the school. There must be a definite method of teaching religion and it must be done by the denominations. Every home, church, and school must work together."

Experiment Station to get $88,000 a Year

The Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, and its experimental farms at Monmouth and Presque Isle, will have $88,000 to work with this year. This amount will be increased at least $10,000 a year for the next five years.

In past years the agricultural experiment work has been so curbed by lack of money that more than a few projects of first importance to agriculture had to be postponed, and many men who are doing splendid work for farming here were lured to other states where the opportunity for their professional and personal success was greater.

How THE INCREASE CAME
Four years ago the Maine Experiment Station received $15,000 from the State legislature, and $30,000 from the federal government as provided in the Hatch and Adams Acts—a total of $45,000.

Two years ago the Legislature raised the appropriation from the State to $25,000 making the total amount for maintenance and experimental work $55,000. And the last Legislature, very largely because of the efforts of the Maine Federation of Agricultural Associations again increased the State appropriation, this time to $38,000.

THE PURNELL BILL
During the last days of recently adjourned Congress, the Purnell Bill was passed, giving the experiment stations in each of the 48 states $20,000 this year (beginning in July) and an increase of $10,000 a year until the income resulting from this bill should reach $60,000 a year.

Thus does the Maine Experiment Station come into what appears to be an adequate sum for carrying on the projects for which it is established—$38,000 from the State, $30,000 by virtue of the Adams and Hatch Bills and $20,000 thru the Purnell Act.

CORRESPONDENCE

Editor, The Campus

The current issue of The Maine Campus, April 22, 1925, contains an article on the State Forest Nursery, which gives credit for this to the wrong source. In it the statement is made that it "is one branch of the Agricultural Extension Service." This is inaccurate.

The State Forest Nursery is a branch of the Forestry Department, and is conducted as a laboratory of this Department, under a special appropriation for this purpose. It has nothing whatever to do with the Extension Service, excepting that we are supplying a large number of trees for their demonstration work.

Very truly yours,
John M. Briscoe,
Professor of Forestry.

Scoop's CORNER

By Scoop

While browsing around the library a day or two ago, I discovered that someone had done a little spring decorating, and that a new group of pictures of purely modern American artists had joined our art collection.

The real spice of this new group is the complete cycle of the panels of E. A. Abbey; the originals of which are in the Delivery Room of the Boston Public Library. In addition to this there are the very famous murals of John Singer Sargent, the most famous of recent artists in the last century. The recent death of Sargent makes these reproductions all the more interesting.

But while I found the names of the artists, I was at loss to explain some of the rather mystifying figures depicted, until peeping from behind one of the pictures, I found a little black book and opened it.

My troubles vanished immediately, and I sat down and puzzled them all out. It was like trying to find your uncle in a panoramic view of a Shriner's picnic. And each time that I found the name and description of one of the paintings, my interest increased.

Finally I turned to look at some of the others, and the more I looked, the prouder I became of American art and artists.

I had always considered that an artist had to have a name like Michael Angelo or Pinturichio or Tintoretto to be really good for anything; but there was a frank and graceful little "Psyche" from the brush of William Sargent Kendall. He might have even been called "Bill!" And there was a lady gazing rapturously at "The King," by John W. Alexander. Sounds common enough, doesn't it? But such things grow on you, if you take the time to look at them. They cease to be merely a conglomerate mass of daubs and become a flash of real life. That is why art is art I suppose.

Then there was a marine view, "Northeast" by Winslow Homer, whose views of the sea are famous. There was a beautiful scene, "Peace and Plenty" by George Inness. (He might be a baseball player, for all his name would indicate. Can you imagine a man with a name like that painting pictures? Yet only an artist could paint a scene so replete with serenity as he did.) Others are by Alexander H. Wyant; Cecelia Beaux; the famous "Mother and Children" of George de Forest Brush; Abbott H. Thayer; and a "King Lear" by E. A. Abbey. One of the collection is the George Washington of Gilbert Stuart, generally admitted to be the best likeness of the first president.

But this column will take on the appearance of an art catalogue if I continue to write names and titles. Still I would like to introduce this new addition to the students. I understand that over one hundred dollars was spent in procuring them, and I would suggest that a few of us should look them over, if only to hearten those who worked to get them for us. And unless you are too callous, I venture to predict that ye who may "go thence to scoff, will remain to pray." After all, isn't art the adult's picture book?

And while I am on the subject of our art collection, did you ever notice that the second floor of the library is literally infested with reproductions of all the masters from the dark ages to the present?

And now that there has been a recent loss of a certain source of diversion in the library, try easing your eyes on a few of the really fine artistic reproductions hanging on its walls, as a substitute.

Most anyone likes to listen to a good symphony orchestra. Music of that sort is to the ears what the painting of a really great artist is to the eyes; and you have the added advantage of being able to stop when you like; but if you really look, you won't want to.

more off Thompson and Crozier got off the deliveries of Heal, and Mason.

The playing of Captain Stearns and his stonewall defense in the shortfield, together with the morale he lends the inexperienced infield will pull the team, which is admitted to be of the "green" variety, though, much better than if the Bears did not have the cocky leader in there. Stearns, playing his last year should be one of the mainstays, both in the field and at the bat.

Maine's team will return to Orono on Saturday, play at Lewiston a week from Wednesday and entertain the Fifth Infantry team from Fort Williams here a week from Saturday, Bowdoin on May 15, Bates the following Monday, then Tufts on the 22nd, Bowdoin on the 23rd and Colby on the 27th will round out the State series with the exception of the final game with Colby which will be a Commencement feature here Friday, June 5. The Mass. Tech Beavers will appear at Orono, Friday, May 29, according to the revised schedule.

Student Orators Urge Cooperation at Chapel Assembly

us to organize so that we can have a greater measure of freedom the sooner we will be able to make that central government what we as students want it to be. The recently imposed faculty rule should be a challenge to the students rather than a ball and chain. Student government is gone. Faculty government has taken its place. The students in general are dissatisfied. The only thing for them to do now is to prove that they are capable of governing themselves.

"Let's get together and prove that we are ready to be shown what to do," he concluded, "and then get behind and push. If we don't like the plan which Prexy and the faculty have proposed, let's make a new and better one and prove that it is better."

"Fat" Campbell outlined three possibilities in the matter of cooperative government: (1) student government such as we have already tried and found to be inefficient, (2) rule by the Senior Skulls, and (3) rule by a new body to be formed by the students and approved by President Little. This third suggestion was the one discussed. If adopted it would provide a smaller and more elastic body than the old Student Government, a body of possibly 12 or 15 men chosen by Dr. Little from perhaps 18 elected by the students. Thus it would have the backing of the students on one hand and the administration on the other.

Announcement

to the Student Body

In an effort to co-operate with the various magazines published by the University in the matter of advertising, we wish to first bring to the attention of the students the fact that

First—Advertising makes your magazines possible by making them self supporting.

Second—Advertisers cannot afford to spend large sums without business enough in return to warrant the expenditure.

And so, with this in mind, we have evolved a plan which is self explanatory: We have established a college advertising fund, and in the future we will donate to this fund 5% of all sales from any member of the University.

This fund will be used solely for the purpose of advertising in your college papers. And so it is wholly up to you students how much we turn back to your magazines.

See notice in next week's paper for further particulars.

A Money Making Business For You After Graduation Days

JUST listen to this instance. E. I. Hiscox, of East Patchogue, Long Island, is a college man who worked for years in a New York office.

Always he chafed at being tied down to a desk.

Always he wanted to be free to do things that meant sunshine and flowers; health and happiness.

He saw men with seemingly little money build a greenhouse.

He saw one house grow to many.

He saw their owners always strong and well, and getting an abundance of wholesome joy out of life.

So he mortgaged his home, borrowed all he could, and built his first house 40 ft. x 150 ft.

Didn't know a thing about greenhouse growing.

But he found out, and made that first house pay the first year.

He has three now. Three of our finest iron frame houses, growing carnations.

If you like flowers and are not afraid to get some dirt on your hands, here's a contentment-filled, money-making business for you.

Let's get acquainted. Let's start by your writing us asking the questions that right now are popping into your mind.

Here may be the answer to what to do after graduation, to make money and have your share of life's pleasures.

If interested write to the Manager of our Service Department, Ulmer Building, Cleveland, Ohio, who will give it his personal attention.
