AN INVESTIGATION OF THE ORIGIN OF PLACE NAMES OF TOWNS IN PENOBSCOT COUNTY, MAINE

By William F. Fox

An Abstract of the Thesis Submitted in Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts

A study was made of the origin of place names of towns in Penobscot County, Maine. Each of the sixty-one town names is taken up in chronological order. A list of the previous designations of each town, beginning with the survey designation, is included and an attempt has been made to find the origin of these wherever possible as well as the name used today. In many cases the dates of the first settlements, names of early settlers, and brief outlines of the towns' histories have been included, particularly if these had any bearing upon the origin of the names.

The study has been divided into three periods (roughly including about one-third of the towns in each division). Towns were named for the following reasons:
after early settlers, after proprietors of the townships,
as geographical descriptions or for outstanding traits,
after Indian names, after classical and Biblical names, after towns the settlers had come from, after political figures, after land agents, after famous people, and for foreign places.
PREFACE

The main aim of this study is to find out just why the towns in Penobscot County have their present-day names. Most of these towns were known previously by other names or designations and these have also been included as far as possible. In many cases the dates of the first settlements, names of early settlers, and brief outlines of the towns' histories have been included, particularly if these had any bearing upon the names used.

Having delved into this subject somewhat, it reminds me of my favorite description of an education -- the more you know, the less you know. The study has raised literally hundreds of questions, most of which are beyond the scope of this inquiry. My education has been broadened, however, since my research has brought me into contact, by letter and by interview, with people ranging from the Rt. Rev. Norman Nash, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, to local characters who for the price of a beer would give me their bit of information; and has taken me as far afield as the State of Washington.

At the time this subject was picked in the spring of 1951, neither I nor Dr. York, my Major Instructor at the University of Maine, knew of the plans of Miss Ava Chadbourne to bring out a book entitled Maine Place Names and The Peopling of Its Towns, which was printed in 1955. The only use made of this book was as a reference for ten towns for which I could find no documentary proof, only hearsay, as to why they were so named.

The subject of place names is extremely interesting, but is also one that requires hard work and long hours of research. Any student of this subject should be aware of this. To illustrate just two of the problems run into, lack of primary sources because people are unaware of the value of historical materials around their own homes, and poor spellers, I have included two letters in Appendix A and Appendix B.

I have used Stanley Bearce Attwood's The Length and Breadth of Maine exclusively for the chronological listing of town incorporations in Maine. These town incorporations were granted by the General Court in Boston, Massachusetts, for the District of Maine up to 1820 and by the Legislature of the State of Maine after that date.

Finally, it is impossible to list all of the people who have so kindly and graciously helped me in various ways in preparing this paper. Most people seemed genuinely interested in the subject. Two people especially, who by their advice, patience, and push, have made the finishing of this paper possible -- my wife, Ann, and Dr. Robert York of the History and Government Faculty at the University of Maine, Orono, Maine -- and to them go my heartfelt thanks.

Chapter I
THE OAK SPREADS ITS ROOTS
(1788-1820)

If one looks at a map of present-day Penobscot County, he can picture the Penobscot River as the trunk of a tree with the Bangor area as its base. The roots of this tree spread into the hillside west and northwest of the area. Then as one looks up the Penobscot, he can see the branches of the tree formed by the roads leading to towns which spread east and west of the River.

At the beginning of the year 1788, this area was a vast wilderness which pioneers were just beginning to penetrate. The lure to settlers was the fine forests and good farm land. The impetus was furnished by the government of Massachusetts which gave grants of land to deserving soldiers of the Revolution and sold large tracts of lands to promoters.

With the incorporation of Orrington on March 21, 1788, the roots of settlement spread west and northwest of Bangor with the exceptions of Orono, Eddington, and Brewer. By February 15, 1820, nineteen towns had been incorporated with Etna being the last before the District of Maine was separated from Massachusetts. Eddington and Brewer were the only two incorporated to the east of the Penobscot River while Orono was the farthest one north on the River to be incorporated. The Acts of Incorporation for these nineteen towns were granted by the General Court of Massachusetts in Boston. Thus in this period of thirty-two years, strong roots were spread from which settlements would spread northward in the next period following the Penobscot and its branches.

Orrington - The year was 1788. American pioneers were just pushing across the Ohio River and the new Constitution was about to go into effect for the United States. The District of Maine was still part of Massachusetts whose Governor was John Hancock. The area that is the present-day Penobscot County was the frontier, a wilderness that pioneers were just beginning to penetrate. Orrington was incorporated as a town on March 21, 1788, the first in what is now Penobscot County, and the fifty-third in the District of Maine.\(^1\) At that time it also included Brewer and Holden. Previously it had been called Plantation No. 9, New Worcester, and China.\(^2\) Colonel John Brewer began the first settlement in the summer of 1770 and soon it was called New Worcester after the Colonel's original home in Massa-

\(^2\)Ibid.
Two theories were found on how the town was named. An agent was sent to Boston to procure the act of incorporation for the town from the General Court of Massachusetts. When asked what name should be filled in on the act, he picked up a book and found the name Orrington which he liked and thus by accident did the town receive its name. However, the name was so rare that this theory does not seem probable.

More likely it was named after Orangetown, Maryland. Captain James Ginn, a Revolutionary soldier and early settler in New Worcester, had petitioned for land in 1783 which was granted him in 1786. He served as Clerk for the Plantation before incorporation and was acting in that capacity.

capacity at the meeting of the people when they decided to ask for incorporation. His native home had been Orangetown, Maryland, which he suggested to the meeting as the new name and the people agreed. However, the Captain, like many others in those days, was not a good speller and he wrote in "Orrington" for "Orangetown". Because of his connection with the naming of Bangor, it is of interest to note that Parson Noble was delegated as the agent to go to Boston to secure the act of incorporation for Orrington.6

BANGOR - The year was 1790. General Josiah Harmar was defeated by the Ohio Indians near Fort Wayne. There were still only thirteen states in the United States. The First Census which was taken this year, listed the population of the U. S. as 3,929,214. In the Plantation of Sunbury, at the junction of the Kenduskeag and Penobscot Rivers, the population had reached about 500 people.7 In the days of the early European explorations, this was supposed to have been the site of the fabulously wealthy city of Norumbega. However, in 1604 when Samuel de Champlain visited this area

he found only a small Indian village called Kadesquit or Conduskeag. 8

Bangor was incorporated as a town on February 25, 1791, the second in what is now Penobscot County, and the seventy-third in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Kenderguit, Conduskeag, Kenduskeag, Kadesquit, Kedesqult Settlement at Kenduskeag Stream, Sunbury, and Sunnyside. 9 The first white settler was Jacob Bussell (or Buswell) and his family in 1769. 10 Soon others followed and the area was known as Kenduskeag Plantation until 1787. The designation, Kenduskeag, was derived from the Indians, meaning "eel-weir place". 11 In 1786, a most re-

'Kat,' the Maliseet name for an eel (changed to 'kad-'); 'esog,' or 'esogw,' Maliseet for a weir (changed to '-esq-'); and a locative ending.

The name is pure Maliseet. Commenting upon it, Lewey Ketchum remarked, 'It seems as if the Quoddies must have named it' - which in fact they did, the Indians whom Champlain and Biard met here being Etchemins, or Maliseets. The change to modern 'Kenduskeag' is accounted for by a nasal in the word 'kat-', or 'kaht,' which appears in English pronunciation as an 'n;' and the ending has been changed to the more local '-eag' (the 'k' belongs with the root). An earlier spelling, used by the first white settlers markable man came to Bangor - the Reverend Seth Noble. He was one of the Whig refugees who had to flee with Colonel Jonathan Eddy from Nova Scotia in 1776. Apparently he served as a chaplain in Washington's army and in return for his services was granted, by the General Court of Massachusetts, a lot of 350 acres in Eddington. He was the first installed pastor in Bangor. In a settlement of rough and ready frontiersman he seemed very popular, well-liked, and a man who could sway a crowd by his oratory. In 1787 he was 'Condeskeag'. When these came, the Indian village was near the present Penobscot Exchange Hotel, beneath which used to be a large spring; their planting grounds were on the hillside back towards Broadway and the eel-weirs were on the rapids from State to Franklin Streets.

"On March 27, 1787, the people of Sunbury (as Mr. Noble had now taught them to call the place) were so well pleased with their preacher that, in a meeting for village purposes, they voted to build a meeting-house forty by thirty-six feet at Condeskege, and Captain Budge, who was Moderator of the meeting with Mr. Smart, his brother-in-law, agreed to give an acre of land upon which it was to be built."

Stewart H. Holbrook, "The Flowering of A Lumber Town," Henry Beston (ed.), White Pine and Blue Water, A State of Maine Reader (New York: Farrar, Straus and Company, 1950), p. 190. "The Reverend Seth Noble was a local divine whose voice was such that it could be, and often was heard above the drone of four hundred and ten saws and the combined howls of wolves and loggers on carouse."

"Statement of William Hasey, One of the First Settlers of Bangor, 1781-1844," The Maine Historical Magazine, suggested to the people the name Sunbury as appropriate for the sunny banks of their village and so it was called until 1791 when it became Bangor upon incorporation.

The accounts of how the name Bangor was chosen vary.
One thing seems certain, however, that the petitioners for incorporation chose their "preacher", Parson Noble, to be their agent to present their petition for incorporation.
One account says, "Entrusted with an agency in procuring the incorporation of the town, he was directed by a vote of the plantation to have Sunbury inserted in the act, as appropriate to the pleasing appearance of the place. But the name displeased him or escaped his recollection; for when the Legislative committee enquired what the town should be called; he being passionately fond of the church-tune
'Bangor', told them to insert that name."

Another account says, "It is said that, while the clergyman was attending to the town's registration, he was humming the old hymn tune known as 'Bangor'. When the clerk, filling out the necessary settled in Bangor some 6 or 7 years after I came here man in prayer, especially on funeral occasions, he excelled.

Indeed I never heard his equal, so touching, so affecting.
A most excellent singer. He could drink a glass of grog and be jovially merry. When out of the pulpit he ought never to go in, and when in never to go out. His religious friends had scruples of his vital piety, and after Mr. N. went away to Con't., he wrote to Dea. Boyd, saying he had never experienced religion till after he had left Bangor. A very 16Williamson, op.cit., II, 552.

papers, asked Noble the name of the community, the pastor misunderstood the question and replied with the name of the hymn, and thus the latter name was written into the incorporation papers."17

A third account says,

The citizens of the humming city on the Penobscot wanted a town charter, in 1791, so they drew up a highly official and legal application. The name of their new home in the forest, they decided, should be Sunbury, which handsome name was inscribed in the application and the document turned over to the Reverend Seth Noble to carry to Boston, where the Great Seal and the governor's signature might be put upon it... But the Reverend Seth cared little for the chosen name, which smelled of paganism. He erased it and inserted in a neat round hand the name by which his favorite hymn was known in the old hymnals, 'Bangor'.18

These erroneous accounts may have their foundations in the fact that several petitions were forwarded to the General Court asking for incorporation. It is true that in 1787 the inhabitants sent a petition asking to be incorporated into a town by the name of Sunbury. It was addressed as follows: "To the care of Dr. Cony, Hallowell. Sir, please to forward this Petition to the great and general Court, and you will oblige your Friends, the Petitioners."19 However, this apparently produced no results. Another petition was sent in 1790 asking that they be incorporated "into a town by the name of Bangor." The original copy of this petition is on file in the archives of The Commonwealth of Massachusetts and I have a photostat of it in my possession. This eliminates the first two accounts about the name being inserted into the act instead of Sunbury inasmuch as the petition which brought about the act of incorporation specifically asked for the name "Bangor". The Archives Division of The Commonwealth of Massachusetts informs me that this is the only petition concerning the incorporation of Bangor that they could find. Thus it seems probable that this is the petition which was acted upon. The third account about Parson Noble erasing the name "Sunbury" and inserting "Bangor" also seems erroneous inasmuch as the petition is in the handwriting of Andrew Webster, Clerk. The Archives Division assures me that there is no erasure discernible where the word "Bangor" is written. Thus it appears that the petitioners of Sunbury asked that the town be named "Bangor" if the act of incorporation were to be granted. The custom in those days was to change the plantation name when asking for incorporation as a town. The following P.S. appears on the petition: "The inhabitants of said plantation at sundry legal meetings for two years past have unanimously voted to be incorporated, without which we have no benefit of our school or ministerial land." So it seems that the inhabitants had decided at one of these meetings since 1787, when they asked for the name "Sunbury", to change and ask for the name "Bangor". It is quite probable that the Reverend Seth was the one that proposed the name and convinced the inhabitants to ask for it. Having had earlier petitions turned down, it is possible that the Parson argued that "Bangor" had a more dignified sound than "Sunbury" and would help convince the General Court in Boston that the plantation was ready for incorporation. And since the hymn was a popular one in the general locality at that time, he probably had little trouble convincing the meeting. At any rate, the act of incorporation for Bangor passed the House on February 24, 1791, the Senate on February 25, 1791, and was approved by John Hancock, the Governor.

HAMPDEN - The year was 1794. At the Battle of Fallen Timbers, General Anthony Wayne defeated the Indians in the Ohio region. Jay's Treaty with Great Britain was signed, one provision of which set up a commission to settle the Canada-Maine boundary. On the Penobscot the population was steadily increasing and on February 24, 1794, Hampden was incorporated as a town, the third in what is now Penobscot County, and the eighty-sixth in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township 1 Range 1 North of the Waldo Patent, Sowadabscook, Wheelersborough, Wheeler's Mills, Wheelersborough, Wheeler's borough, and Sowerdabscook. Between 1767 and 1772 Benjamin Wheeler arrived here from Durham, New Hampshire, picked out a favorable mill site on Sowadabscook Stream, and when the settlement became a plantation, it was called after him, Wheelersborough Plantation. Sometimes it was referred to as Sowadabscook Plantation by the settlers themselves; in fact, the Act of Incorporation refers to it as "the Plantation called Sowerdabscook." Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm gives the Indian derivation of the word as follows:

24"Hampden Families," The Bangor Historical Magazine, VI (July, 1890 - June, 1891), 247.

The word comes from 'sawade', "sloping"; "-apskek", "ledge", with the locative ending; '-ticook', "stream", is understood. "The Sloping Ledge Stream."

The influents to a river were named from some characteristic feature near the mouth by which they could be identified. This name is no longer applicable. When the first settler, Benjamin Wheeler, the writer's ancestor, built his home at the mouth of this stream, in 1768, near its entrance to the river the stream ran over a high, smooth, sloping ledge. Upon this the settler built a mill. Later, wishing to have both a grist mill and a sawmill, he started to make a canal around the other side of the outcrop of rock; but a great freshet took the stream out of bounds and sent it pouring down his ditch and forever changed its course, so that for a century and a half the sloping ledge has been high and dry. Thus runs the family tradition. The name, however, had become fixed in use and is still retained. 26

The name Hampden was chosen in memory of the English patriot, John Hampden (1594-1643), who was a Parliamentary leader and statesman and who was killed in the Battle of Chalgrove Field during the Rebellion which dethroned Charles I. 27

26 Fannie Hardy Eckstorm, Indian Place-Names of the Penobscot Valley and the Maine Coast (University of Maine Studies, Second Series, No. 55; Orono, Maine: University Press, 1941), pp. 6-7.

ORONO - The year was 1806. Congress authorized the Cumberland Road to run from Cumberland, Maryland, to the Ohio River. Zebulon Pike was exploring the West. In the District of Maine the population was steadily increasing although not at so great a rate as it had in the decade following the Revolutionary War (1785-1795). In fact, only one town was incorporated in the whole District that year.

Orono was incorporated as a town on March 12, 1806, the fourth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and sixty-first town in the District of Maine. At that time it also included what is now the City of Old Town. It had previously been called Deadwater, Stillwater, Colborntown, Still Water, Cobentown, No. 5 Old Indian Purchase West Side of Penobscot River, Colbornton, Colburn-town, and Colburnton.

About 1774, Joshua Ayres and Jeremiah Colburn became the first settlers in this wilderness. Soon after John Marsh arrived and settled on Arumsunkhungan or Nerumsuckhangon Island which later bore his name. At first the settlement was called Stillwater Plantation (or Deadwater). This name apparently was derived from the Indian term for the Stillwater Branch of the Penobscot River. The Indian name for this branch was Skiticook which was the usual term for a deadwater.\textsuperscript{31}

While officially the settlement was known as Stillwater Plantation, there is evidence that, at the turn of the century (1800), it was known as Colburntown Plantation locally at least.\textsuperscript{32} It was named after one of the above mentioned first settlers, Jeremiah Colburn.\textsuperscript{33} The various spellings of this name are accounted for by the poor spellers of that time. Jeremiah Colburn himself while "Clerk" of the plantation used to spell it "Cobentown" in his certificates.\textsuperscript{34}

The following extract from the first volume of the \textit{Bangor Historical Magazine} accounts for the designation, \textsuperscript{31}Eckstorm, \textit{op.cit.}, p. 32.

No. 5, Old Indian Purchase, West Side of Penobscot River:
"...By this treaty (1796) the Indians agreed to resign all their rights to lands from Nichols' Rock in Eddington, thirty miles up the river, excepting Old Town Island, and those in the river above it. The territory relinquished by the treaty, was in 1797 surveyed under the direction of Hon. Salem Towne into nine townships, containing 189,426 acres, by Park Holland, John Chamberlain and Jonathan Maynard, as surveyors. This was called the old Indian Purchase, and comprises what is now Orono, (Old Town), Bradley, Milford, Greenbush, Argyle, Passadumkeag, Edinburg, Howland, and Lagrange. Marsh Island, containing 5,000 acres was confirmed by the Government to John Marsh, the first settler for a small consideration, he exhibiting a pretended purchase from the Indians..."
By 1806 Stillwater Plantation had approximately 300 settlers and desired to become a town.
One reference was found that the early settlers of Bangor proposed the name of "Lunenburg" for Stillwater. However, the name chosen was "Orono" in honor of a friendly chief of the Tarratine

Indians, Joseph Orono, who had been a friend of the colonists during the Revolutionary War. He reputedly lived to be 113 years old, dying in 1801. According to Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm, the noted Indian etymologist, "No one has been able to explain the name, and some Indians have said it was not Indian."

DIXMONT - The year was 1807. Aaron Burr was brought to trial in the circuit court at Richmond, Virginia, before Chief Justice Marshall and was acquitted on the ground that he was not present when the overt act was committed. Robert Fulton's steamboat, the "Clermont", began its first trip up the Hudson River, from New York to Albany, a trip of 32 hours. In the District of Maine there was great speculation in the wild lands owned by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Dixmont was incorporated as a town on February 28,

1807, the fifth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and sixty-seventh in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township 3 Range 1 North of the Waldo Patent, Bowdoin College Grant, Collegetown, and College Town. The township was originally granted to help Bowdoin College by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, hence the designation "Bowdoin College Grant". This also accounts for the name "Collegetown". On July 12, 1801, Dr. Elijah Dix of Boston bought from the college 20,040 acres of the township for the sum of $21,431. Dr. Dix was an owner of large tracts of wild lands in both eastern and western Maine. The town was named in honor of this

EXETER - The year was 1811. John Jacob Astor, a New York merchant, established a fur trading post at Astoria, at the mouth of the Columbia River. Ever since the close of the Revolution, settlers were being attracted by the fine agricultural lands to be found north of and west of Bangor. Exeter was one such place. It was incorporated as a town on February 16, 1811, 45 the sixth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and seventy-ninth in the District of Maine. 46 It had previously been called Township 3 Range 4 North of the Waldo Patent, Marblehead Academy Grant, Blaisdelltown, Blasdeltown, and Blasdel Town. 47

The township had been granted to Marblehead Academy on March 11, 1793, which accounts for the designation,

"Marblehead Academy Grant". It was then sold to various proprietors, among the early ones being Benjamin Jay (or Joy) and William Turner of Boston. These proprietors hired Dr. John Blaisdell of Dixmont to help promote settlements in the township and so it was called "Blaisdelltown" up until incorporation. Lemuel Tozier had been the first settler in 1801; soon he was followed by others including some from Exeter, New Hampshire. It was in memory of the town from which some of these settlers had come that "Exeter" was chosen when they asked the General Court for incorporation as a town.

He went to Glenburn, then Corinth, then to Exeter where he made the first chopping in 1801 removing his family there in Robert Campbell's ox team...."

CHARLESTON - The year was 1811. The Russians landed at Bodega Bay above San Francisco where they built Fort Ross which became the center of an agricultural colony and of the sea otter trade. In the District of Maine, settlers were moving into another fine agricultural spot. Charleston was incorporated as a town on February 16, 1811, the seventh in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and eightieth in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township 2 Range 5 North of the Waldo Patent, New Charlestown, Charlestown, New Charleston, Charleston Settlement, and Newcharleston.

The township had been purchased from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by a group of Boston gentlemen in March, 1794, along with what is now Dexter, Ripley, Cambridge, Atkinson, and Dover. They agreed to settle so many families within a specified time in the township.

55 N. H. Rich, "Scrapbook" (Charleston, Maine: Consists of newspaper clippings). "...The terms of the transfer by the state of Massachusetts included the condition that the purchaser must settle in each township 15 families in four years, 25 in six years, and 40 in eight years. In the case of Charleston, the proprietors were unable to do this in the time specified and had to petition for an extension of time, which was granted in 1797."
Charles Vaughn (or Vaughan) was their agent and began trying to get settlers as early as 1795. That settlers were hard to get is indicated by this offer that Mr. Vaughn made to prospective settlers, "400 acres for improvement of roads, £50 annually for four years for the support of a minister or schoolmaster, and glass and nails for a meetinghouse or school house."\(^{56}\) By the turn of the century, however, settlers were coming in rapidly and by 1810 the settlement had about 210 people.\(^{57}\) Charles Vaughn was active in helping to make the settlement prosperous.\(^{58}\)

There is evidence that the settlement was called "Charleston" before the act of incorporation in 1811 and in view of the efforts of Mr. Charles Vaughn to promote the new settlement, it seems entirely likely that it derived this designation from his name.\(^{59}\) As it was the custom to change the name of a settlement when asking for incorporation as a town, it may be that the villagers simply added "New" to signify the change in status to a

In 1827 the townspeople petitioned the Legislature of the State of Maine to change the name from "New Charleston" to "Charleston" which request was granted and so the town has ever since been known.

GARLAND - The year was 1811. Along with Charleston and Exeter, Garland was incorporated as a town on February 16, 1811, the eighth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and eighty-first in the District of Maine.

It had previously been called Township 3 Range 5 North of the Waldo Patent, Williams College Grant, Lincolntown, and Lincolnville.

The bill was signed by Governor Enoch Lincoln who mistakenly spelled "Charleston" as "Charlestown". The Town Clerk's office in Charleston has the town records from 1811 on and in the summer of 1955 I checked these through rather carefully. In these records the town is called "New Charleston" from 1811 right up to February, 1827. The Town Clerk uses "Charlestown" in 1827, 1828, and 1829, but begins to use both "Charlestown" and "Charleston" interchangeably in 1830. He continues this through 1831, 1832, and 1833. Beginning in 1834 all of the Town Clerk's records use "Charleston". However, popularly with the people it has always been "Charleston". As there never was a "New Charlestown", I have never seen a reference to such a designation except in S.B. Attwood's, The Length and Breadth of Maine which seems to be in error as the 1811 act of incorporation itself was entitled, "An act to incorporate...into a town by the name of New Charleston."

Attwood, Length and Breadth, p. 153.

On June 2, 1798, the General Court of Massachusetts passed a resolve granting two townships of land in the District of Maine to Williams College, located at Williamstown, Massachusetts. Thus Township 3 Range 5 North of the Waldo Patent received the designation "Williams College Grant". Two days later, said township was conveyed by the Treasurer of the College to a group of Massachusetts citizens, one of whom was Levi Lincoln who later in 1808 became Governor of Massachusetts. As Levi Lincoln was the most prominent of the original proprietors, the new settlement became known as "Lincolntown". In 1802 came the first settlers, Joseph Garland, Isaac Wheeler, and Josiah Bartlett who were soon followed by others from the western part of Maine and from New Hampshire. By 1810, the plantation had about fifty legal voters and the settlers met to draw up a petition asking the General Court for incorporation as a town. Lyndon Oak, Garland's historian, describes the event very vividly, "The most important event of 1810 was the petition for an Act of Incorporation.... This important point having been decided in the affirmative, the question—What shall be the name of the prospective town? now confronted the citizens. Standing upon the stone step, which had been fashioned by Nature's hand, and placed in front of Joseph Garland's house, Deacon John S. Haskell moved that the word "Garland" should be inserted in the petition as indicating the choice of the inhabitants of the township in regard to name. 66

The motion was heard with great satisfaction and carried without opposition." 67 Thus was Garland named after one of her first settlers. 68

66Oak, History of Garland, p. 26. "...There was a tradition among the old settlers of a good natured rivalry between Josiah Bartlett and Joseph Garland relating to the name that should be given to the township when incorporated. Mr. Bartlett claimed the honor of giving it his name for the reason that his opening was the first therein. Mr. Garland claimed the honor upon the ground that he had established the first family in the township. The parties to the dispute finally agreed that the one who presented the first son to the township, born within its limits, should be allowed to give his own name to the future town. An event soon after occurred in the family of Mr. Garland that decided the question in his favor, and when it was incorporated in 1811, it took the name of Garland by unanimous consent."

EDDINGTON - The year was 1811. The "New Orleans", first steamboat launched in the Mississippi Valley, left Pittsburgh and headed down the Ohio River for New Orleans. In the District of Maine settlers had begun to push east of the Penobscot River. On February 22, 1811, Eddington became incorporated as a town, the ninth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and eighty-third in the District of Maine. It had previously been known as Eddington Plantation, Eddy's town, Eddy's Grant, Eddytown, Plantation, and Col. Edy's Township.

The General Court in June of 1785 granted to Colonel Jonathan Eddy and others for their services during the Revolutionary War a 9,000 acre tract of land, part of which was in the township now called Eddington. It thus was known for a while as "Eddy's Grant" and among the settlers in the vicinity as "Col. Eddy's Township". The First U.S. Census, 1790, lists it as "Eddytown Plantation" with a population of 110. So it was named after Colonel Eddy, one of the early settlers and a most prominent one.

spelling became "Eddington" before long probably from the way people pronounced "Eddy-town". Beginning in 1786 references are found listing it as "Eddington" right up to the time of incorporation, when the popular spelling was inserted in the act of incorporation. There is a granite monument erected in honor of Colonel Eddy at Eddington Bend with the following inscription: "Jonathan Eddy, 1726-1804. A captain in the French and Indian war. A colonel in the Revolutionary war. A representative to the Massachusetts Great and General Court, 1783. First magistrate on Penobscot river. This town of Eddington named in his honor and part of the original grant to himself and soldiers. This memorial erected by his descendants in 1892."72

CORINTH - The year was 1811. At the Battle of Tippecanoe on the Wabash River, General William Henry Harrison won a victory over Tecumseh's Indians. In the District of Maine, two towns were incorporated with distinguished names on the same day. One was Corinth, incorporated on June 21, 1811, 73

the tenth in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and eighty-fifth in the District of Maine. It had previously been known as Township 2 Range 4 North of the Waldo Patent, Ohio, New Ohio, and Ohio Settlement.

It received its Plantation name when two men, Mr. Abner Tibbetts and Mr. Daniel Budge, were exploring the area and, being well pleased with it, decided to settle there instead of going out to the State of Ohio. Hence it was called Ohio. It was sometimes referred to as New Ohio and Ohio Settlement.

By 1811 there were thirty-two families settled here and the townspeople asked to be incorporated as "Corinth". No one knows for sure just how it received this name. Mr. George L. Hawes of Corinth says, "About that time there was a fad of naming towns for classical and Biblical places in towns to the west." The settlers were a high type of men.

Rainer, Elijah Skinner, Richard Palmer, Jacob Wheeler, Simon Prescott, Rufus Inman, Jr., Asahel Skinner, John Grant, Mark Trafton, Isaac Hodsdon, Joshua
Ancient Corinth was an up and coming place and maybe one of these men hoped this Corinth would be. Also it is said that ancient Corinth was a wicked place. Anyway, I like to think that this is how our town got its name. As Mr. Hawes has done a considerable amount of research trying to find out how Corinth got its name and has been unsuccessful, it seems that this explanation by one of her proud citizens can be accepted, as it is unlikely documentary proof will be found in the near future.

CARMEL - The other town incorporated the same day as Corinth, June 21, 1811, was Carmel, the eleventh in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and eighty-sixth in the District of Maine. It had previously been known as Township 3 Range 2 North of the Waldo Purchase. The settlers who came into this area of the District of Maine seem to have been quite religious. The neighboring towns of Hermon and Levant were soon to receive names derived from the region where Christ spent his life. We are told that Paul Ruggles, one of the first settlers in Carmel, was an original member of the Baptist Church in what is now Etna and its deacon from 1807 till 1811 when he was ordained as a minister at his own house in Carmel. So it seems natural that, when the time came for incorporation, the people should choose a name of Biblical derivation - after Mount Carmel in Palestine.

83 "Carmel", Maine, A Guide "Down East," p. 298. "Carmel...is one of the oldest farming towns in Penobscot County. Bearing a name of Biblical derivation, Carmel,

BREWER - The year was 1812. The United States declared war upon Great Britain. In the District of Maine the population in the town of Orrington, which then also included present-day Brewer and Holden, had reached such proportions and extended over such an area that the people in the northern part of the town asked to be separated and to be aptly enough, was the birthplace of a curious religious sect known as the Higginsites. The Reverend George Higgins, a local Methodist pastor in the early 19th century, started the sect; a village in the neighboring town of Levant is still called Higginsville. The Higginsites did not eat pork and believed in their ability to heal by faith. Tales of their religious activities were widely circulated and one, concerning the whipping of children in efforts to drive out the Devil, aroused the indignation of the townpeople, who determined to rid the town of Mr. Higgins. Calling him from his home late one night, a group tarred and feathered and drove him away."

incorporated as a town. Thus on February 22, 1812, Brewer became the twelfth town in what is now Penobscot County, and the one hundred and nineteenth in the District of Maine. It had previously been called New Worcester and Knapps Square. Colonel John Brewer had been an early settler in 1770 and gave the whole area the name "New Worcester" after the town of Worcester in Massachusetts from which he came. In September, 1785, part of the township was granted to Moses Knapp and associates who were original proprietors of Orrington. His brother, Samuel Knapp, moved to Orrington from Mansfield, Massachusetts, in December, 1785, remaining here and raising a family until he moved to what is now Bradley in 1800. Apparently it was from this family that the part of Orrington which became Brewer received the designation "Knapps Square".

LEVANT - The year was 1813. Captain Oliver Hazard Perry won a battle with the British on Lake Erie. On June 14, Levant was incorporated as the thirteenth town in what is now Penobscot County, the one hundred and ninety-seventh in the District of Maine.94 It had previously been called Township 2 Range 3 North of the Waldo Patent and Kenduskeag Plantation.95

The first settlers arrived about 1789. When Major Moses Hodsdon came in 1801 from South Berwick, Massachusetts, his was only the twelfth house to be built.96 But he was energetic, starting a number of industries and soon other settlers began to flock in. At this time, it was called Kenduskeag Plantation, taking the name of the stream flowing through the territory. In about ten years, the plantation had grown enough to be thinking of incorporation as a town. Just why or how the name "Levant" was chosen has been very difficult to determine. We do know that it was the custom then to drop the plantation name and pick a new one for the town. Also it seems that there was a fad about that time of naming towns for classical and Biblical places. Thus it seems plausible that the town was named after that area on the eastern shores of the Mediterranean stretching from Turkey to Egypt.

HERMON - The year was 1814. General Andrew Jackson defeated the Creeks at Horseshoe Bend, Alabama, thereby breaking their power. The British entered Washington, D.C. and burned the Capitol, the White House, and other public buildings. In the District of Maine towns continued to spring up despite the war. Hermon had been settled near the close of the Revolutionary War in 1783. Most of the early settlers came from Hampden but it was not until 1814, when there were forty families in the plantation, that the townspeople felt the need for incorporation.\footnote{102} In their petition, they specifically asked for the name Hermon,\footnote{103} after Mount Hermon in Palestine.\footnote{104} Thus we have two towns side by side

He has failed to list a 206th town which is where Hermon belongs chronologically. NEWPORT - The year was 1814. Francis Scott Key wrote the words of the "Star Spangled Banner" during the bombardment of Fort McHenry, Baltimore. General Jackson arrived in New Orleans to take command of the American troops. In the District of Maine, settlers were still fanning out west and north from the Bangor area. Another town to the west was added when Newport was incorporated on June 14, 1814, the fifteenth in what is now Penobscot County and the two hundred and eighth in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township No. 4 Range 3 North of the Waldo Patent, Great East Pond, East Pond Plantation, Great East-pond Plantation. This plantation name apparently originated from the great 4,500 acre pond which lies in the town.

The first settlers came in 1807 and Mr. Williamson tells us that in 1809 there were 94 families in the plantation. The name "Newport" was chosen because here was found a short portage connecting the waters of the Penobscot with those of the Kennebec. We of today, with our speedy cars and our crisscross of roads, our fast trains and jet airplanes, may fail to understand how such an inland town could be thought of as a port. Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm in her excellent study of Indian place-names of the Penobscot Valley has fully explained the importance and significance of this portage in the days gone by as follows:

Sebesteguk River, "passage river," "almost-through river." Tributary of Kennebec River in Winslow.

The "Sebastiancook", better written as "Sebasticook" or "Sebesteguk," was a section of one of the most important travel-routes of ancient times, the shortest way of going "via" Arnold's Trail from the Penobscot to Quebec. Though not a translation of the word, the best English equivalent is "The Short Route".

To appreciate why the Sebesteguk was of such importance in Indian communications we should note the topography of its drainage basin.

The Sebesteguk fans out in wide-spreading branches. The longer but lesser branch, rising in Sangerville and Dover, was known as Main Stream; the shorter and more important branch, with its chief head in Newport, was called the East Branch. Probably originally only the main river and its East Branch were known as 'Sebesteguk', 'the almost-through river', because this was the shortest and easiest route to the Penobscot. The Reverend Paul Coffin, in his 'Missionary Journeys in Maine' at the end of the 18th century, noted that it was but a mile overland from Penobscot to Kennebec waters by the Sebesteguk and Sawadapskek. By following different tributaries, six important objectives could be reached. One could go

1. by Twenty-mile Stream and Unity Pond to Belfast on Penobscot Bay to get to Castine.
2. by Sawadapskek Stream to Hampden to strike any point on the lower tidal part of the Penobscot.
3. by Kenduskeag Stream to Bangor, to reach any point near the head of tide.
4. by Pushaw Lake to Old Town, entering the Penobscot above the falls section, for the routes to Machias and St. Croix.
5. by Main Stream to Piscataquis River for the upper Penobscot and routes through to Mattawamkeag and St. Croix.
6. by Main Stream and upper Piscataquis waters to get to Moosehead Lake and Penobscot headwaters, keeping in a food and hunting country and avoiding the hard and dangerous route up the Kennebec.

Thus the Sebesteguk was a main highway of aboriginal travel and the principal route by which the French missions communicated with one another in the days when a mission was a palisaded town defending a strategic point in the French plan of occupying the country against the English. 110

DEXTER - The year was 1816. This was "the year in which there was no summer" in New England. On June 6 the snow was ten inches deep in the Berkshires, Vermont and New Hampshire. In July and August there was ice half an inch thick. In the District of Maine, Penobscot County was set off from Hancock County and incorporated on February 15 as the ninth county and the last before the separation from Massachusetts. On June 17, 1816, Dexter was incorporated as a town, the sixteenth in Penobscot County and the two hundred and seventeenth in the District of Maine.\textsuperscript{112} It had previously had the plantation name of Elkinstown and the survey designation of Township 4 Range 5 North of the Waldo Patent.\textsuperscript{113}

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts sold the township to James Bridge of Augusta in 1794. It passed into and through several other hands before Andrew Cragle, owner of the famous Cragle House in Cambridge, Massachusetts, purchased it.\textsuperscript{114} To promote settlement he sent Samuel Elkins of Cornville to find mill sites in 1800. Soon Ebenezer Small and John Tuckler arrived to make clearings and in 1801 Mr. Small brought his family from New Hampshire, the first family to enter the township. Mr. Elkins, because of failing health, soon left, but in 1802 his brother, John Elkins, came and completed the mills Samuel had started. Thus the township was called "Elkinstown" while a

This was the same Charles Vaughn who was so instrumental in helping to get Charleston settled.
When it came time to choose a name for the new town, considerable interest was aroused and it seems that three names were proposed. The first was Alton, suggested by Mrs. Small, wife of the first settler, after her home town in New Hampshire; the second being Gower, in honor of the Governor of Massachusetts at that time, a Federalist; while the third was Dexter, in honor of Samuel Dexter, a well-known and highly respected lawyer, who had been the Republican candidate at the previous election for Governor of Massachusetts. The Hon. Stanley Plummer in the historical address given at Dexter's Centennial in 1901 said: "The name given the town was undoubtedly suggested by the death of the Hon. Samuel Dexter, on May 4, 1816, about six weeks before the passage of the act of incorporation...Samuel Dexter was a leading Republican of his time and had been defeated as the candidate of his party for governor of Massachusetts the year before his sudden and premature death, which was a sad blow to his party. The township was strongly anti-Federalist in sentiment...and it was not unnatural that the name of the Republican candidate for Governor, who had recently been defeated, and then passed away under circumstances which strongly appealed to the sympathy of his friends, should be selected for the new town.\textsuperscript{117}

CORINNA - The year was 1816. The "Ontario", the first steamboat on the Great Lakes, was launched at Sackett's Harbor on Lake Ontario. Indiana entered the Union without slavery as the nineteenth state. In the District of Maine, Corinna was incorporated as the two hundred and twentieth town on December 11, 1816, the seventeenth in Penobscot County.\textsuperscript{118} It had previously been called Township No. 4 Range 4 North of the Waldo Patent and Warren Township.\textsuperscript{119}

The original proprietor was Dr. John Warren of Boston to whom the Commonwealth of Massachusetts transferred the township on June 30, 1804. He never visited his property but he always encouraged settlement there.\textsuperscript{120}

1815, the townspeople sent a petition to the General Court of Massachusetts asking for incorporation into a town by the name of "North Wood". It was over a year and a half later before the act of incorporation was granted (December 11, 1816) and by then the name had been changed to "Corinna". Dr. Warren had died on April 4, 1815, and one authority tells us that his son, Henry, came to Maine and built a house on Warren Hill in Palmyra and that he gave the names Corinna and Palmyra to the two towns out of respect for his two sisters. However it was accomplished, it seems to be true that the town of Corinna received its name from a daughter of Dr. Warren, the original proprietor.

NEWBURGH - The year was 1819. The Missouri Bill was introduced in the House of Representatives to enable Missouri to draft a constitution and to prepare for statehood. Massachusetts consented to separate statehood for the District of Maine and Maine thereupon asked for admission into the Union as a state. Only five towns were incorporated in the District that year, one being Newburg which was incorporated on March 13, 1819, the eighteenth in Penobscot County, and the two hundred and thirty-second in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township 2 Range 1 North of the Waldo Patent. Three spellings of the name have been used at various times--Newberg, Newburg, and Newburgh. The correct spelling is Newburgh and this gives the origin of the name which depicts the town as "a new town". This was an apt description as it was surrounded by incorporated towns at that time.

126 Attwood gives the date of incorporation as February 15, 1819.

ETNA - The year was 1820. The Census Bureau reported the population of the United States as 9,638,453. On March 15, Maine entered the Union as the twenty-third state. The last town to be incorporated in the District of Maine before the separation was Etna on February 15, 1820, the nineteenth town in Penobscot County and the two hundred and thirty-sixth in the District of Maine. It had previously been called Township 4 Range 2 North of the Waldo Patent, Crosby-town, and the Bowdoin College Grant.

The township was settled in 1807, among the early settlers being Dr. Benjamin Friend and Phineas Friend. The township at that time was owned by General John Crosby of Hampden and from this proprietor it received its early name of Crosby-town. When it came time for incorporation, it is said that Dr. Benjamin Friend selected the name from Webster's old spelling book, taking it from Mt. Etna in Sicily. Thus we find three towns in a row west of Bangor.

132 Thus 236 towns were incorporated before Maine became a separate and independent state. Attwood lists Etna as the 235th town and Hartland as the 236th town, but this seems in error inasmuch as Hartland was incorporated on February 7 and Etna on February 15, 1820. named after mountains—Hermon, Carmel, and Etna. Attwood tells us that the town was incorporated as "Aetna" but that the name was changed almost immediately to "Etna".

Chapter II
THE OAK GROWS
(1820-1839)

On March 15, 1820, Maine became separated from Massachusetts and entered the Union as the twenty-third state. From this date on the Acts of Incorporation for towns were granted by the Maine State Legislature.

During this period twenty towns were incorporated in Penobscot County. Some of these were west and northwest of Bangor, but beginning in the early thirties, we find the towns springing up along the Penobscot. Good farm land was still sought, but the big attraction was the forests and towns sprang up at favorable millsites on the Penobscot and its tributaries. By the end of the period, the line of incorporated towns had reached as far north as Chester and Lincoln and as far east as Springfield. With twenty-one towns incorporated in this span of nineteen years, this period was one of rapid growth and expansion.

GLENBURN — The year was 1822. The Rocky Mountain Fur Company was organized by William Henry Ashley of Virginia. The Florida Territory was organized which combined East and West Florida. In the State of Maine, the town of Glenburn was incorporated on January 29, 1822 under the name of 44.
Dutton, the twentieth in Penobscot County and the two hundred and forty-sixth in the State.\(^1\) It had previously been called, before Dutton, Township No. 1 Range 3 North of the Waldo Patent.\(^2\)

The township was settled about 1806 and when it became incorporated, it took the name Dutton in honor of Judge Samuel E. Dutton of Bangor who had a great interest in it.\(^3\) Fifteen years later, however, the townspeople had a change of heart and a petition was sent on January 2, 1837, to the State Legislature asking that the name be changed from Dutton to Glenburn.\(^4\) This request was granted by a resolve of the Legislature on March 18, 1837. The name is _____________________________ of Scottish origin, combining two words—"Glen" meaning a secluded narrow valley and "burn" meaning a stream. Thus it meant a stream (the Kenduskeag) in a narrow valley.5

MAXFIELD — The year was 1824. South Pass, the gateway of the Rocky Mountains, was discovered by Jedediah Strong Smith of the Rocky Mountain Fur Company. In the State of Maine settlers were pushing steadily up the Penobscot River and its branches. On February 6, 1824, Maxfield was incorporated as the two hundred and fifty-seventh town in the State, the twenty-first in Penobscot County.6 It had previously been called the Bridgton Academy Grant.7

Eleven thousand acres of the township were granted by the General Court of Massachusetts to the Trustees of Bridgton Academy to help support it. In 1814, the first settlers began to arrive, and soon after came Mr. Joseph McIntosh of Hingham, Massachusetts. The township was then called the Bridgton Academy Grant. Mr. McIntosh bought this grant about 1817 from the Trustees of the Academy. He had a large farm on the south side of the Piscataquis River known as "Mac's Field" by the settlers. Mr. McIntosh was a leading citizen of the community, building the first saw-mill, being actively engaged in a large lumbering business, and later on, in 1826, serving in politics as Representative to the State Legislature.

On November 1st, 1823, a petition was sent to the State Legislature, signed by Joseph McIntosh and 24 others, asking for incorporation into a town by the name of "Maxfield". I checked the original petition on file at the State House in Augusta and found the word Maxfield written as above. The "Ma" appeared to be the same as the rest of the petition; but, the "Xfield" was written over an erasure. It was impossible to make out what was underneath except the last two letters looked like "ld". It seems to me that might possibly lend some credence to the story that "Maxfield" was a corruption of "Mac's Field". Mr. McIntosh's name is the first signed on the petition, his large farm was commonly known as Mac's Field, and he was a leading citizen of the community. The writer of the petition could easily have been debating on how to spell the word, finally ending up with "Maxfield", spelling it as it sounded.

HUDSON - The year was 1825. The cornerstone of the Bunker Hill Monument was laid by Lafayette and Daniel Webster gave the oration. The Erie Canal was completed, connecting New York City with the Great Lakes. In Maine, the present town of Hudson was incorporated with the name of Kirkland on February 25, 1825. It was the twenty-second town incorporated in Penobscot County and the two hundred and sixty-third in the State of Maine.\(^{11}\) It had previously been called Township No. 1 Range 4 North of the Waldo Patent and had the plantation name of Jackson and the town name of Kirkland.\(^{12}\)

The township was organized as a Plantation in 1824, being so named in honor of Andrew Jackson who was running for the Presidency of the United States that year.\(^{13}\) The town name of Kirkland is of Scottish origin. In 1854 this name was dropped and that of Hudson substituted. The new name was in honor of Hudson, a town in Middlesex County, Massachusetts.\(^{14}\)

HOWLAND - The year was 1826. A high school for girls was opened in Boston, but, proving to be too popular, it was closed two years later. Jedediah Smith, a fur trader, left Great Salt Lake on the first overland expedition to California, going to San Diego. In the State of Maine, we find the settlers pushing up the Penobscot River, and it is not at all surprising that the first town north of Orono on the river to be incorporated should be located at the junction of the Penobscot and Piscataquis Rivers. Howland was incorporated on February 10, 1826, and the twenty-third town in Penobscot County, and the two hundred and sixty-ninth in the State.\(^\text{15}\) It had previously been called Township No. 1 Range 7 North of the Waldo Patent.\(^\text{16}\)

There were some scattered settlements in this area before 1818 at a place called Board Eddy.\(^\text{17}\) From 1818 on we know settlers began to fill in near Sebeois Stream and the mouth of the Piscataquis River. Among them was Major William Hammett of Plymouth, Massachusetts, who with William Emerson had purchased land in Howland some time

\(^{17}\)"Reminiscences of Penobscot River, by the late Col. Aaron Haynes, of Passadumkeag," Bangor Historical Magazine, II, 101. before 1820. Major Hammett himself came here in 1824, built a mill on Seboeis Stream, and became one of the leading citizens in the community. Major Hammett's mother was descended from John Howland, the Pilgrim, who first had charge of the trading post which the Pilgrims established at Cushnoco (now Augusta) on the Kennebec River in 1628. Thus in their petition of October, 1825, the townspeople asked the State Legislature "to incorporate said Township into a town by the name of 'HOWLAND' in memory of John Howland, one of the Pilgrim Fathers of New England, and in duty bound, will ever pray." This request the Legislature granted and was approved by the Governor on February 10, 1826, thus giving to Howland a name more distinguished than most people are aware of.

PLYMOUTH - The year was 1826. The last of the eight towns incorporated in the State that year was Plymouth, which, on February 21, became the twenty-fourth in Penobscot County and the two hundred and seventy-first in the State of Maine. It had previously been called Township No. 5 Range 2 North of the Waldo Patent and Chandlerville.

Part of Etna and part of Chandlerville (now Detroit) were taken to form the new town. The Etna part had been settled in 1807 and by 1812 the Chandlerville part was also settled. Among the early settlers in this latter part were Joseph and Amos Chandler who presumably gave their name to the town. Part of this township was owned by Dr. Elijah Dix of Boston who owned large tracts of wild lands in Maine. As his land agent Dr. Dix employed a Col. Butman who was an early settler of Plymouth and its most influential citizen. The Colonel's wife was a direct descendant of John and Priscilla Alden of Plymouth, Massachusetts. There were also other descendants of the Mayflower Pilgrims in the township and the first church was Congregationalist. Thus it seems that the town was named in honor of the original Pilgrim settlement.

LINCOLN - The year was 1829. Andrew Jackson was about to be inaugurated as President. The western frontier was still just beyond the Alleghenies; Abraham Lincoln became a pioneer in Illinois the following year; while the town of Chicago was laid out at Fort Dearborn. In the State of Maine settlers were still pushing up the Penobscot River. On January 30, 1829, Lincoln was incorporated, the twenty-fifth town in Penobscot County and the two hundred and eighty-fourth in the State of Maine. It had previously been called River Townships 2 and 3, Mattanawcook, and Foxcroft Academy Grant.

The first settlers came sometime between 1822 and 1824. Enoch Lincoln of Paris, Maine, purchased a tract of land here after first making a trip to explore the area. As the town was well situated on the Penobscot for lumbering, it grew quickly and was ready for incorporation about five years after the first settlers arrived. The town was then called Mattanawcook from the Indian names for a lake, stream and island located near the present business center.

28 Ibid.
29 "Early Mills on Penobscot River", Bangor Historical Magazine, V, 86. "In 1825, Ira Fish from Wakefield, N.H., went to Lincoln and commenced the building of a saw mill. They got the mill up the first of the winter, and used two puncheons and one barrel of New England rum and had not enough to finish raising and completing the mill, which was not done until the next year, 1826. This was then the uppermost saw mill on Penobscot River."
section of Lincoln. The meaning of the name is quite confusing as will be appreciated after reading Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm's explanation which follows:

Mata-naw'-cook, A lake, a stream, and an island in Lincoln.
Though all three lie very near together and the names are very similar in sound, the lake and the island names come from quite different roots.

Matanawcook Stream, the outlet of the lake.
...'At-the-end-of-it-an-island' is the idea. Matanawcook Stream enters the Penobscot behind one of the largest islands in the river.
Matanawcook Lake, for which Peter W. Ranco gave the name 'Madagam', with the meaning,
'lake which runs way down almost to the river'. Its outlet is extremely short, there being hardly a half mile in a direct course between the lake and the river, a feature presented by no other lake on Penobscot waters. 'Madagam' has nothing to do with Matanawcook. The first element is the familiar 'mata', 'at the end of', and the other,
'-gam', is a short form of '-gamok,' 'a lake'. The meaning is somewhat forced, but quite understandable: you are at the lake very soon; the stream stops shortly.
Matanawcook Island. This large island near the mouth of Matanawcook Stream has a peculiarity. At its lower end is a trail of small islets, slightly separated from it... 'Metinahguk' means, as Father Vetromile puts it, "full of many small, broken islands." It is not the name of the large island alone, but of the whole group, though most of them are insignificant, alluvial islets; that is, it is a 'feature' by which the large island could be identified and the voyageur would know where to turn off to get upon a route to some place beyond. Always in Indian travel the route was of more consequence than any place upon it, and the names were largely sign-boards, read from natural features of the place, indicating a choice of routes.30

30 Eckstorm, Indian Place-Names, pp. 53-55.
In 1829 when it was incorporated, the name chosen was in honor of one of the original proprietors, Enoch Lincoln, who was the Governor of the State of Maine at the time. 31

Lincoln has a large area consisting of two and one-half townships and is still divided today into four or five rather distinct settlements. It is interesting to note that one section is known as Trans Alpine ("Beyond the Alps"), being separated from Lincoln village by a long ridge. This designation was a creation of Mr. Henry Edwards, a local writer and poet, about whom the following amusing story is told:

In about the year 1885 the people in there [Trans Alpine] were trying to get a road through the valley to Lincoln Village. Mr. Edwards and Charles Brown, 1st Selectman of Lincoln were having a discussion through the Up River News in regard to this road. Being unsuccessful in getting the road, Mr. Edwards said: 'I have this last request to make: that this place be called Trans Alpine, and that this legend be placed on the sign-board at Douglas Corner, with its finger pointing tipsily up the hill: 'Let him who enters here leave hope behind.'" 32

STETSON — The year was 1831. The first steamboat trip on the upper Missouri River was made by the American Fur Company's "Yellowstone". The Indian leader, Black Hawk, agreed to withdraw the Sauk and Fox Indians to lands west of the Mississippi. In Maine, the first town incorporated that year was Stetson on January 28, 1831, being the twenty-sixth in Penobscot County, and the two hundred and eighty-eighth in the State of Maine.³³ It had previously been called Township No. 3 Range 3 North of the Waldo Patent and Leicester Academy Grant.³⁴

Stetson was settled about 1800³⁵ and was called Stetson Plantation for years, being named for Major Amasa Stetson of Dorchester, Massachusetts, who was an original proprietor.³⁶ When the town became incorporated it retained the plantation name, an unusual event when naming towns in Penobscot County.

BRADFORD - The year was 1831. "America", written by Samuel Francis Smith was first sung at Worcester, Massachusetts. In the State of Maine, with the incorporation of Bradford on March 12, 1831, we find that the first five ranges of townships surveyed and designated as North of the Waldo Patent are now entirely composed of incorporated towns. This filled in the southwestern area of Penobscot County with twenty-two towns, leaving only five towns out of twenty-seven incorporated so far outside of this area. From now on the settlements begin to push north and eastward from the Bangor area.

Bradford was the twenty-seventh town to be incorporated in Penobscot County and the two hundred and ninety-second in the State of Maine.37 Previously it had been called Township 1 Range 5 North of the Waldo Patent and Blakesburg.38

Bradford was settled about the year 1803 or 1804 by John White and Robert Marshall. In 1820 the township, having eleven registered voters and a population of eighty-three, was organized into a Plantation with the name of Blakesburg.39 I could not find the origin of this name but apparently it was called Blakesburg for a number of years before this. We find on the Bangor Records of Intentions of Marriage for February 3, 1811 the names of Peter Davis and Philena Wilbur of Blakesburg. Ten years later at a legal meeting held on Monday, September 13, 1830, the people designated a committee composed of Alvin Trask, Elial Coy, and Moses Stevens to secure the incorporation as a town by the name of Bradford. They forwarded a petition on September 23, 1830, to the State Legislature asking for incorporation "into a town by the name of Bradford". This designation was in honor of Bradford, Massachusetts.

LEE - The year was 1832. The Oregon Trail, running from Independence, Missouri, by way of the Platte and Snake Rivers to the Columbia River, was becoming the main route for settlers going to the Oregon country. In Maine settlers were still pushing up the Penobscot and were branching out from its banks. One branch was running out from Lincoln on the Penobscot when on February 3, 1832, Lee was incorporated as a town, the twenty-eighth in Penobscot County and the two hundred and ninety-eighth in the State. It had previously been called Township 4 Range 2 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase and Williams College Grant.

The township had been granted by the General Court of Massachusetts back in 1798 to Williams College, Williams-town, Massachusetts. Apparently it was then sold to parties who lived in Cumberland County. However, it was not until 1824 that the first settler arrived when Jeremiah Fifield moved there from Howland. The settlement grew and in January, 1832, the inhabitants sent a petition to the State Legislature asking for incorporation under the name of Lee. This was signed by John Carpenter and twenty-three others, including Nathan Lee.

There are four versions of how the town received its name. One says that the people were unable to agree on a name, so they decided that the next child born would receive the honor. The Lees had the next child born. A second version says that Stephen Lee, one of four brothers, suggested his own name, although this seems unlikely.

Another account says that Stephen suggested the name of General Lee, a patriot of the Revolutionary War and to make sure that this would be accepted offered to treat with a barrel of rum. The fourth account was related to me by Percie E. Lee, a descendant of the Lee brothers now living in Lee, as follows:

There was a group gathered in Prentiss's store. Arthur Prentiss suggested that they name it after the Lees as they would buy rum. Stephen Lee said to go ahead and he bought a barrel of rum. These four brothers were the sons of Nathan Lee.

Thus Lee was named for the four Lee brothers, Nathan, Stephen, Purchase, and James.

LAGRANGE - The year was 1832. Nathaniel J. Wyeth led a party of New Englanders along the Oregon Trail to set up a fishing and trading post on the Columbia River. In Maine another branch from the Penobscot River was started when Lagrange was incorporated as a town on February 11, 1832.

This barn was on the property of what is now the Hinckley place next to the high school in Lagrange. However, Miss Chadbourne says that the name was taken from that of Lafayette's estate in France which was near Paris.

BURLINGTON - The year was 1832. Captain Benjamin Louis Bualalie de Bonneville began a three-year exploration of the West. In the State of Maine, a third branch of settlements reaching out from the Penobscot that year was started when, on March 8, Burlington was incorporated as the three hundred and second town in the State and the thirtieth in Penobscot County. It had previously been called Township 2 Range 1 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase and Hurd's Ridge.

Tristram Hurd is reported to have been the first settler about 1824 and it was called Hurd's Ridge after him.

About 1830 the Post Office was called Burlington. When it became incorporated in 1832, this name of an old Massachusetts town was chosen.

MILFORD - The year was 1833. Andrew Jackson was inaugurated as President of the United States for a second term. In Maine the only town incorporated that year in Penobscot County was Milford on February 28, becoming the thirty-first town in the County and the three hundred and eighth in the State. It had previously been called No. 3 Old Indian Purchase East of the Penobscot River, Sunkhole, Sunkhaze, Sunkhaize, Sunk Hayes, Sunk-haze, and Sunkhase.

There were settlers in Milford as early as 1796. It was called Sunkhaze very early after the Indian name given to the stream which enters the Penobscot in the township from the east. This name it carried as a plantation.

Mrs. Eckstorm explains the Indian derivation as follows:

Wetchi-san-kas' sek, 'concealing outlet'.

The topography of Sunkhaze bears out the interpretation. The stream runs for a short distance almost parallel with the river, then, just before crossing Highway Number 2, turns almost at a right angle and enters the river very shortly, shutting off any view above this bend. In addition, between the highway and the mouth of the stream are two small, muddy islets which so block the outlet that from the river it looks like a mere indentation of the riverbank. 68

Among these early settlers who lived along the river banks at that early date were Lawrence and William Costigan at what became known as Costigan Brook. The post office in this section of Milford is still called Costigan and the name appears on road maps, sometimes as a separate town which, of course, is an error.

The designation "Sunkhole" may have been applied by some because in very wet weather, especially in the spring, the land is so low that a good deal of it in the area near the Stream is submerged. This still occurs even today.

With the excellent falls site between Old Town and Milford, mills soon began to spring up along the banks. The plantation had grown so that on October 26, 1832, a petition was sent to the State Legislature by the "...Inhabitants of the plantation of Sunkhase." which had "...been long settled and contains about four hundred Inhabitants..." asking to "...be in incorporated into a Town by the name of Milford." This was signed by John Butterfield and thirty-nine others. The name was chosen for Milford, Massachusetts, as some of the early settlers of Sunkhaze had come from there.

GREENFIELD - The year was 1834. The Reverend Jason Lee of Boston established a Methodist mission to the Indians on the Willamette River in Oregon. Weekly steamboat service was begun between Buffalo and Chicago. In the State of Maine, Greenfield was incorporated on January 29 as the thirty-second town in Penobscot County and the three hundred and tenth in the State. At that time Greenfield was a part of Hancock County, but on March 15, 1858, it was annexed to Penobscot County. It had previously been called Township 38 Middle Division Bingham's Penobscot Purchase, Plantation No. 38, and Greenfield Plantation.

Attwood says that Greenfield had also been called Olamon previously; as a reference he cites Bangor Historical Magazine, Volume V. This gives a long list of "Names of Towns in Eastern Maine with Ancient or Indian
The first settlers came about 1812 mostly from Massachusetts and were interested in the forests and the lumber to be had therefrom. Two theories have been advanced on how the Plantation received the name of Greenfield. One says that it received the name from its general appearance, its large green fields. The other says that the name was taken from Greenfield in Massachusetts. The latter theory may be the correct one inasmuch as we know some of the settlers came from the western part of Massachusetts where Greenfield is located; while here in Maine we know this general area along the Penobscot was covered by extensive, forest lands. The plantation name was asked for in the petition of the townspeople to the Maine State Legislature and that body complied by naming the town Greenfield.

SPRINGFIELD - The year was 1834. The branching of settlements eastward from the Penobscot from Lincoln to Lee and beyond was continued when on February 12, Springfield was incorporated as the three hundred and fifteenth town in the State, the thirty-third in Penobscot County. Previously it had been called Township 5 Range 2 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase and Foxcroft Academy Grant. The first settlers were James Bartlett and Elder Samuel Lewis, a roaring Baptist, who arrived about 1829. They plotted out land and then brought their families from Hiram. The northern half of the township was granted to Foxcroft Academy, hence its earlier designation. On August 24th, 1833, a petition was addressed to the State Legislature, signed by Charles Lowell and twenty-nine others, asking "...to be incorporated into a town by the name of Springfield." Miss Ruth Lewis, a descendant of the Elder Samuel Lewis, says that the name was chosen because of the natural intervals (openings) and the number of springs to be found in the locality.

CHESTER - The year was 1834. In this year a branch was started on the east bank of the Penobscot which has never become very strong, being still sparsely populated even

The first settlers came about 1823. Four years later Samuel Chester arrived from Chester, New Hampshire, and soon became an active leading citizen of the community. Thus when it came time to ask for incorporation, the name asked for came from Samuel Chester.\textsuperscript{81}

GREENBUSH - The year was 1834. Nathaniel J. Wyeth began the first settlement in Idaho at Fort Hall on the Snake River. The Department of Indian Affairs, and Indian Territory West of the Mississippi River, was set up by Congress. In the State of Maine, the thirty-fifth town in Penobscot County was created when, on February 28, Greenbush was incorporated as the three hundred and seventeenth town in the State.\textsuperscript{82} It had previously been called Township 2 Old Indian Purchase East of the Penobscot River.

There were settlers here probably as early as 1813, living at Stanley Point and at the foot of Olamon Island. At the present time, the main village in Greenbush is Olamon which name is taken either from Olamon Island or Olamon Stream. The word "Olamon" is Indian and means "red paint", deposits of which are found on the island and along the stream and were used by the Indians to paint themselves.

The name of Greenbush, given the town upon its incorporation, is derived from the forests which abounded there and gave the townspeople their main occupation. The original petition of the inhabitants asking for incorporation, signed by Benjamin Stanley and twenty-five others, is written in the same shade of ink and the same hand-

'Olamon- oosuk,' that is, 'Oulamon-1-suk,' 'red paint his place' was the Indian full name of it. 'Oulamon' was the word for 'vermilion', from 'oule,' 'good, pretty.' Deposits of red hematite, found on the island and stream, were much in demand for pigments and personal adornment. Hon. R. G. Leonard has told me that in paddling up Olamon Stream at very low water, the blade of his paddle was dyed red where he had driven it into the mud in rounding bends of the stream."

writing except for the word "Greenbush". This word is written in the same shade of ink as Benjamin Stanley's signature and the handwriting appears to be the same. So it seems that Benjamin Stanley, who was one of the earliest settlers, inserted the name "Greenbush" on the petition, but whether he originated the name or not is a matter of conjecture.

ENFIELD - The year was 1835. In Florida the Second Seminole War Began which lasted until 1843. The Cherokee Indians of Georgia ceded all of their lands east of the Mississippi River to the United States Government for $5,000,000 plus land in the Indian Territory. In Maine the State Legislature incorporated three towns in Penobscot County on the same day. One was Enfield which, on January 31, became the three hundred and twentieth town to be incorporated in the State and the thirty-sixth in Penobscot County. It had previously been called Township 1 Range 7 North of the Waldo Patent, Treats Tract, Cold Stream, Treats Grant, Treat's Mills, and Township No. 1, east of the Penobscot River.

88See Appendix H.
89Attwood, op. cit., p. 145.
90Ibid.; "The Incorporation of Towns in Penobscot County," Bangor Historical Magazine, II, 239; Mitchell, Daggett, Curtis and Gould (comp.), The Lincoln and Enfield Register, 1905 (Brunswick, Maine: H.E. Mitchell Company, Settlers began arriving about 1820, most of them from below on the Penobscot River and from Oxford County. The designations Treats Tract and Treats Grant came from the fact that General Joseph Treat of Bangor was granted 5,000 acres of land in order to erect mills to help settle the area. The village which grew up around these mills was called Treat's Mills or Cold Stream Village. This latter name was taken from that of the stream upon which the mills were erected. This area was in the southern part of the present town. The northern part was known as Township No. 1 east of the Penobscot River.

Two possibilities have been advanced as to how Enfield received its town name. The first settler to make a clearing was John Wood and he made it near the southern boundary of the town, so the name Enfield (the end field) was given. A second possibility is that the name came from an old English town in Middlesex.

It is of interest to note that the present village of West Enfield, which is located on the Penobscot River, was once known as the village of Montague. These are post-office names, but they have been used by the villagers as the name for their part of the town. In 1887 the Piscataquis Falls Pulp and Paper Company constructed a pulp mill at the village of West Enfield. The company's President was Samuel Montague and, beginning in 1888, the village was known by that name in his honor. In August of 1898 the International Paper Company bought this mill. It seems that the same company had a mill in Montague, Massachusetts, and shipments became so mixed up that it was necessary to change the address from Montague, Maine, to West Enfield in 1904. And so it has remained ever since.

EDINBURG - The year was 1835. Edinburg was one of three towns incorporated by the Legislature on January 31, the three hundred and twenty-first in the State and the thirty-seventh in Penobscot County. It had previously been called Township 1 Range 6 Old Indian Purchase West of the Penobscot River.

94 Mr. Stewart Lord of Burlington, Maine says that what is now called West Enfield had the following post-office names: East Howland, 1829-35; Enfield, 1835-44; West Enfield, 1844-88; Montague, 1888-1904; West Enfield, 1904-.

97 Attwood, Length and Breadth, p. 144.

The first settlers were in what is now Edinburg as early as 1813. Miss Chadbourne gives the origin of the town's name as follows: "...this town was doubtless given the name of the Scottish capital at the request of John Bennoch, previously mentioned as the builder of Bennoch Road. Nearly six miles of this road are in Edinburg, and settlement is largely in its northern part." 100

However, I have a different theory. During the 1820's and early 1830's, this area on the Penobscot River was known as Eddysburg among the settlers, presumably after Jonathan Eddy who had owned timberland there. In fact the original petition of the inhabitants dated October 1, 1834, to the State Legislature asked that the township "be incorporated into a town by the name of Edingburg." 101 Eddy's Town had become Eddington and now Eddysburg had become Edingburg. The original act of incorporation was entitled: "An Act to incorporate the town of Edingburg." 102 Finally, the name was corrupted again with the dropping of the first "g" and ended up as Edinburg.

PASSADUMKEAG - The year was 1835. Passadumkeag was the third of the three towns incorporated by the Legislature on January 31 of that year. It was the three hundred and twenty-second in the State, the thirty-eighth in Penobscot County.\textsuperscript{104} It had previously been called Township 1 Old Indian Purchase East of the Penobscot River.\textsuperscript{105} The name was taken from the small river that runs into the Penobscot here.\textsuperscript{106} The name is Indian meaning "above the gravel bar"\textsuperscript{107} and Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm explained its Indian derivation as follows:

The topographical peculiarity in this place is that the stream does not take its name from something at or in its mouth, but from rips some distance below it. Passing over these rapids on his way up river, the canoeman knew that he was near this stream, which was one of the most important routes to the eastward—a place he must not fail to identify. By way of the Passadumkeag one could go to the headquarters of Union River, Narraguagus, and branches of the Machias, and through two routes to places on St. Croix waters.\textsuperscript{108}

BRADLEY - The year was 1835. With the incorporation of Bradley on February 3, the line of settlements on the east bank of the Penobscot River was completed from Brewer up to Lincoln. It was the thirty-ninth town in Penobscot County and the three hundred and twenty-third in Maine. It previously had been called Township 4 Old Indian Purchase East of the Penobscot River.

There were settlers here before 1800 as Captain John Chamberlain recorded them when he surveyed the area in 1797. Among the first settlers was Bradley Blackman from Walpole, Massachusetts. On November 14, 1834, the townspeople sent a petition, signed by Jeremiah B. Boynton and twenty-two others including Bradley Blackman, to the Legislature asking to "be Incorporated into a Town by the name of Waldo..." But this name was already being used by a plantation in Waldo County and was embodied in the name of Waldoboro. Thus it could not be used. On the original petition, in a small handwriting different from that which wrote the body of the petition, appear the words "Bradley" and "Champlain" on the right hand side as if written in as suggestions to replace the designation.

"Waldo". This petition was referred to the Joint Standing Committee on Incorporation of Towns on January 16, 1835, and this committee seven days later reported favorably a bill to incorporate "a town by the name of Bradley". I have been unable to determine who wrote in the words "Bradley" and "Champlain" but it seems reasonable to accept the idea that the name was chosen to honor one of the first settlers and a signer of the petition, Bradley Blackman, it being a strong custom to name towns after either an early settler or an early proprietor.

LOWELL - The year was 1837. Michigan entered the Union as the twenty-sixth state and the Republic of Texas was recognized by President Andrew Jackson after being approved by Congress. In Maine, two years had passed since a town was incorporated in Penobscot County when on February 9 Lowell became the three hundred and thirty-eighth town incorporated in the State, the fortieth in Penobscot County. It had previously been known as Township 1 Range 1 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase, Huntressville and Huntersville.\textsuperscript{115}

The first settlers were Alpheus Hayden and Levi Doane (or Deane) who came here early in 1819 from Canaan in Somerset County, Maine. Soon others followed including F. D. Huntress. By 1836 the settlement had grown enough that the townspeople asked for incorporation into a town by the name of "Huntressville" in honor of that early settler, F. D. Huntress, and this was granted by the Legislature on February 9, 1837.\textsuperscript{116} However, about a year later a petition was sent to the Legislature by Alpheus Hayden and twenty others asking that the name be changed from "Huntressville" to "Lowell".\textsuperscript{117} Apparently Mr. Huntress had fallen into disfavor among the townspeople and the petition also complained that the great length of the name made it "inconvenient and troublesome."\textsuperscript{118} This request was granted and on March 22, 1838, the name was changed to Lowell. It is said that the name was chosen in honor of the first-born male child in the settlement, Lowell Hayden, who had been born July 16, 1821.\textsuperscript{119}

On February 20, 1841, part of the Pages Mills settlement was annexed to Lowell. The first school teacher in what is now Lowell was Mary C. Dean and the first minister was the Rev. Pinder Field. It was in honor of these two people that the plantation name was changed from "Pages Mills" to "Deanfield", which was its designation for many years before being annexed to Lowell.

On March 17, 1842, Cold Stream Settlement, Two Mile Strip, or the "Strip" north of Township No. 1, Bingham's Penobscot Purchase, was added. Mr. Stephen Messer and his brother-in-law, Samuel Darling, both of Blue Hill, Maine had moved into this area next to Cold Stream Pond as early as June, 1818. Part of this Strip was set off to Burlington on July 28, 1847, which left Lowell with its present area.

Chapter III

THE OAK REACHES MATURITY

With the incorporations of Patten and Mount Chase, our imaginary tree reaches its highest height during this period. Twenty-one towns were incorporated in this one hundred and sixteen-year period. This emphasizes the fact that by 1835, thirty-nine towns had been incorporated in the forty-seven-year span since Orrington became a town in 1788. Only twenty-one towns were incorporated during the eighty-six-year span from 1835 to 1921 when Drew became a town.\(^1\)

Altogether there have been sixty-one towns incorporated in Penobscot County from 1788 through 1955. Seven of these towns have surrendered their Town Charters and now have the Plantation form of government, leaving fifty-four incorporated towns at present.

\(^1\)If we use 1788 as a beginning and 1921 as an ending, we find that approximately two-thirds of the towns in Penobscot County were incorporated in the first third of this time, that is up to 1835; and that one-third of the towns were incorporated in the last two-thirds of this period of time.
mento, California. In Maine, two years had again gone by in Penobscot County before another town was incorporated. On March 8, 1839, Mattamiscontis was incorporated as the forty-first town in Penobscot County and the three hundred and forty-fifth in the State. It was formerly a part of Howland and carried the same designation as Township 1 Range 7 North of the Waldo Patent.

Apparently this section was settled about 1829 and received its name upon incorporation from a tributary of the Penobscot which flows through the town. Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm explains the Indian derivation of the word as follows:

Mad-am-as-cont'-es, "alewife stream". In Mattamiscontis Plantation.

Any one of these forms is preferable to the official name of the plantation, which wholly disguises the meaning of the word. This is not a 'mata-' word, indicating some feature at the mouth of the stream, but an alewife-abundance word. It comes from 'madamas', "alewife", and 'kañntti', indicating a place of occurrence, with the softened Penobscot locative '-es' rather than the diminutive '-sis', "little".

That this is the correct meaning is assured by finding, some twenty-five years since, an old man who could remember that in his youth alewives came to this stream in such numbers that early settlers carted them off by the horse-sled load...

ARGYLE - The Year was 1839. The Aroostook War took place in February and March in the boundary dispute with British trespassers in Aroostook County. On March 19, three days after Aroostook had been made a separate county, Argyle was incorporated as the three hundred and forty-sixth town in the State, the forty-second in Penobscot County. 6

Previously, it had been known as the Maine Literary and Theological Institute Grant, Birch Stream, Argyle Plantation, and No. 3, Old Indian Purchase. 7

Argyle had been a part of the ancient Birch Stream Settlement. The earliest settlers were in Argyle as early as 1797. 8 Upon incorporation the plantation name of Argyle was retained. The name comes from that of an old county in Scotland. 9

OLD TOWN - The year was 1840. The Census Bureau listed the population of the United States as 17,069,453. In Maine only three towns were incorporated that year. The last of these was Old Town, incorporated on March 16 as the three hundred and fiftieth town in the State and the forty-third in Penobscot County.\textsuperscript{10} The town was originally a part of Orono until set off and incorporated; so it had the same previous designations as mentioned above for Orono.\textsuperscript{11}

In 1839 a petition was sent to the Legislature signed by Nath'l Treat and 161 others who lived in the southern part of the town of Orono asking that that part of the town be set off from the northern part, "and incorporated into a town by itself bearing the name of Stillwater."\textsuperscript{12} This was not acted upon, but a town meeting was called on Monday, February 17, 1840. The inhabitants of Orono voted at this meeting to have the Selectmen of the town forward a petition to the Legislature asking for a division of Orono, "and to incorporate the Northerly part into a town to be called Old Town and the Southerly part into a town to be called Stillwater."\textsuperscript{13} This the Selectmen, Nath'l Treat and Timothy Mays, did on the very next day, February the 18th. The original bill passed the House of Representatives dividing Orono into Old Town (the northerly part) and Stillwater.

\textsuperscript{13}"Proceeding of a legal meeting of the Inhabitants of the Town of Orono on Monday, February 17, 1840" (see Appendix H).
On March 3, 1840, the Senate amended this bill but retained the same names. Then on March 7 the House passed the bill with an amendment marked "B" which said, "An amendment. Strike out the word Stillwater wherever it occurs and insert Orono except the words 'Stillwater river'". The Senate accepted this amendment on March 9, 1840. Thus it appears that members of the House decided to keep the name Orono which it still retains today.\(^{14}\) Probably few people living in present-day Orono realize how near they came to getting the original plantation name back again.

The name "Old Town", which was given to the northern division, came from the Indian village on Indian island.\(^{15}\) Some claim that the name is not of Indian origin, but comes from the white man and was only used after Colonel Thomas Westbrook made his expedition against the fort on Indian Island in 1722-23. It is true that after Westbrook's expedition we find various references made to Old Town; but this does not prove that the Indians may not have themselves referred to it as the "old town". Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstrom has this to say about the name:

Ne-gan-o-den'-ek, "old town". The Indian village on Indian Island.

\(^{14}\)See Old Town under Appendix H.

\(^{15}\)Eckstrom, Indian Place-Names, p. 31; Gannett, American Names, p. 230; History of Penobscot County, Maine, p. 458; Georgia Pulsifer Porter, "Old Town", Maine: Past and Present, p. 188.
Gatschet gives the form 'Nganudene', from 'neganie', something "old, worn out", and 'oudene', a "town" ('Handbook of the American Indian,' II, 118).

Though the name may have been applied after Colonel Westbrook burned the town in 1723, evidence that the Red Paint people had occupied the place for centuries before makes it probable that it was the "old town" ages before the white man came.

It is also probable that the word comes from one of the older languages. Father Pacifique gives in Micmac the word 'ngani otan', 'old town', and Lacombe has the Cree word, 'nikan, devant, en avant, premier', indicating that this was not a worn out and deserted town, but the 'first' town, the earliest. The form we give seems better than Gatschet's.16

PATTEN - The year was 1841. The first emigrant train to California, by way of the Oregon Trail, Humbolt River, and the Sierras, reached Sacramento that year. In Maine only four towns were incorporated during the year, one being in Penobscot County. Patten was incorporated on April 16, the northernmost town in the County up to that time,17 being the three hundred and fifty-fourth in the State and the forty-fourth in the County.18 It had previously been 17Only Mount Chase, which became a town in 1864, has been north of Patten, but it surrendered its incorporation in 1935 and became a plantation, so that today Patten is still the northernmost town in Penobscot County practically surrounded by wild land townships.

called Township 4 Range 6 West of the Easterly Line of the State. 19

The town was settled about 1828. Many of the early settlers came from Lincoln, Maine, and it was Ira Fish who sent a couple of men up who built the first log house in Patten. 20 For a while the town was called Fish's Mills after Ira Fish. 21 In 1840 the settlement was incorporated as Patten Plantation and it retained that name the following year when it became a Town. The name was chosen in honor of Amos Patten who had purchased the township from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. 22

ALTON - The year was 1844. Colonel John C. Fremont's expedition, which spent four years exploring the Far West, reached Sutter's Fort in the Sacramento Valley. In Maine three years had passed since a town was incorporated in Penobscot County when, on March 9, Alton became the forty-fifth town in the County and the three hundred and sixtythird in the State.\(^23\) As Alton was a part of Argyle Plantation before being set off, it has the same previous designations of the Maine Literary and Theological Institute Grant, Birch Stream Settlement, Argyle Plantation, and No. 3 Old Indian Purchase.\(^24\)

Stephen Tourtelott and his family were the first settlers to arrive in Alton in 1818. In 1815 the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had granted a part of the township to the Maine Literary and Theological Institute in Waterville. Birch Stream forms the eastern boundary of Alton, hence the designation Birch Stream Settlement.\(^25\) The origin of the name Alton is in doubt.\(^26\) Miss. Chadbourne says that the name is English and could have been taken from the English town Alton in Southampton, England.\(^27\) The original petition from the inhabitants asked the Legislature "...to incorporate the Plantation of Argyle into a Town by the name of Allton..." The original Act of Incorporation written in the handwriting of William T. Johnson, Clerk, reads: "...is hereby incorporated into a town by the name of Allton," with the second "l" crossed out as shown.

CARROLL - The year was 1845. Florida entered the Union as the twenty-seventh state while Texas entered as the twenty-eighth state. In Maine the line of settlements that branches off to the east from the Penobscot River at Lincoln and runs through Lee and Springfield was completed as far as the end of the Penobscot County boundary when Carroll was incorporated on March 30 as the forty-sixth town in Penobscot County and the three hundred and sixty-eighth in the State. It had previously been designated as Township 6 Range 2 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase. Settlement in the township began about 1830 and approximately fifteen years later had reached sufficient proportions that the inhabitants felt the need of becoming incorporated as a town. Accordingly, a petition was drawn up on December 23, 1844, signed by Thomas Lindsay and nineteen others, to be forwarded to the legislature. In it they listed the following reasons for desiring to be incorporated at that time:

...First: That we have in Said Township a population varying but Little from four hundred. Second: That we have nearly eighty Voters. Third: That we have about one hundred and fifty Scholars over four years Old, And Fourth that we have but one Road through the Township.

The final paragraph of the petition stated that the names of Greenwood, Greenville, and Sparta had been proposed for the town but that the Legislature would "Insert either or any other that you in youre wisdom may think more appropriate."

The Legislature did not use any of these proposed names. Thirty years earlier the name Sparta had been suggested in another petition for incorporation of another town, but the town received the name of Woodstock on February 7, 1815. The following year, the town next to Woodstock in Oxford County was incorporated as Greenwood, so this name could not be used. The third name was also rejected as Greenville in Piscataquis County had been incorporated on February 6, 1836. Thus it seems that the Legislature picked the name and according to local tradition the name was in honor of the famous Carroll family of Carrollton. 34

CLIFTON - The year was 1848. Gold was discovered in California and Wisconsin entered the Union as the thirtieth state. In Penobscot County three years had passed since the last town was incorporated when Clifton became a town under the name of Maine on August 7. 35 It was the three hundred and seventy-eighth town in the State and the forty-seventh in Penobscot County. 36 It had previously been called The Gore East of Brewer, Jarvis Gore, Maine, and Jarvis's Gore. 37

A gore has been defined as an area, triangular or irregular in shape, formed by diverging survey lines, often the result of inaccuracies. 38 Such a shape was bounded by the present towns of Bradley, Clifton, and Eddington, subsequently being annexed to Bradley on February 10, 1859. This area was known as The Gore East of Brewer from its geographical location. This big tract of land was owned by Leonard Jarvis of Surry, hence it was also known as Jarvis Gore. This area was settled as early as 1803. The people in the southwest section of Jarvis Gore petitioned the Legislature to be allowed to join Eddington and in 1823 this request was granted. The present town was incorporated on August 7, 1848 with the name of Maine, apparently so called after the State. But this designation did not prove to be very satisfactory. One can imagine the difficulties it would entail to the Post Office Department, for instance. Within six months when the warrant was issued for the March town meeting in 1849, the fifth article stated: "To see if the town wants to alter the name and if so what shall it be called." The meeting was held on the first Monday in March and the people voted to change the name from Maine to Clifton. It seems that this name was derived from the cliffy sort of hills to be found in the town. This change in names was granted by the Legislature on the ninth of June, 1849.

KENDUSKEAG - The year was 1852. The first through train from the East Coast reached Chicago. It has been four years since a town was formed in Penobscot County, but on February 20, Kenduskeag was incorporated as the three hundred and eighty-fifth town in the State and the forty-eighth in the County. As it was made up of parts of Levant and Glenburn, its previous designations were the same as theirs.

This area had been called Kenduskeag Plantation soon after the first settlers arrived, among these being Major Moses Hodsdon in 1801 and Decallis Clark in 1803. Levant was incorporated as a town in 1813 and Glenburn in 1822. Then in 1852 the Legislature set off a part of each of these two towns to form the present Kenduskeag. The name chosen was that of the old plantation days which had been derived from the river which flows through the town. The derivation of this Indian name for the river has been fully explained before in the section on Bangor, its meaning being "eel-weir place".

HOLDEN - The year was 1852. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe was published and, later that same year, was produced for the first time on the stage. In Maine a second town was founded in Penobscot County that year when Holden became incorporated on April 13 as the three hundred and eighty-ninth town in the State and the forty-ninth in the County. It was formerly a part of Brewer and so had the same previous designations as that town.

The area which now comprises the towns of Orrington and Holden and the city of Brewer was once known as New Worcester Plantation, named by Colonel John Brewer after his home in Worcester, Massachusetts. In 1788, Orrington was incorporated as the first town in the present Penobscot County and in 1812 Brewer was incorporated, being named after the original settler, Colonel Brewer. The area which embraces these three places was also called Plantation No. 9 or Township No. 9 from its number in the surveys.

The area which is now Holden was settled by people from Massachusetts. General John Blake of Wrentham, Massachusetts, explored this section in 1786 and moved here in 1787 with his family. In the Records of Deeds in Lincoln County we find that John Blake of Wrentham bought part of a tract of land "in the Plantation of China, so called on River Penobscot, April 10, 1787..." which is in present-day Holden. 54 General Blake called this settlement New Wrentham after his home town in Massachusetts. 55 After Brewer became a town in 1812 this part of the town was known as East Brewer. 56

As in the case of Brewer being separated from Orrington when the distance between the settlements was given as the reason for the request, so it seems this was the same situation between Brewer and Holden. A petition was addressed to the Legislature on April 18, 1851, signed by Charles Winchester and one hundred others, asking that the easterly part of Brewer be incorporated into a town by the name of Holden. 57 On the original petition another name had been written in first but then scratched out and "Holden" was written over it. It is believed that it was named after Holden in Massachusetts, a town lying near the city of Worcester in the general area of which many of the early settlers came from to Orrington, Brewer, and Holden. 58

VEAZIE - The year was 1853. The Territory of Washington was formed, being set off from Oregon Territory. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stretched as far as Wheeling, on the Ohio River. In Maine only one town was incorporated in 1853 and that was Veazie which, on March 26, became the three hundred and ninetieth town in the State and the fiftieth in Penobscot County. 59 It had previously been called North Bangor.

This area was formerly a part of the Seventh Ward in Bangor, but about 1852 the people living in this section felt they were too distant from the seat of government and petitioned the State Legislature to be set off from Bangor into a town to be called Veazie. It was named after General Samuel Veazie of Bangor who owned mills and extensive property in the area. 61 He moved to Veazie in 1854, building a fine house and becoming a leading citizen of the town. That same year he also bought the old narrow gauge Bangor, Milford, and Oldtown Railroad which was soon known as the Veazie Railroad and gave the town some fame.

WINN - The year was 1857. A country-wide celebration was held to observe the connecting of St. Louis with New York by railroad. That year in Maine three towns were incorporated, one being in Penobscot County. On March 21 Winn became the three hundred and ninety-eighth town in the State and the fifty-first in Penobscot County. It had previously been called River Township 4, Snowville, Five Islands, and Bridgetown.

Winn was settled as early as 1820 when Joseph Snow came up the river from Orrington and started a farm. At that time, his was the only house on the Penobscot River from the Falls at Howland to Mattawamkeag and also on the mail route up as far as Houlton. It was after this first settler that the community became known as Snowville. Settlement was made very slowly. By 1843, most of Winn was owned by John Fiske of Boston and a Mr. Bridge of Milford. It seems that the site of the village was called Bridgetown for a while.

We must now switch to Salem, Massachusetts, where we find that in the middle of the last century David Pingree of that town was engaged in shipping all over the world. In the period from about 1832 to 1862 he also had extensive land operations in Maine. One of his business managers was John M. Winn who resided in Bangor. He purchased the land owned by Fiske and Bridge which made him the principal proprietor of the township. 68

About 1852 the settlement was organized as Five Islands Plantation apparently after the "Five Islands" which are in the Penobscot at that point. 69 Settlement picked up now as steamboat navigation began on the Penobscot and a landing was established at Five Islands. By 1856 the inhabitants felt the need of incorporation and this was granted by the State Legislature on March 21, 1857. The name chosen for the new town was in honor of the principal proprietor, John M. Winn. 70 It is said that about this time, Mr. Winn got himself into financial difficulties, losing every cent that he had. He then returned to Salem, Mass., where he lived with two sisters and died on charity. 71

PRENTISS - The year was 1858. Minnesota entered the Union as the thirty-second state. The Overland Stage, on its first trip from San Francisco, reached St. Louis in twenty-three days and four hours; the Westbound stage, which left at the same time, reached San Francisco in twenty-four days, twenty hours, and thirty-five minutes. The first town incorporated in Maine that year was Prentiss which, on February 27, became the fifty-second town in Penobscot County and the three hundred and ninety-ninth in the State. It had previously been called Township 7 Range 3 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase.

The first settlers in this area came about 1836 or 1838, but others followed slowly for it was over twenty years before incorporation as a town was sought. Most of the land in the township was owned by the Hon. Henry E. Prentiss of Bangor. Mr. Prentiss had been Mayor of Bangor at one time and was a man of considerable wealth. It was after this principal owner of the township that the people named their town. Mr. Prentiss was pleased with this honor and helped the new town in various ways, one of which was to present the townspeople with a library of three hundred volumes.

MATTAWAMKEAG - The year was 1860. The Census Bureau listed the population of the United States as 31,443,321. Abraham Lincoln, Republican, was elected President of the United States with Hannibal Hamlin of Maine as Vice President.

Four towns in Maine were incorporated that year, one being in Penobscot County. On February 14 Mattawamkeag became the fifty-third town in the County and the four hundred and seventh in the State. 77 It had previously been called Township 1 Indian Purchase; Township No. 1, East Indian Purchase; Township No. 1, Indian Purchase, east side of the Penobscot River; Matawamkeag, Montawamkeag; Mederwomkeag; and Meddewamcaige. 78

The town was located on the site of an old Indian village and the name was taken from the river which flows through the town emptying into the Penobscot. 79 Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm gives the derivation of the Indian name for the river as follows:

'Mata-wamk'-eag', 'at the mouth a gravel bar'. This was the mark by which to recognize Mattawamkeag River, tributary to the Penobscot from the east.

79 Ibid.; Chadbourne, "Indian Names", The Maine Townsman, p. 4; Bacon, op.cit., p. 82.
The Indians named the affluents to a river by some easily recognized natural feature near its mouth. 'Matawamkeag' pictured to him a point of gravel on the upper side of the entrance where the current of the main river had crowded the wash of the smaller entering stream into a pointed bed of gravel. 'Matawamkeunk' would be an entering stream with a bed of gravel 'inside' its own mouth. 'Passadumkeag' was a stream entering 'above', or 'beyond', a gravel bar across the main river. Except at very high water one would never miss locating a gravel bar. Thus the little rivers named themselves.

The various spellings of Mattawamkeag - Meddewamcaige, Mederwomkeeg, Mederwomkeag - which are found in the "Journal and Maps of Joseph Chadwick, Survey of 1764 of Route from Fort Pownal on the Penobscot to Quebec" are examples of how some of our ancestors spelled the names of various places by sound and illustrate what might come out of such attempts.

MOUNT CHASE - The year was 1864. General Sherman made his destructive march across Georgia. Nevada entered the Union as the thirty-sixth state. In Maine only two towns were incorporated that year. In Penobscot County it had been four years since the last town was incorporated when, on March 21st, Mount Chase became the fifty-fourth town in the County and the four hundred and fifteenth in the State. It had previously been known as Township 5 Range 6 West of the Easterly Line of the State, Monterey, and Mount Chase Plantation.

The township was first settled in 1838. During the time of the Mexican War (1846-48) the area was known by the name of Monterey. It was organized as Mount Chase Plantation and when it became a town this name was retained. The name was taken from the mountain in the northern part of the town. One account tells us that the mountain received its name from a man named Chase who was in the area as early as 1825. He was probably hired by the State as an agent to drive timber thieves off the public lands. There was a great fire that year in the northern woods and Mr. Chase was caught in it; however, he fled to the safety of the mountain which has, since that time, been known as Mount Chase. The town has the distinction of being the northernmost incorporated town in Penobscot County. This incorporation was given up on March 22, 1935, and once again it was organized as a Plantation on April 6, 1936.

KINGMAN - The year was 1873. The Great Bonanza silver mine was discovered in Nevada. In Maine nine years have passed since the last town was incorporated in Penobscot County when, on January 25, Kingman became the four hundred and twenty-ninth town in the State, the fifty-fifth in the County.\(^87\) It had previously been called Township 6 Range 4 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase, Waterson and Pray Purchase and Camden Grant, McCrillis, and Independence.\(^88\)

About 900 of the 15,000 acres in the township were included in the Waterson and Pray Purchase while the remainder of the township was granted by Massachusetts to the town of Camden to help build a bridge across Duck Trap Stream. Even before settlers had moved in, the township was organized as McCrillis Plantation on July 4, 1859. This name was given apparently in honor of William H. McCrillis, a lawyer in Bangor, who devoted a lot of time to speculation in timberlands.\(^89\) It is supposed that the first settlers arrived about 1864.

About seven years after its first incorporation, the township was reorganized on March 28, 1866, and given the name of Independence Plantation, perhaps because of the date of the first incorporation. In another seven years the settlement was large enough to ask to become a town and this request was granted on January 25, 1873. The name given to the new town was in honor of Mr. R. S. Kingman of the firm of Shaw and Kingman. This firm had established a large tannery in the settlement which gave the town a considerable amount of prosperity for a time. On April 13, 1935, Kingman gave up her incorporation and once again was organized as a plantation, retaining the town name.

MEDWAY - The year was 1875. Gold was discovered in Deadwood Gulch, South Dakota. The States of Michigan and Minnesota granted school suffrage to women. In Maine only 92 The Shaw Brothers controlled tanneries in about half a dozen towns in Penobscot and Washington Counties at this time. Their business was large and they hoped to control the sole leather business for the whole United States. Their schemes were too big and they failed and with this the bark tanneries disappeared from such towns as Kingman, Vanceboro, and Grand Lake Stream.

one town in Penobscot County was formed that year. On February 8 Medway was incorporated as the four hundred and thirty-eighth town in the State and the fifty-sixth in the County.\textsuperscript{93} It had previously been called Township A Range 6 West of the Easterly Line of the State, Nicatow, Nicatou, Tract Z, and Pattagumpus.\textsuperscript{94}

The town was settled in 1838 and enough settlers were there by 1852 to be organized as a plantation under the name of Nicatow (or Nicatou).\textsuperscript{95} Mrs. Fannie Hardy Eckstorm gives the Indian derivation of the name as follows:

Nicatow, "fork of a river." The old name for Medway, which lay at the great fork of the West and East branches of the Penobscot.

The word is entirely simple -- 'nik-', "two," indicating an even division, or branches of equal importance, and a remnant of '-tevev,' inseparable ending meaning a "river," "stream with a current."\textsuperscript{96}

It was almost twenty-five years later before the settlers numbered enough for incorporation as a town. When this was done on February 8, 1875, Pattagumpus Plantation (formerly known as Letter Z or Tract Z) lying in Township 2 south of Nicatow was added to the new town.\textsuperscript{97} given to this new area was Medway. This seems to be derived from the fact that the town lies about midway, as the crow flies, between the northern line of the County and the southern line near Bangor. 98

For a number of years one of the post offices in Medway was called Pattagumpus. This is a corruption of the Indian name for a stream which enters the Penobscot River from the west in Medway. Mrs. Eckstorm explains the Indian derivation of the name as follows:

The best explanation of the word found was given in 1914 by Joseph Francis, one of the finest of our Indian guides, who said it meant "a sharp turn in the river where the bottom is gravelly". Another informant said that at low water there is a curving sandy beach near the mouth of the stream.

The spelling 'Patagumnis' is greatly to be preferred to Pattagumpus, or to the illiterate Paddygumpus of the rivermen. The correct 'Petekamkis' can hardly be restored at this late day. 99

WOODVILLE - The year was 1895. The insurrection against Spanish rule broke out in Cuba. The first automobile race in the United States took place in Chicago and was won by J. F. Duryea who averaged 7 1/2 miles per hour for 54 miles.

In Maine, twenty years had passed since the last town was incorporated in Penobscot County when Woodville, on February 28, became the four hundred and sixty-first town in the State and the fifty-seventh in the County. It had previously been called Township 2 Indian Purchase, West Indian Township, and Indian Township No. 2.

The first settlers came in 1832 but it was 1854 before the township was organized as a plantation with the name of Woodville. It is said that a member of the family of Benjamin Stanwood suggested the name which seems appropriate as wood has been its greatest commodity down through the years. Forty years later when the legislature finally incorporated the settlement as a town, the name Woodville was continued.

MILLINOCKET - The year was 1901. Carrie Nation made her hatchet raid upon Kansas saloons in Wichita. President William McKinley was assassinated and Vice President Theodore Roosevelt took office as President. Only two towns were incorporated in Maine that year. One was in Penobscot County which had seen six years pass since the last town incorporation. On March 16 Millinocket became the four hundred and sixty-seventh town in the State and the fifty-eighth in the County; in addition, it was the first town in the State to be incorporated in the 20th century. It had previously been called Township 3 Indian Purchase, Indian Township No. 3, Millinokett, and Milnokett.

When the town was incorporated in 1901, it was set off from Indian Township No. 3. The name chosen was taken from Millinocket Lake and Millinocket Stream. The stream flows from the lake through the town and empties into the West Branch of the Penobscot River. Miss Ava H. Chadbourne gives the Indian derivation of the word as follows:

"...The word means 'dotted with many islands', and is a description of the lake which bears the name..." Others give approximately the same meaning to the name.

EAST MILLINOCKET - The year was 1907. The largest number of immigrants ever to come to the United States in one year, 1,285,349 arrived. The U.S. fleet of 16 battleships left Hampton Roads, beginning its trip around the world. In Maine, six more years had passed before another town was incorporated in Penobscot County. This was East Millinocket which shows just how fast this area of the County was growing at the turn of the century. On February 21 it became the four hundred and seventy-second town in the State and the fifty-ninth in the County. It had previously been called Township A Range 7 West of the Easterly Line of the State and when incorporated was set off from this township. The name chosen was given because of the geographical location of the new town in relation to Millinocket.

DREW - The year was 1921. War with Germany was officially declared at an end, while the Washington Conference for the Limitation of Armaments opened that year. In Maine, only two towns were formed, one being in Penobscot County.

Drew was incorporated on April 5 as the four hundred and eighty-third town in the State and the sixtieth in the County. It had previously been called Township 7 Range 4 North of Bingham's Penobscot Purchase.

The area was settled about 1825 but it was thirty years before it was organized as a plantation, on September 8, 1856, with the name of Drew. The township had been purchased on the 16th of June, 1829, from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by Thomas Drew of Bangor who acted as assignee for Waterson, Pray and Company, Merchants of Boston. His name was chosen for the new plantation and when a town was formed some sixty-five years later the same name was retained. The Act of Incorporation was repealed on March 24, 1933 effective March 1, 1934 and Drew again became a plantation.

There is in Drew Plantation a post office with the name of Wytopitlock. This name was taken from Wytopitlock Stream which runs into the Mattawamkeag River. This is the Indian designation for the stream and Mrs. Eckstorm gives

STACYVILLE - The year was 1953. On March 26 of that year Stacyville was incorporated as the sixty-first town in Penobscot County. It previously had been called Township 3 Range 6 West of the Easterly Line of the State and Staceyville Plantation. 120

About 1850 James Stacey became the first settler in this township. 121 In 1860 when Staceyville Plantation was organized on July 30, the name of this first settler was honored. 122 The spelling was changed from Staceyville to Stacyville at the time the Post Office was set up. 123 This name was continued upon incorporation as a town.

APPENDIX A

Letter of September 17, 1879, from William Henry Kilby, Boston, Massachusetts, to P. E. Vose, Dennysville, Maine.

Boston, Sept. 17 1879

Friend Vose

Can you ascertain when Mr. B. R. Jones first published his map of Passamaquoddy. The copy which I have places Dennysville and Perry among the incorporated towns. From some things I have heard, I think the first edition must have been issued several years earlier than the incorporation of those places.

I have recently got possession of a lot of valuable historical matter which I should like to have you examine. A lot of old paper stock from St. John was landed from one steamer and one bag burst open. One of our officers came along and told me it contained old letters and documents dated in 1790. I ran out and soon found papers worth saving. The old Chipman house at St. John is being remodelled and the executor of the estate sold to this junk dealer a mass of old account books legal papers and other matter which had accumulated there. The first Ward Chipman graduated at Harvard in 1770 and was the leading man of the Loyalist settlers at St. John, and his son Ward Chipman who graduated at Harvard in 1805 became Chief Justice of the Province and died within my recollection without issue, and these were their papers. It is strange that they were not examined and those of historical value put into some public institution or kept by some antiquarian. The father was the agent of the British government before the commission appointed to settle the Eastern boundary after the first treaty with Great Britain and the son held the same position before the commission for similar purpose after the Treaty of Ghent and I got out of the bag a lot of papers connected with these two treaties, throwing a good deal of light upon the early history of Moose Island and the other places in Passamaquoddy Bay, and giving the points in the rival claims of the Schoodic and Magguguaudavic as the true St. Croix. The examination has been a feast to me and my only regret is that I did not secure the whole bag for overhauling at leisure.

We are all very well. With kind regards to Lydia May and the rest, I am

Very truly yours,

W. H. Kilby

Petition of Selectmen:
To the Hon....in Legislature assembled.

according to the line petitioned for by Nath'l. Treat and others...and to incorporate the Northerly part into a town by the name of Old Town and the Southerly part to be called

Orono Feby 18th 1840

Nath'l Treat)Selectmen of Timothy Mays) Orono

Act of Incorporation:
(Original Bill passed the House dividing Orono into Old Town (Northerly part) and Stillwater (Southerly part).
The Senate amended this on March 3, 1840, but still read to divide town into Old Town and Stillwater.
Then the House passed the Bill on March 7, 1840, with an amendment marked "B" (a piece of paper marked "B" saying:
"An amendment. Strike out the word Stillwater wherever it occurs and insert Orono except the words 'Stillwater river'").
So apparently the House decided to keep the name Orono.
The Senate accepted this amendment on March 9, 1840.
The Senate on March 10 reconsidered the March 9 vote and added amendment "C" changing the Title of the Act (a piece of paper marked "C" saying: "An Act to divide the Town of Orono and incorporate the North part into a Town by the name of Old Town").
On March 11, 1840, the House accepted Amendments A,B,C.
