Cutler Health Center offers immediate help for women concerned about pregnancy

By Wendy Skillin
Volunteer Writer

You are having sex with your partner when the condom breaks.

For women who go to Cutler Health Center immediately for help and are told of the options, the morning after pill is mentioned. What is it?

The morning after pill [MAP], also known as Postcoital Hormonal Contraception, is actually a series of two to four birth control pills commonly called Ovral. It is taken within 72 hours of unprotected intercourse to disrupt the process of conception, according to Ruth Lockhart, coordinator of Women's Health Services of Cutler Health Center.

Two pills are taken right away and two more are taken after 12 hours.

"The concentrated doses of the hormone estrogen from four pills taken in a short time span disrupts the travel of the egg down the Fallopian tubes so it does not implant in the uterus," Lockhart said.

According to The New Our Bodies, Ourselves by the Boston Women's Health Book Collective, the "MAP" has a failure rate of only .16 to 1.6 percent.

If it is so effective, then why doesn't everyone know about this option?

"Cutler has the administrative support to publicize, but there is always a fear that women might use it as a birth control method. It is important to know that it is not a form of birth control. It is used only in emergency situations," Lockhart said.

She said not just any woman can come in and take this. There is an extensive screening process each woman must go through to see if she is eligible.

The screening process starts with the peer educators at Cutler Health who serve students' needs. They ask the patient if they have had unprotected intercourse to determine if there is a cause for alarm.

They also ask questions about possible problems with birth control and give them the facts about MAP.

According to Shellie Morcom,

UMaine students, teachers pleased and worried about changes in USSR

By Elizabeth Satterfield
Volunteer Writer

The rapid change of political alignment in the Soviet Union in the past year is unprecedented.

Its effects will be far reaching.

Political Science Professor James Warhola of the University of Maine teaches a course about the communist government of the Soviet Union.

Warhola said there were general warning signs to the fall of communism. These warnings began with Gorbachev's announcements for the need of radical reform in 1985.

"This was nothing new in itself," he said. "The need for change has been talked about since Lenin's regime."

Warhola said it was soon clear the changes made by Gorbachev were both significant and substantial.

He sees two major turning points that led to the destruction of Communist power.

The first came about in June 1988 at the 19th Communist Party Conference. The central question was how to make the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics a democratic nation. This goal and the acknowledgment of a problem was unusual. That it was discussed at the party conference proved its seriousness.

"Since Stalin's regime in the 1930s, the official line was USSR was the most democratic nation in the world because it was led by the Communist party which 'governed with

Reception held for MCA director finalist

By Mike McLaughlin
Staff Writer

Monday night a reception was held at the Maine Center for the Arts for Bruce Marquis, one of four finalists for the position of director of MCA.

Marquis, director of the fine arts programming at the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, spoke with and answered questions from several UMaine administrators and MCA staff members who attended the reception.

Those in attendance mainly inquired about Marquis' experience and ability in balancing a budget and management.

Marquis also spoke in-depth about his philosophy on arts programming.

When asked about his experience in raising money, Marquis said at the University of Wisconsin he has had "significant experience working with government grants."

Marquis said he has also been successful in gaining funding for arts programming from the outside community.

He explained another method he uses for balancing the budget is through balancing the number of major artists and lesser known artists.

He said major artists are able to attract large audiences and large profits.

Marquis said he does not, however, neglect lesser known artists, because they bring a good diversity to the programming.

He said they may not bring in the profits major artists do, but lesser known artists do not cost as much to book either.

Marquis said in Milwaukee the visiting arts program has to be "self sufficient."

"If it is not it will be cancelled," he said.

As the director of fine arts programming in Milwaukee, he is "responsible for programming, managing, and marketing all of the performances for the school of fine arts."

He explained because of the busy schedule at the fine arts department in Milwaukee, there is "no reason to add to any stress among staff members."

"I operate in very close communication and cooperation," Marquis said.

He said he emphasizes "the fact that everyone has input on all decisions."

"People have to want to come to work. You should build the same good will among staff that you build with your audience," Marquis said.

One practice Marquis said he follows is not repeating artists too often.

"You need to keep providing new experiences for your audience," he said.

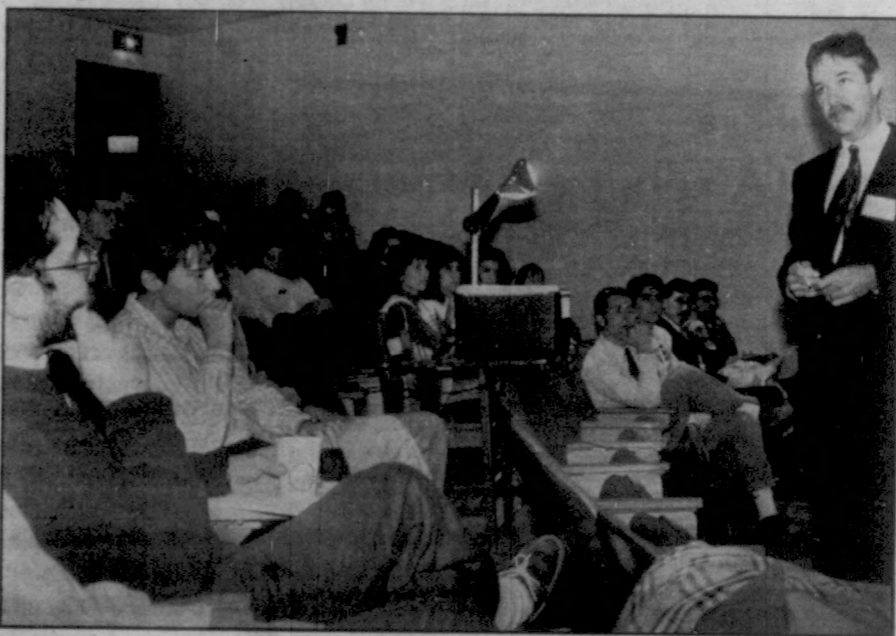

Marquis explained he would have to look at the programming schedule to determine what changes he might make at MCA, but he said he would make "no changes in the tone or direction the program is currently set upon."

Marquis, who has been in Maine since Saturday night, said UMaine is a "wonderful campus" and he is "very impressed by the layout of the campus and the center."

◆ Espionage

American soldier convicted in Desert Storm espionage case

1 HEIDELBERG, Germany (AP) — An American soldier has admitted he spied for Jordan during the Desert Storm buildup and was sentenced to 34 years in prison, the U.S. Army said Monday.

Army headquarters in Heidelberg said Spc. Albert T. Sombolay also admitted getting in touch with Iraqi officials. He pleaded guilty to charges of espionage and contacting the enemy. Sombolay was paid "about $1,300 for his activities," the Army said.

Sombolay was arrested March 29 and sentenced in July, but information about the case was delayed so investigators could continue the probe, the Army statement said. It provided no other details.

"During an investigation prior to his arrest, Sombolay had told an undercover agent he had initiated contact with the Jordanian and Iraqi embassies in Belgium and Germany in December 1990," the American military said.

At the time, the United States and its allies were building up troop strength in Saudi Arabia before launching Desert Storm, the offensive to drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

The statement continued: "He subsequently admitted to providing Desert Shield-Desert Storm deployment information, identification documents and samples of U.S. Army chemical protection equipment to a foreign intelligence officer from Jordan."

◆ Refugees

Italy refuses boatload of asylum seekers

3 GALLIPOLI, Italy (AP) — Italian authorities on Sunday turned away a fishing boat carrying 23 Albanian asylum-seekers from this port on the Ionian Sea, a report said.

Italy has been turning back asylum-seekers from the former Stalinist nation since more than 40,000 Albanian boat refugees flooded Italian ports in two waves earlier this year.

Aboard the fishing boat were 23 people, including five deserting soldiers, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

After being told the boat wouldn't be allowed to dock, two soldiers jumped into the sea. But the crew of one of the Italian ships blocking the port picked up the two and put them back on the fishing boat, ANSA said.

◆ Rodney Dangerfield

Comedian settles claim

4 LAS VEGAS (AP) — Attorney for comedian Rodney Dangerfield and Caesars Palace have reached a settlement stemming from Dangerfield's claim he suffered eye injuries in a backstage steam room accident at the resort.

The agreement means there won't be a second trial on Dangerfield's claim for damages from the 1988 incident.

Dangerfield's attorney, Dean Vernon, said both sides agreed the amount of the settlement would not be revealed.

Dangerfield was awarded $500,000 by a federal court last year for pain and suffering and another $225,000 for shows he missed.

◆ Healthcare

OSHA sets new rules

5 WASHINGTON (AP) — Government guidelines issued Monday for protecting health care workers from AIDS and other blood-borne diseases would force hospitals and other businesses to provide protective clothing and offer free hepatitis vaccinations.

Many hospitals and health care clinics already require their employees to wear latex gloves, mouth guards, gowns and other protective clothing, the Labor Department said, but the new guidelines establish penalties for those who don't.

The new standards will cost businesses about $820 million a year, with the largest expense for personal protective equipment such as gloves, OSHA said.

About five million health care workers will fall under the new Occupational Safety and Health Administration guidelines, the Labor Department estimated, along with an additional half-million workers in other businesses.

◆ Peace talks

Palestinians to give PLO advisers visas, will participate in peace talks

2 AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Palestinian delegates to the Arab-Israeli peace talks resolved a dispute with the United States over visas for seven PLO advisers and decided Monday to participate in the next round in Washington, a delegate said.

"The problem was solved and we will be traveling to Washington tonight (Monday)," said Samir Abdullah, a member of the 14-man Palestinian delegation to the talks, which the Bush administration scheduled to begin Wednesday.

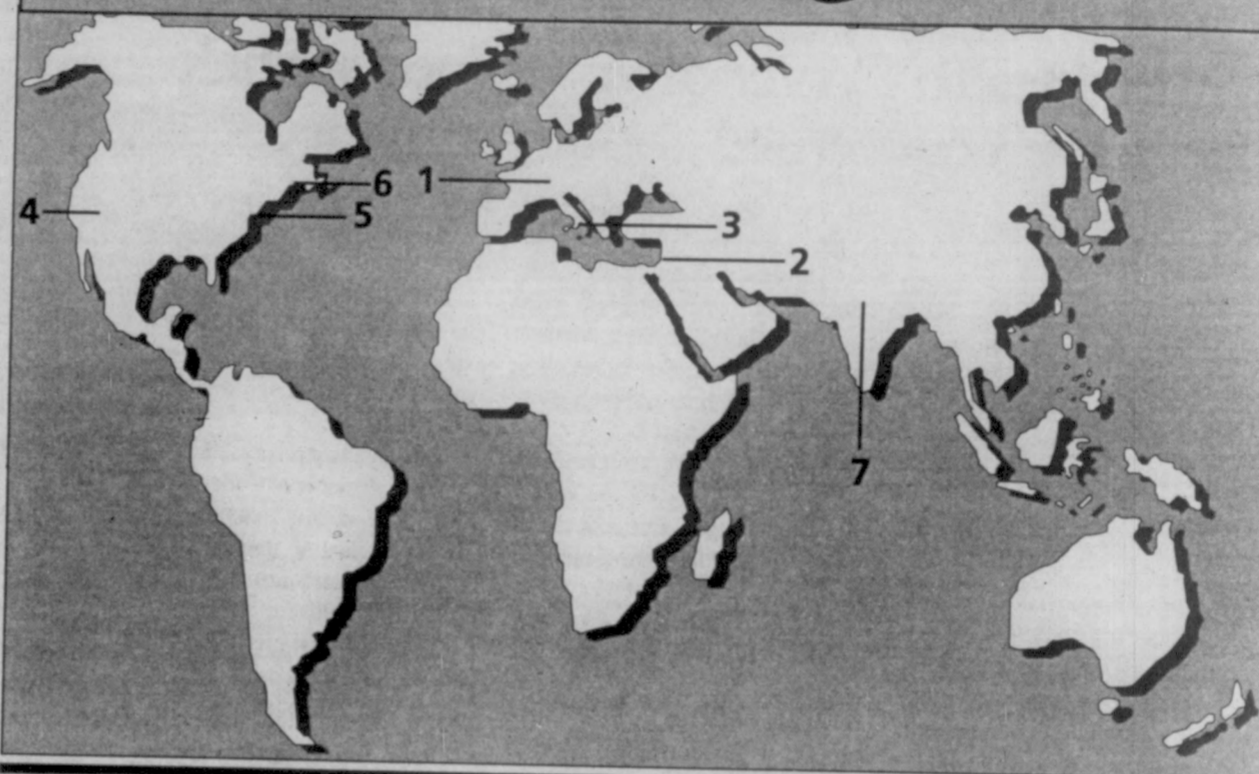

The visa issue had threatened to become a second potential snag for the next round of negotiations.

Israel has objected to that date, complaining it was not consulted ahead of time, and said its delegation would not arrive until Dec. 9. The Israeli Cabinet reaffirmed that stand Sunday.

Jordan, the Palestinians, Syria and Lebanon all accepted the U.S. invitation of the talks scheduled for Wednesday, which are a follow-up to the peace conference that began in Madrid, Spain, on Oct. 30.

But a Palestinian delegate, Ghassan Khatib, said earlier Monday that the group would stay home unless visas were given to seven Palestine Liberation Organization officials who planned to advise the delegation in Washington. They emerged after six hours of negotiations to say the problem was resolved.

◆ Health hazard

PCBs found in water

6 PORTLAND (AP) — State officials are warning Mainers who draw their drinking water from drilled wells that they could face a health hazard from older pumps that may lead a cancer-causing chemical.

"I think we've got a potentially serious problem," said Eugene Moreau in the health engineering division of the Department of Human Services.

Cases of well water being contaminated by PCBs leaking from submersible pumps have surfaced in other states, although none has been reported in Maine. About 60 percent of Maine homes get their water from private wells.

PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls, had been widely used for insulation and flame resistance in electrical components until the chemical was banned in 1976 after being linked to cancer and other health problems.

Experts stress that most submersible pumps are probably safe. Concern is focused on pumps made prior to 1979 which are connected to power by two wires, instead of three, and which are cooled by oil rather than waste.

Owners of pumps that fit that description should check their records or contact the installer to trace the model. If that is impossible, state officials recommend replacing the pump as a precaution.

◆ Bombing attempt

Sikh held for planting bomb on Air India jet

7 NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police Monday arrested a Sikh employee of a catering service for allegedly planting a crude bomb aboard an Air India jet bound for New York, a news agency reported. The bomb was found Sunday minutes before the packed jetliner was to fly to London and then on to New York from New Delhi's Indira Gandhi International Airport. The plane was evacuated and the bomb was defused.

The news agency Press Trust of India said Balwinder Singh Nigah was arrested at his New Delhi home, where police found electrical and explosive materials identical to those used to make the bomb.

A steward found the bomb in a food container near the cockpit of the Boeing 747. If it had exploded, it could have started a fire and damaged the aircraft extensively, investigators said.

It was not immediately clear how the bomb passed a mandatory security check by the security staff of Chef Air, the official caterer for Air India, India's international flag carrier.

Press Trust said Nigah was a middle-level executive at Chef Air and said he told police he made the bomb and planted it in the container.

the interest of all people," Warhola said.

Major structural changes were needed at all levels of government. The new democratic election of the legislature in 1989, the Congress of People's Deputies, was the foundation for all change. According to Warhola, it was the first "real political watershed event" because the domination of the Communist party was controlled as a result of the election.

The second change was the Communist surrender of their political monopoly in February of 1990 by allowing opposition in the form of new political parties and giving up economic domination. The new legal opposition was especially influential.

"It is impossible to overstate the significance of this event," Warhola said. "It paved the way for the break up of the USSR in an ethnic sense. The Communist party had been the glue holding the country together."

"It's time we rid ourselves of the fiction of the Soviet regime developed by Western democracies," said Professor Richard Blanke of the UMaine History department. Blanke specializes in historical study of Slavic people and Eastern Europe. He said the split of the Soviet Union and parallel collapse of so many apparently solid dictatorships was inevitable. Marxism and Leninism are not suited for real people and situations. Therefore, the dictatorships were never "solid."

"No philosopher's ideas have ever been given such an extended try-out," Blanke said.

Soviet Students' concerns

The reality of changes is perceived differently and sometimes not as enthusiastically by the Soviets as the rest of the democratic world.

Igor Cherepanov and Misha Beznosov are exchange students at UMaine from the Ukraine.

"My parents and friends at home tell me they see big changes now. Mostly on an economics sphere. Prices for goods are double, sometimes triple what they used to be," Cherepanov said.

According to Alans Jolis for Vogue, 40 percent of the population in Moscow live below the poverty level and the average citizen stands in food lines for four hours a day.

Beznosov was a member of the Communist party until its recent demise. "I was afraid of the increase of the nationalist movement in the Union and the Ukraine. I felt the Communist party was a power which could stop the advancement. For me, nationalism is like fascism. I was afraid our situation would become worse," Beznosov said. "I don't see clearly how the political changes will help our economy become a free market."

While many Americans were generally surprised at the coup attempt on Aug. 18, 1991, there were warnings given to the Soviet people.

Shevardnadze and Yakovlev predicted the coup and some type of military uprising.

"Many famous political people had been on television saying, 'Be careful. Something is going to happen.' Most people didn't pay attention. They worried about simpler problems; food, money, and jobs," Beznosov said.

"It was good the attempt happened," Cherepanov said. "Really big changes followed within the next three days."

The same economic problems linger. There is a huge deficit of consumer goods. Some items are available on the black market but are not affordable to the average citizen. Another negative aspect of the economic system is the lack of consumer service. Training and assistance is needed to develop components of a strong economy.

"During the existence of the Soviet state there has been no foundation for consumer service," Beznosov said.

"The Soviets have poor methods of management," Cherepanov said.

"It is important to people to have freedom but it is more important to have clothes and food. Without those things, one cannot exist. Democracy is abstract, not a needed commodity," Beznosov said. "People say Gorbachev gave us more freedom and stopped the Cold War. This is not as important to the Soviets as to the rest of the world. After Perestroika, many things became worse."

The problems of transition

Warhola said deep rooted political traditions of centralized and autocratic rule coupled with historical political attitudes may make the transition to democracy difficult.

"The widespread public resistance against the attempted coup shows an emergence of something like a democratic political culture," Warhola said.

"The question becomes, are the people strong enough to overcome authoritarian tendencies during economic deprivation? Historically, political turmoil is greatest during economic hardship. Restraint needed for democratic success can be managed as long as people are willing to compromise and equally share the suffering," he said.

"In 20 years Russia could have a booming economy like that of Japan. Once they rid themselves of the stupid economic system they have now, they can grow."

Blanke said even for a time, if the union does subvert to an authoritarian regime due to economic pressure, it wouldn't necessarily be a step backward.

"When half the people grow up, they can make a second try for a democracy, Blanke said. "I don't like arguments that certain people aren't suited for democracy. People used to say that about Germany. It's the most successful democracy in Eastern Europe today."

"Alexis De Tocqueville predicted 150 years ago Russia and the United States would dominate the future world. I believe that prediction is still sound. Russia, on the eve before the beginning of WWI, was the number two agricultural exporter and ranked as the number five industrial power. If you were 70 years old in Russia, you'd want to strangle somebody, you'd feel robbed," he said.

Old and new roles of the US

Warhola categorically places the present government of the Soviet Union as a de-facto confederation. "In terms of actual legal operation, it's still a federalist system of government," he said. More political power, however is being generated at state level.

"The United States has to face the fact USSR is done as a political unit," Warhola said.

Warhola, Beznosov, and Cherepanov agree leaders of individual states will emerge as the people for nations to interact with in matters of foreign policy.

A recent article in Time, "Just Why Did Communism Fail?" asked how much of a role the United States policy of containment and defense build-up during the 1980s played in the break-up of the Soviet Union.

"We have to avoid extremes. On one hand, we can't say 'By God! We did it,' but it's equally irresponsible to say international communism would have dissolved without Western resolve. The answer lies in between," Warhola said. "The resolve of western powers to contain communism had the desired effects."

"The United States played a significant role in the fall of communism. During the Reagan years the United States had seven years of rapid growth and economic resurgence. Reagan was determined to match the Soviet military. Reagan spent six percent of our GNP on defense, the Soviet Union went bankrupt spending 20-25 percent of its GNP to keep up," Blanke said. "People who say Reagan had nothing to do with this are ignoring cause and effect chronology."

Blanke said the Reagan Doctrine and his rhetoric ended the Cold War. Reagan referred to USSR as an evil empire.

Did the US overblow the threat of communism? There are mixed reviews.

"During Carter's term it looked like they might never collapse. The extreme weak Western response to communism in the 1970s made the outlook pessimistic. It looked like Marxism would become the wave of the future," Blanke said. "For 30 years it was a one way battle. Russia was feeding guns to insurgencies (Nicaragua and Afghanistan are prime examples)."

Warhola said the United States may have made too much of the "boogy-man communist" mentality. He said Europe and Canada didn't feel the scare. He reasoned the European political culture is much more individualistic than ours and founded upon etatisme, the belief that government is the solution to all problems.

The big picture

How will the changes affect long-run foreign relations?

Beznosov and Cherepanov said there is vast economic investment opportunity within the states. Blanke said economic advisors are "drooling at the prospects."

Beznosov and Cherepanov said foreign aid is needed through the contribution of consumer goods and sharing of western technology and management skills.

Blanke said the USSR will someday provide a healthy competitive export market.

According to Warhola, an evolution of the configuration of world forces has taken place.

"The old east-west (communist v. democratic) fault line is no longer the dominant axis. It has become a north-south division of relations between advanced industrial nations and developing countries," Warhola said. He predicts domination of ecological issues in the 21st century.

UMaine Interim President John Hitt, who attended the reception, said Bruce Marquis "certainly seems to be a very well qualified person."

Hitt also said Marquis is only one in a "pool of candidates."

"We may find someone even more qualified," Hitt said.

Rolf Olsen, interim co-director of MCA, said the center is looking for a new director who can "raise money, be a good manager, and have good artistic vision."

The other candidates in the running for director of MCA are Eva Bornstein, Oliver Chamberlain, and Jefferson Westwood.

Bornstein has already visited the UMaine campus. Chamberlain is scheduled to visit on Dec. 4-6, and Westwood on Dec. 9-11.

Receptions will be held for Chamberlain on Dec. 5 and for Westwood on Dec. 10.

AUGUSTA (AP) — The Legislature's Taxation Committee declared its opposition Monday to repealing exemptions or otherwise raising taxes to keep Maine's budget in balance, although one Appropriations Committee member dismissed the significance of the vote as a "big fat zero."

Members of Appropriations, meanwhile, worked late into the night debating a long list of sticking points in efforts to agree on other spending cuts to substitute for Gov. John R. McKernan's proposals to reduce aid to municipalities and schools by $51 million. Those proposals account for nearly half of the more than $100 million shortfall projected through June.

"If we can't make the giant leap, then maybe we ought to take the small steps," said

Senate President Charles P. Pray, D-Millinocket, as the committee's discussions stretched past 10:30 p.m.

On the tax panel, in spite of a couple of Democratic holdouts, a decisive majority of members endorsed a resolution that challenged budget negotiators to come up with alternatives to the cuts in aid to local governments.

But several hours of discussion among committee members and other legislators broke no new ground in the month-old debate over the latest budget crisis. A co-chairman of the panel said the outcome of the meeting, which was ordered by legislative leaders, had been a foregone conclusion.

"I think that the whole exercise was needless," said Rep. John A. Cashman, D-Old Town.

Members of Appropriations had food delivered as they continued working in an attempt to reach an accord Monday night. Sen.

Joseph C. Brannigan, a co-chairman, said the approaching snowstorm and scheduling conflicts would only prolong the impasse if talks were extended further.

"We just keep spinning our wheels," the Portland Democrat said.

Among the remaining bones of contention were McKernan's plans to save $30 million by suspending revenue sharing in January and to reduce school subsidies through June by $21 million.

A group of advocates for school administrators, teachers and the state Education Department was assembled to try to resolve how subsidy cuts should be apportioned among school districts. But one spokesman said the only agreement was that a $21 million reduction was unacceptable.

"There was no real consensus on anything," reported Dan Calderwood of the Maine School Management Association.

ing after pill, "The patient is then referred to me to go over their medical history and the risks involved to make sure this is the best thing."

They also must sign a consent form that goes over the potential health risks and side effects.

This consent form says that 52 percent of all women who use this treatment experience nausea and vomiting, sometimes severe, among other less common side effects.

"After I took the pills, I could hardly stop throwing up over the next couple of hours. I had to go to Cutler again for a shot to stop the vomiting," said a senior UMaine student who wishes to remain anonymous.

"I was told I might not need all four pills, but I did to play it safe. It was during finals week and I had to miss my last final. I had to take it over the phone after I finally stopped throwing up," she said.

Not only is severe vomiting a risk, but if a woman is already pregnant from a previous episode of intercourse, MAP can cause birth defects in the fetus, Lockhart said. This is why a pregnancy test is always given as part of the screening process.

According to The New Our Bodies, Our-Selves, women who are still pregnant after taking MAP should consider having an abortion because of these risks.

Studies of some offspring of women who took this pill showed defects in their reproductive systems and there is a slightly greater chance of heart attacks and stroke.

"It is very important that women seeking to take this treatment understand all of the risks involved," Lockhart said.

These are among the reasons why the birth control pill Ovral is not approved by the Federal Drug Administration for morning after purposes. According to Contraceptive Technology, it is a delicate political issue because some people see it as abortive while others see it as a way of reducing abortions.

Though it is not FDA approved, the U.S. has used it for at least eight years for its morning after purposes, especially for rape victims, according to Contraceptive Technology.

The FDA does not prohibit using this drug for any other purpose than the approved drug labeling. However, federally funded family planning clinics often have restrictions placed on them against using it for some purposes.

The Penquis Family Planning Clinic in Bangor is a clinic under such restrictions. Priscilla Stoelb, nurse practitioner, said "We can only dispense Ovral to already established clients and there is an extensive screening process as well as mandatory annual check-ups."

Morcom said the pill should be publicized more because "an unplanned pregnancy can be devastating for a student with high aspirations and career goals."

"It wasn't the most enjoyable experience to take the pills, but it was the best thing because I didn't want my future ruined. I plan on going to graduate school," said the UMaine student who has taken Ovral.

Natalie Dwyer, a peer educator at Cutler Health Center who screens the women, said "Even though only about half know about it beforehand, more than two-thirds choose it as an option".

Morcom said all women should know this option is available.

Some outreach programs, to be held in dorms and instructed by peer educators, are under way and MAP is to be included as part of Cutler's general services, Morcom said.

MAP has been used seven times this year so far. Morcom said this is probably because people just don't know it's available, even though it has been at UMaine since 1985.

Lockhart said the low amount of knowledge could be a combination of Cutler being low key about it and "the embarrassment of not using birth control and of being sexually active. Also, if a woman was raped, she doesn't want to talk about the circumstances."

Lockhart said she thinks this says a lot about how society is still uncomfortable in talking about sex and birth control.

According to Stoelb, her clinic gets an extremely low demand for MAP. They stopped using it for several years and it was only recently reinstated.

More and more students are over 30, according to survey

By Tim Bovee
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to a government survey, one in four college students is 30 or older. Many of the students are women updating their job skills.

These older students, educators say, are practical, they demand full value for their tuition dollar, and they're tough competitors for top grades.

"Older students often fret about going back to the classroom and competing with bright-eyed younger people, but I think for the most part, they manage well," said Susan Kaufmann, associate director of the Center of the Education of Women at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Many of the women are undergraduates, retraining to take advantage of new job opportunities.

A Census Bureau survey found in 1989 there were 3.3 million college students aged 30 and older. That's about double the number 15 years earlier.

One out of every five women in college was 35 or older in 1989, according to an Associated Press analysis of the census numbers. Fifteen years before, only one in eight was that age.

In the early 1970s, more than three-fourths of the nation's college students were just out of high school. Now, their share is less than 60 percent and shrinking.

Tom Snyder of the National Center for Education Statistics in Washington said most older students fall into these categories:

-Students taking longer to get their degrees. Some college students in their 30s are completing work they started in their 20s.

-Engineers and other technical workers wanting to improve their skills on the job. Some take a course or two, without worrying about a degree.

-Professionals wanting an advanced degree, such as a masters of business administration.

They're going back to school because it makes sense financially.

"In general, the payoff from college has been growing over the past 10 or 15 years," Snyder said. "So more people will be interested, regardless of their age."

Four years of college on average adds more than $13,000 a year to a worker's paycheck. And going to college beyond those four years adds $10,000 a year on top of that.

They're returning because in many kinds of work, things change so quickly. "There's a technical revolution going on," said Richard Hall, director of school relations at the University of Oklahoma in Norman, Okla. "Their skills are becoming obsolete and they have to tool up for a new age."

Universities have been recruiting older students because falling birth rates in the late 1960s and 1970s produced smaller freshman classes 18 years later, college administrators said.

Older students, juggling family, job and the midterm exam, face challenges that most of their younger classmates never dream of.

Colleges and universities have had to change the way they do business to meet the needs of those older students, called "non-traditional students" in the jargon of academic administrators.

"The non-traditional student wants convenience," said Pat Riordan, dean of admissions at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va. "They want to be able to register from their home. They want convenient, safe parking. They want ways of paying tuition that fit their needs. They want some kind of payment plan. They definitely don't want big classes."

They also demand a personal relationship with their professors, unlike their younger classmates, who may sit in the back of the class to escape notice.

That demand for quality education has brought pressure on the universities to demonstrate they're earning their tuition.

"The older you are, the more sophisticated you are about knowing when you're getting your money's worth," said Jonathan Fife, professor of higher education administration at George Washington University.

Students get condom with newspaper

PENSACOLA, Fla. (CPS) — Students who picked up a copy of the student newspaper at Pensacola Junior College on Nov. 6 found a surprise attached—a free condom.

The condoms went with a package of stories and editorials about AIDS, sexually transmitted diseases and unwanted pregnancy.

The newspapers were distributed at the college's three campuses in Pensacola, Milton and Warrington.

Student government leaders criticized the paper, The Corsair, for the move and called it a publicity stunt. But the editors said they were trying to make a statement that condoms will help prevent the spread of AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases.

Student accuses professor of AIDS discrimination

By Therese Lee
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES, (AP) — A student infected with the AIDS virus said a professor told his classmates that he feared getting the disease from the student's papers.

W. Wayne Karr also accused Professor Don J. Wilson of Los Angeles City College of questioning whether Karr could continue with the class.

He is demanding that the college fire the professor.

"I've been living with AIDS for five years," Karr said at a campus news conference on Friday. "On September 19, 1991, I began dying of AIDS in Dr. J. Wilson's classroom."

Students want newspaper editors removed for joke ad

PLYMOUTH, N.H. (AP) — Angry students have asked a Plymouth State Advisory board to punish three editors for putting an offensive advertisement in the school's student newspaper.

The editors placed the ad in the Nov. 7 edition of The Clock. It said "three horny men" were looking to "tag-team a young Afro-American virgin." The ad included three phone numbers.

Some Plymouth State students and faculty want the editors removed.

Norleen Douglas, a black student, said she wants them punished because if they aren't "racism will be allowed to flourish on campus."

The seven-member advisory board, made up of students, faculty and staff, heard about 1 1/2 hours of testimony before the board met in executive session for about 20 minutes. It said it would issue a decision next Wednesday.

The Clock's editor-in-chief, James Hamlin, sports editor, Dave Cummings, and layout coordinator-typographer, Neil Snow, said they meant the ad as a joke. They have been placed on probation for the rest of the semester by the paper's faculty adviser.

Another student, David Jarretts, resigned as a sports reporter after the ad ran. He said, unknown to him, his telephone number was one of the three placed in the ad.

Jarretts said he and his roommate were flooded with irate calls.

"After the first six or seven death threats I stopped counting," he told the board.

Expert trying to educate campuses about gang rape

By Amy Reynolds
(CPS)

Bernice Sandler didn't want to divulge too many details, but it didn't matter—what she did say was quite enough.

As the national expert on gang rape lectured to counselors, students and others working in the field of sexual assault on campuses, the audience couldn't help but groan in empathy and moan in disgust.

Sandler talked of gang rape victims locked out of rooms and left naked in fraternity house hallways, of men who videotape the ordeal to show to friends later.

Sandler, with the Association of American Colleges, received her first call about a gang rape in November 1985. Since then, she has documented more than 100 cases of campus gang rape and has spent most of her time researching the phenomenon.

What she has found is that the vast majority occur at fraternity houses (90 percent), with the rest happening at the hands of athletes. Alcohol or drugs are almost always involved and often the victim is selected ahead of time and deliberately given spiked drinks or drugs to incapacitate her. Often, the woman is not conscious during the rape. Often people other than the men committing the rape know that it is occurring or about to occur.

"The men are stunned when their behavior is labeled as rape," Sandler said at a recent conference on sexual assault. "They say it is group sex, that it was a good time."

Sandler has found many differences between gang rape and one-on-one rape. In gang rapes, the men are raping for each other—they want to prove their manhood. She says usually every group has a leader, the one who initiates the rape.

The bond that the men participating in the rape feel for each other overrides their feelings for the victim, Sandler says.

She says fraternity members are the primary culprits because they have a strong ideology of brotherhood—fraternity men define themselves by drinking, sexual prowess and negative behavior toward women. Athletes, as a group, form similar bonds.

Sandler says additional problems caused by fraternities especially are that they sanction sexual abuse, that the brothers are trained to "cover" or lie for each other to keep them out of trouble, that they stereotype women and view "gang bangs" as part of their culture.

On the other side of the coin are women who believe they could never become victims of such a crime.

"There are so many women so frightened by the crime that they have distanced themselves," Sandler says. "They say, 'Well, everybody knows fraternity parties are dangerous.' They say, 'I'm not stupid, this will never happen to me.'"

It does happen, however, and Sandler says the victims are both sorority and non-sorority members, freshmen and seniors.

Mary Koss, of the University of Arizona psychology and psychiatry departments, recently conducted a study of 600 students in a "Psych 101" class and found that attitudes between fraternity members and non-fraternity members differed.

"We found that men in fraternities lived in a more sexualized environment, that alcohol was more readily available... that pledges thought that fraternity membership would help them date more and that fraternity members are more likely to have had sexual experience," Koss says.

Koss, however, says that the national Interfraternity Conference and national chap-taking steps as well. Two students and Sigma Chi brothers at California Polytechnic State University started a program called "Greeks Talking to Greeks about Acquaintance Rape" last year.

The program involves mandatory attendance by fraternities at rape education seminars given by other fraternity members. Those who did not attend were placed on a list given to sororities, whose members said they would not hold parties with fraternities on the list.

Christopher Flesoras says the idea came about when he served as his fraternity's risk manager, a position dealing with fraternity insurance and other related matters.

"We had information about fires and earthquakes, but no one said anything about rape," he says. So he and brother Mike Fink started their program. They became well-versed on the subject through self-education and reading books on how to conduct date rape seminars.

"At least it's showing that the Greek system is doing something," he says. Flesoras just transferred to Hellenic College in Boston where he hopes to implement the same program.

The IFC is offering programs to fraternity chapters nationwide as well.

In addition to the seminars, Sandler says the only way to prevent gang rape is to change the attitudes of women who think they aren't vulnerable, of men who watch or commit a gang rape and of administrators who usually shy away from the subject for fear of bad publicity.

Alcohol or drugs are almost always involved and often the victim is selected ahead of time and deliberately given spiked drinks or drugs to incapacitate her.

ters of some fraternities have become leaders in rape education.

Sandler agrees and says they have a great deal of influence among members.

◆ Hostage release

Hostage Alan Steen freed, only Terry Anderson left

By Ed Blanche
Associated Press Writer

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) - American Alann Steen, smiling and weeping for joy, was freed by Shiite Muslim extremists Tuesday after five years of captivity in Lebanon and said: "It's great to be out."

The 52-year-old teacher was the second hostage released in two days, and his freedom augurs a speedy resolution to the hostage drama. There was growing speculation that the last American captive, journalist Terry Anderson, will soon be free.

Asked about Anderson, Steen said one of his captors told him the chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press would be out "in about a week." Separate Lebanese groups kidnapped Anderson and Steen.

Steen, a native of Boston, looked thin and pale at a brief news conference at the Syrian Foreign Ministry, and appeared to seek guidance from United Nations and U.S. officials as he spoke to reporters.

He wept as he was handed over to U.S.

Ambassador Christopher Ross.

"I don't think I can find the words right now to express how I feel, except that it's wonderful," he said, his voice choking with emotion and his hands shaking. "Five years is no fun."

Steen said he exercised for two hours every day while in captivity but had had lots of colds. His face and neck bore scars, which he kept scratching, and he said he caused them himself when he was first allowed by his captors to shave three years ago.

Asked if he had a message for his wife, Steen said: "I love her, I miss her." The couple was married just six months before the Beirut University College journalism teacher was kidnapped.

Virginia Steen spoke to her husband by telephone today from her home in Clark Lake, Mich. "It was incredible to finally hear his voice and to think this is really, finally over," she said. "He sounds great. His sense of humor's still there."

Steen is the eighth Western hostage released since August, when the United Nations began intensive negotiations to arrange a swap of Western hostages for about 300 Arab prisoners held by Israel and its proxy militia in Lebanon. Israel seeks an accounting of four missing servicemen in Lebanon.

Iran, long the chief backer of Lebanese kidnappers, and Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon, now are both striving to free Western hostages.

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani is seeking to end Iran's isolation and shed its image as an outlaw state that supports terrorism. The Syrians, once the vanguard of Arab radicalism, are realigning with the West after the collapse of communism.

American Joseph Cicippio and Steen were freed after Washington paid Iran $278 million for weaponry impounded during the 1979-80 Tehran hostage crisis.

On Sunday, Israel released 25 Arab prisoners, bringing to 91 the total number set free since August and giving new impetus to hostage releases.

Earlier today, the Beirut office of Iran's official news agency said Anderson, 44, who was kidnapped in March 1985 and is the longest-held U.S. hostage, could be freed by the end of the week. He is held by an Iranian-allied Shiite group, Islamic Jihad.

Also Tuesday, Uri Lubrani, Israel's chief hostage negotiator, was quoted as saying progress was being made on the missing Israeli servicemen.

Cicippio was freed Monday and flown to Germany. A U.S. physician said today that Cicippio was knocked unconscious when he was abducted in 1986, suffered frostbite in captivity later that year and in 1990, but is generally healthy. Besides Anderson, two Germans, Thomas Kemptner and Heinrich Struebig, are still held.

The Germans were captured by Shiite militants seeking the release of Mohammed and Abbas Hamadi, brothers imprisoned in Germany on terrorism convictions.

The Tehran Times reported today that an American would be freed shortly, followed by the German hostages and then by the last American. The report was written before Steen's release.

◆ Kennedy Smith trial

Prosecutor, defense give different descriptions of Kennedy Smith

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press Writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith listened solemnly Monday as a prosecutor depicted him as a cruel and vicious rapist, and his attorney portrayed him as a man who made love to a willing woman in the moonlight.

The differing versions of the sexual encounter came after a judge decided not to let three other women testify about their claims that Smith had sexually assaulted them in the 1980s. The ruling served to deflate the prosecutor's efforts to show that Smith had a history of abusing women.

"The evidence will demonstrate that the defendant's conduct was not only cruel, violent and against her will, it was most importantly criminal under the laws of Florida," Assistant State Attorney Moira Lasch told the jury of three women and three men.

"You will hear this was a consensual act of sexual intercourse," defense lawyer Roy Black said.

"They got into foreplay and they made love," he said. "It was a totally consensual act of love between two people."

Mrs. Lasch told of a woman lured to the Kennedy estate only to be raped and pursued by a "ferocious" young man who told her no one would believe her if she claimed rape.

"He was a famous, prominent person," said Mrs. Lasch. "She was an unknown person."

"She had expectations here that were not fulfilled," Black said.

"One of the key issues in this case is credibility, honesty," he told the jury. "You have to determine if this allegation is true."

"For the first time, we're not going to be tried by the newspapers in this case," said Black. "For the first time we're going to be able to say what happened. When you hear it, you will conclude that this young man is not guilty."

Some 500 reporters had credentials to cover the case and TV crews took over a parking lot near the courthouse where dozens of satellite dishes were set up to carry news of the trial across the world.

Following opening statements, Mrs. Lasch began methodically laying out her case, calling as her first witness Kerry Allison, a Kennedy family friend who was at the estate on Easter weekend.

The lawyers spoke after Circuit Judge Mary Lupo rejected the prosecution's bid to present evidence from three women who said they had been sexually attacked by Smith in the 1980s.

"The court denies the state's motion," the judge said, giving no explanation why she rejected a bid to prove that Smith had a history of attacking pretty, unescorted brunettes after charming his way into their confidence.

The 30-year-old Florida woman who alleges Smith raped her is a brunette and met him at a popular Palm Beach discotheque. He invited her back to the estate where she says she was raped on Easter weekend 1991.

Smith, 31-year-old nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, is charged with sexual battery and battery and could receive a maximum of 4 1/2 years in prison if convicted.

His mother, Jean Kennedy Smith, sat in a front row with another son and daughter and frequently leaned forward to confer with her son across the courtroom bar. Later, she was excluded from court at the prosecutor's request because she may be a witness later.

The judge's ruling about the three women came after final jury selection. Attorneys also chose three alternate jurors but one quickly was called into service when a selected juror bowed out because he knew some witnesses in the case.

◆ World AIDS Day

United States takes part in World AIDS Day

By Kiley Armstrong
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Skylines dimmed in the nation's largest cities, museums hung blank canvases, and condoms were distributed in cities around the globe in observance of World AIDS Day with "A Day Without Art."

Dr. Gottlieb Lobe Monekoso, Africa director of the Geneva-based U.N. World Health Organization, which started the annual event four years ago, spoke at an observance in Brazzaville, the Congo.

He said the epidemic is due in part to "illiteracy, malnutrition, poor living conditions, unemployment, as well as the lack of facilities for testing blood."

South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, spoke at an interfaith service about AIDS in Atlanta, where the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change was offering anonymous AIDS tests.

Tutu urged people of all faiths to abandon the notion that AIDS is divine punishment for homosexuals and drug users.

At the Art Institute of Chicago, museum-goers saw a blank spot on the wall where Monet's "On the Seine at Bennecourt" ordinarily hangs.

New York's Museum of Modern Art put up 13 framed, blank papers and canvases to "represent all the works that will never get shown" because of AIDS, said Robert Storr of the museum Projects Committee.

The names of people who died of AIDS were read aloud at the museum for five hours. A bell tolled there and at the Studio Museum of Harlem every 10 minutes to mark another death from AIDS.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., people wore red ribbons at the Salvador Dali museum and other galleries in a community program promoting AIDS awareness.

In the Soviet Union, where homosexuality is a crime, members of the Russian Union of Gays and Lesbians passed out free, U.S.-made condoms and safe-sex literature.

At Tel Aviv University, condoms were handed out and a quilt bearing names of Israeli AIDS victims was displayed.

Lisbon University pharmacy students distributed condoms in Portugal.

In Bangkok, young women wearing scout uniforms and whistles passed out condoms.

The American University in Cairo's AIDS Awareness day featured a videotape of Magic Johnson, the basketball star who retired when he learned he carried the AIDS virus.

In Britain, Princess Diana was an honored guest at a benefit dance, and a chapel was dedicated as a sanctuary for prayers concerning AIDS.

The French put candles in their windows. About 1,000 members of the activist group ACT UP marched in Paris, where a Christmas tree was hung with 800 ornaments signifying 800 children afflicted with AIDS.

The Colorado AIDS Project held a candlelight vigil at the state Capitol in Denver.

◆ David Duke

Republicans attack Duke as he plans to run for president

By John King
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Party leaders are sharpening their attacks on David Duke as the former Ku Klux Klan leader prepares a conservative challenge to President Bush in several of next year's GOP primaries.

Duke, who lost the Louisiana governor's race two weeks ago, had been scheduled to announce his political plans today but on Sunday postponed his announcement until Wednesday. An aide said Duke needed more time to gather information on ballot-access rules.

As Duke's plans to enter GOP primaries became known over the weekend, national GOP leaders fired fresh salvos in his direction.

"David Duke is a Nazi Klansman who, in his own background, is despicable and should be shunned in American politics," House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press." Republican National Committee Chairman Clayton Yeutter called Duke a "full-time con man" and predicted he would garner little support in Republican primaries. "He's a repulsive political figure in my judgment, and the American public will not be conned by anyone of that nature," Yeutter said.

Still, Yeutter predicted Bush would name a campaign team within the next two weeks, earlier than the White House originally planned.

The daily attacks by Democrats on Bush are the main reason for the stepped-up political schedule, but the planned challenges by Duke and conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan also have disrupted the administration's re-election strategy.

Faced with the likelihood of attacks from the right by both Buchanan and Duke, Bush likely will have to dedicate time, energy and money to primary politics, something that seemed highly unlikely not long ago.

"I think that he's going to have these two guys biting at his heels," Gingrich said. He predicted Buchanan could get as much as 45 percent of the vote in the New Hampshire presidential primary.

Neither Buchanan nor Duke is seen as a real threat to Bush's nomination. But for a White House trying to rebound from recent political missteps as Bush's poll standings fall, the challenges have to be taken seriously.

Buchanan is scheduled to announce his plans Dec. 10, less than a week after Duke. A top Duke adviser said Saturday that Duke planned to focus primarily on Southern states with March primaries.

"He doesn't count on winning the nomination or anything, but he wants to keep the issues alive and he wants to have some influence on the process," the adviser said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Duke planned to file a declaration of candidacy with the Federal Election Commission this week and hopes to qualify for federal matching funds, said the adviser.

Running as a Republican but spurned by the national party, Duke won 39 percent, including a majority among whites.

◆ Budget Rally

An effort at change

As the fall semester ends many students are facing uncertain futures. The current budget cuts and accompanying tuition increases mean that many students won't be returning for the spring semester.

On top of last year's cuts and 12 percent tuition increase students are expected to shoulder another 15.6 percent tuition increase and the loss of 98 class sections.

The Board of Trustees are meeting at 2:00pm in the Wells Dining Commons. The cuts handed down by the Appropriations Committee are only dollar amounts, the BOT decides exactly where these cuts will finally be made.

The reduction of class sections and the ensuing larger classes will result in more negativism on campus among both faculty and students.

Increasing costs and decreasing services will result in fewer students applying to UMaine and many students being forced to leave.

The Off-Campus Board is sponsoring a demonstration to encourage the BOT to make the impending cuts intelligently and to consider student viewpoints.

The rally is being held at noon in front of the Memorial Union. At 2:00pm participants will march to the BOT meeting in Wells commons.

The OCB has taken the initiative and are trying to lead students in defense of our education.

Now is the time for students to unite and make our position clear to the people who make the decisions affecting our future. Go to the Union today and show your support for the OCB and what they're trying to accomplish, it's in everyone's best interest. (CJC)

◆ It's your money

Bring the noise

Yea! The time has come for you to make your presence known. If you are upset, disgusted, dismayed, confused or just plain mad—that is if you are a University of Maine student—then your time to show your concern about recent budget matters is now.

You don't have to go to Augusta to be there. You don't have to miss several classes. No fuss, no mess, just good plain college fun. Come to the Union at noon for the rally and the 2 p.m. march on the Board of Trustees meeting at Wells Commons.

There's nothing like college students getting their voices heard—bring the noise! We're young, we're articulate, and we're pissed off. It's time for everyone in the state to know that students are worried about our future and are not about to just sit back and take it. Last year's budget cut rally was a tremendous success and show of concern for our education.

The future of the University of Maine is on the chopping block, not just class sections and positions. This could be the beginning of the end of UMaine as we know it, some say it already is. Let's show them how we feel.

Not only does safety exist in numbers, but so does the catalyst which invokes change. Solo opposition is regarded as disgruntlement, mass opposition is indicative of serious problems. Don't continue to let a few outspoken members of the campus community advocate concerns which are shared by all. Descend upon the BOT en masse and force the realization of our financial problems.

They say student apathy is at an all-time high, prove them wrong. We may not be able to change anything, but we can show them we're not very happy. (MJB)

The holiday road and me

Melissa Adams

I love UMaine for a variety of reasons. There are also many things to hate about my beloved school, such as its location. Situated halfway between East Gish and the Arctic Circle, and two hours away from everywhere, Orono's location has been the main drawback of my college days.

Heralding from the great (ah-hem) state of Massachusetts, the four and one-half hour commute every month or so... how can I put this... stinks. The fact that I did not have a car of my own for the first two and a half years of my collegiate existence only added to the fun.

But the days of taking rides from strangers were over when I finally "persuaded" my father to let me take the family car. Breaks no longer marked bidding wars to get rides home; I was Queen of the Road, mistress of my own gas millage.

With me, as always, on my journey is my co-pilot Quotation Chris, who not only reads every road sign out loud, but acts out a mean "Airplane! The Movie." And, if I'm driving slow enough, I can get the "Holy Grail." Oh, lucky day.

Anyway, Chris and I have had our fair share of exciting roadtrips. There was the time before I had the car, when we went home for a weekend on a bus. We took the 6 a.m. out of Bangor and awoke in Waterville lodged in a snowbank, a bus without breaks in a snowstorm. Don't worry, we got home 11 hours later. The sight of a Greyhound still makes me break out in a cold sweat.

Then there was the time we were going home for spring break (me still sans car) and since we couldn't get on direct ride home, we arranged several mini treks which, upon close examination, resembled a drug cartel run. Orono to Lewiston, Lewiston to Portland, Portland to Portsmouth and Portsmouth to Quincy. Four hours, four cars, no problem.

But things had been looking up for us lately, no sweat, smooth sailing - until now, as I sit in the Exit 3 Kennebunkport "Bendover" Burger King writing this little ditty.

We left for Thanksgiving break in high spirits, headed south, trap-shooter on high, WBLM cranked, visions of turkey and all the fixings in our heads. Then outside of Portland the car started revving and bucking. "No sweat," I thought, "just bad gas." Near OOB, it did it again, but we weren't far from the Exit 3 rest area, "We'll stop there," I thought.

At Exit 3 we got some food, we ate and tried the car again, hoping it had finished its bout with distemper. I started the car and wowie, it revs, but won't move. Sweet Jesus, my car has gone to Heaven in a Burger King parking lot.

Luckily, there was also a mechanic at the rest area and he took a look.

"That little pool behind the car isn't mine is it?" I asked meekly.

"Yup," said John the mechanic. "A leak somewhere perhaps?"

"Nope, worse."

"Gulp"

That's when John uttered the two words I didn't want to hear, "Oh, boy." Then he turned to me with a calm face, like a doctor over a dead guy and said the other two words I really didn't want to hear. "Transmission's shot."

After I was brought to, I called home and talked to my Dad. After my Dad was brought to he told me to have it towed, there was nothing we could do, and mumbled something about not having Christmas this year.

Bob of Bob's Towing then came and was exceptionally cool. It is widely believed that in matters of auto repair, mechanics can be very cruel and mean spirited, smelling blood, lots of cash, and people who don't know much about cars. But this was different, Bob was very nice and understanding. Plus he said the car's problems weren't my fault.

So I gave Bob my keys and heard him exclaim as my car was towed out of sight, "Happy Thanksgiving to all and to all good fright."

Now I sit beside a highway, my earthly belongings on the floor in a bag and watch bad attitude, bad haircut, BK burger jockeys yell and Maine-ahs doing bad Tim Sample impressions.

I sit stunned, waiting for Chris' Dad to come get us. I think about my father saying, "I'd come get you, but the muffler on my car fell off today." I remember the tone of his voice, beyond mad, beyond sad, that "well-what-else-can-we-do" tone reserved for death and major money transactions. I think about my brother looking for presents Christmas day and not finding them. "Where's my stuff?" he'll ask. "Look under your sister's hood," my Dad will answer.

The bottom of the story? After a tough, cold night on the side of the highway, it's refreshing to know that there are some nice people in this world.

And then there's Quotation Chris who said as Bob and my car rolled out of sight, "Hey, this would make a good column."

The Campus Crier is a service provided by A.S.A.P. to the students at the University of Maine. It is a student-run calendar listing information on artistic, educational, and spiritual programs. It provides free listings of all student-related events and services. We try to publish a complete listing of campus events and student-related activities. When placing a listing please include the following information: name, organization, phone number, time, date, location, cost, and a short description of the event.

Send all submissions through campus mail to: The Campus Crier, 16 Chadbourne Hall or call us at 581-4359. Deadline is Friday at 5:00 p.m. a week before the listing is to appear.

Budget Cuts

Show BOT that students care

To the editor:

I'd like to personally urge anyone who is associated with the University of Maine System to participate in today's demonstration and rally.

OCB, and Hubris have promoted the demonstration on all eight campuses and expect participation from all parts of the state. The University of Maine student body must begin showing an active effort to affect our future. So far we have continued the trend of the past three years by absorbing yet another blow to our system and simply staying mute on the subject of these cuts. How can we be the "main" campus for the state if our indifference and apathy place us dead last in participation or desire to show our dissatisfaction with the way things are evolving at our institution.

Motivation is probably one of the hardest things to get through to our generation. Persistence is another of the missing vocabulary words that represent the ideals that must be instituted immediately to see any salvation of our system.

I realize that a lot of the people asking students to get off their butts and get involved are engaged in a mild game of hypocrisy, but that is inherited once one is placed into positions of authority of any source. What must begin now is an undercurrent of reform and action from all the people who do have the will and drive to participate, whether in body or by simply passing on the word and discussing the issues surrounding us.

Please consider the rally. It all kicks off at 12:00 noon either outside the Union, or in Hauck if the weather is poor. The more people who show our esteemed Board that they are under a microscope on these cuts, the better.

David Carlson

Registration

All-night registration

To the editor:

It's 10:30 at night and I just got back from visiting my sister. She's sleeping on the porch steps of Shibbs in order to get into a class that has 32 openings a year and is a required course for every person majoring in elementary education.

She's been trying to get into the class for five semesters, and if she doesn't get it this time, she won't graduate next year. Fortunately, she'll get it; she's first in line. Unfortunately, however, that means she's been on the steps since 6:45 p.m. There are presently 31 people out on the steps and lawn, all hoping their much-needed class will still have openings when their turn comes.

It shouldn't be this way. I know my sister and the others will not sleep tonight as they endure the absurd UMaine ritual of course selection, not to mention that it's so cold out that while driving there my de-icer froze on my windshield. I know that the university is having financial problems, but if a course is required, ample spaces should be offered.

I'm worried because I'm also in education and asked my advisor if I could take an alternate course for the same course my sister is waiting in line for, but was refused. When is this asinine, all-night, cold-weather course selection process going to come to an end?

Editorial Policy

Letters to the editor of The Maine Campus must be no longer than 250 words and should contain a name, address and phone number.

Fashion Column

No one is perfect

To the editor:

Michael Reagan's Fashion Update for UMaine was the most closed-minded ignorant piece of writing I have ever read.

It should have been thrown in the trash can, not the campus paper. Reagan classified every male who wears a sweatshirt, jeans, and a hat a "jock wanna-be" and even went so far as to say that people who are not in top physical condition should not be allowed to wear tank tops or spandex to the gym. (I guess these people are supposed to hide themselves in bulky sweats or exercise in a closet.)

I guess I'm trying to say no one's perfect because if we were, we'd all be like Michael Reagan who neglected to tell us which of his categories he fits in.

Fashion column

Campus fashion tip: get a tie

To the editor:

In the 11-18 issue of The Maine Campus, Mike Reagan blessed us all with his view on the human herd instinct as it applies to fashion. My thought was stimulated by this concept, and I sat down to decide how best to change my style to become more individualistic. With Mr. Reagan's field guide of don't's in hand I began to make the new me.

First to go were my Larry Bird moustache and Elvis sideburns. Sure, it's a pain in the rear to shave everyday, but now I'll be a true individualist. Next, I got rid of my hats, sweatshirts, tank tops, jeans, everything with bright colors (no more hanging out with the beach/ski bums), and all my drab stuff (wouldn't want anyone to stereotype me as a drab crunchy).

Now I was ready to do it alone. To hell with what everyone else thinks; I was now a true American, a rugged individualist.

Feeling short of breath from my revelation, I gazed into my closet to see what was left: hanging in the now nearly empty space were a blue and white striped button down shirt, a pair of light brown slacks, a tie which I hadn't seen since high school graduation, and way in the back, a London Fog trench coat.

I donned this rebellious outfit, and feeling secure in my new found individuality, set out for the nearest K-Mart to purchase a hair dryer.

Heavy Metal

Stereotypes were unoriginal

To the editor:

I would just like to take this opportunity to respond to Michael Reagan's editorial entitled "A Modern Musical Scourge." This editorial finally pushed me to the brink of my patience with his thoughtless columns.

In it he refers to heavy metal in just about every derogatory manner there is, greatly insulting listeners and performers alike.

The main thing that ticked me off was how he classes all heavy metal as "not original" and the "music of white trash." How can he say that heavy metal fans and bands are "mostly out of shape white people with long hair, dressed in black, trying their best to look 'bad'?" The fact is, heavy metal attracts all kinds of people regardless of hair length, profession, race, and yes Mr. Reagan, even physical fitness.

Anybody who strictly believes these stereotypes is pretty shallow and afraid of something they don't fully understand. There is, in my opinion, the presence of some heavy metal bands that do fit some of Reagan's descriptions, such as being unoriginal, predictable and flashy.

These are the bands that give heavy metal a bad image. But if you look past these types of bands, and all of the stereotypes, you might actually realize that there are a variety of heavy metal bands that are very talented, intelligent, and deserve a lot of credit.

I don't consider myself a strictly heavy metal listener. I listen to a variety of music including some heavy metal.

The point is that everyone who read Reagan's column should understand how totally outrageous and unfounded his comments really were. In his last paragraph, Reagan states that "Heavy metal will die. Hopefully it will have a speedy death." Well, Mr. Reagan, I hope your job meets a speedy death.

Yugoslavia

Help the Croats

To the editor:

I, as an American, am baffled and frustrated that the United States and Western Europe have stood by while Serbia has attacked Croatia. Serbia has been shelling southern Croatia indiscriminately, with no regard for innocent lives. Hospitals, churches, schools and villages have been destroyed.

Serbia has insisted that their goal has been to provide security for the Serbian minority living in Croatia. But will Serbia provide freedom and security to the Croats under a greater Serbian Republic?

Obviously we cannot trust the Serbian's when we look at their historical treatment of the majority Albanians living in Kosovo.

Now to add insult to injury, Western Europe and the United States wants to cut aid to Yugoslavia. Croats are desperately trying to defend their own homes and lives.

Serbia has been the aggressor throughout this war, and it's main objective has not been to defend the security of the Serbian minority. The objective all along has been to annex the fertile agricultural and oil-rich area of Slovenia and to obtain a beautiful (and profitable) tourist attraction of Dubrovnik.

As free Americans we must help the Republics of Croatia and Slovenia achieve their freedom by:

- Openly endorsing their call for independence from the Stalinist regime.
- Actively participate in establishing permanent peace in the region.
- Increase pressure on world leaders for the immediate involvement of the United Nations.

Your Daily Horoscope

By Carl Paul

For Wednesday December 4

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Sentimental and marriage-minded, you seek permanence in all your relationships, especially romantic ones. Being a well-balanced Sagittarian, you can be flirtatious and impetuous as well. This makes you susceptible to sudden infatuations that may serve your better interests.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): The give and take of information is at the heart of your chart when Mercury sextiles Jupiter. Make use of serviceable news as quickly as possible.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): A flash of inspiration can solve a problem you were beginning to believe had no end! The influence of friends makes decisions you face much simpler.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Home is the focus of your chart now, and you should expect visitors to arrive at any time. Be prepared to entertain at a moment's notice.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your social instincts are right on the mark. Although Moon Children are famous for their homebody attitude, the influence of Mercury pushes you out of the house and into the social arena.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): An auspicious time to make a long-desired purchase you've been putting off. You'll be amazed at how good getting something special for yourself will make you feel!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): A change of scenery is fostered by the combination of Mercury and Jupiter. Nervous energy will have you climbing the walls if you sit at home!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): The renewal of an old friendship stands front and center in your chart. Let old differences be forgotten. Agree to disagree, and get re-acquainted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Going to the usual places holds little interest for you now. Take advantage of any opportunity to break the mold and do something new!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Extraverted Archers have their introverted moments; this is one of them. Crowds, even of friends, will make you feel claustrophobic. Find a place to be by yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Inhibitions disappear, giving you the courage to try things which have intimidated you in the past. Dare to be different.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Starting your own business is the most productive use of your personal time today. The planetary combination brings financial good fortune!

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): The warmth of your personality has a positive effect on everyone you come in contact with! Also a good time for Pisceans to make long-range plans with their mates.

Your Daily Horoscope

By Carl Paul

For Thursday December 5

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You possess great creative powers, and chances are you express your talent through art, music, writing, acting or decorating. Your natural creative ability is best expressed in tandem with a partner or within a group, since you don't like to work alone. In fact, you tend to feel somewhat lost when not in the midst of human contact.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): Your plans are frustrated when Mars squares Saturn, but a delay is not the same as a dead-end. Determination will see you through, but it may take longer than planned.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): The real cause for an associate's anger will emerge! Don't fight fire with fire, let them blow off some steam and then see where things stand.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): An opinionated acquaintance may annoy you greatly, but don't give him the satisfaction of seeing how much he bothers you! Hold your head high.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Spending money like it's going out of style will not solve anything, particularly a romantic problem. Avoid the use of credit today.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Conflicting demands of family, friends, and career try to pull you in three directions at once. It's your choice. Others will just have to abide by your decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Trying to be all things to all people could wear you down to the nub when Mars squares Saturn. Set an iron clad list of priorities and stick to them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): The busier you keep yourself, the less time you'll have for anxiety. Use the energy of Mars to your advantage, otherwise it may actually work against you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Use an early morning setback to get things accomplished in the p.m. If anyone thinks you're going to quit at the first sign of trouble, they don't know you very well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You'll receive all kinds of advice from everyone you know: none of it of much use. You possess the intellectual resources to answer a personal question.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Only financial caution will save you from an expensive mistake. Money and friendship is a particularly touchy combination. A loan may as well be considered a gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An emotional issue takes precedence over daily responsibilities when Mars squares Saturn. Postpone little tasks until you have your personal life squared away.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): Your attitude is a self fulfilling prophecy. Don't allow yourself to become bogged down in repetitive tasks today. A change of pace puts a smile back on your face.

Ukrainians vote for independence in a huge majority

By Alan Cooperman
Associated Press Writer

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) - Ukrainians voted 9-to-1 for independence and elected former Communist Leonid Kravchuk as their president in a severe rebuff to Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts to preserve the Soviet Union.

"The Soviet Union has disintegrated," Kravchuk said Monday during a meeting with people from the United States and a dozen other countries who observed Sunday's election. "An independent Ukraine is born."

He said the Ukraine would establish collective control of Soviet nuclear weapons with Russia, Byelorussia and Kazakhstan - the other republics where Soviet nuclear warheads are based.

Ukrainian leaders also said they would move quickly to draw up a new constitution balancing the executive and legislative branches, form an army from Soviet troops in the Ukraine, control exports to other republics, and issue a new currency.

Neighboring Poland recognized the Ukraine as an independent state Monday, apparently the first country to do so.

The United States said it was "moving toward full diplomatic recognition" of the Ukraine. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said it would be "some time until we are ready to make final decisions," but he made it clear the United States planned to recognize Ukrainian independence.

He said a special envoy would go to the Ukraine this week and Secretary of State James A. Baker III planned to visit Moscow and Kiev later this month to discuss the transition to independence.

In a wave of nationalism and economic discontent, about 90 percent of the Ukraine's 37.5 million eligible voters turned out Sunday and 90.5 percent of them voted "yes" on the independence referendum, the Central Election Commission reported.

Gorbachev made no immediate comment. He had said before the election that the secession of the second richest and second most populous republic would be "a tragedy, a very great tragedy for the union."

Ivan Silayev, the Kremlin's top economic official, said the result of the referendum depended upon "what steps are taken next."

Kravchuk and other Ukrainian leaders said the vote marked the complete independence of the Ukraine and no other acts were needed for it to join the three Baltic states as the only republics to break completely from the Soviet Union.

The Soviet central government says approval from the national parliament is needed for a republic to secede. However, the Baltic states announced their break without such procedures, and Moscow ultimately accepted their decision.

"The independent Ukraine means the downfall of the Soviet empire, and re-entering the empire would mean the downfall of the Ukraine," said Mihailo Horyn, a lawmaker and leader of the Rukh independence movement.

Kravchuk, 57, was elected with about 60 percent of the vote, well ahead of former dissident Vyacheslav Chornovil, the closest challenger in a field of six candidates, all of whom endorsed the secession drive.

The Ukrainian parliament is expected to accept the results of the referendum Tuesday. It voted to declare independence Aug. 24 in the power vacuum that followed the collapse of the hard-line coup against Gorbachev.

◆ Pearl Harbor

Bush says no need for Japanese to apologize for Pearl Harbor

By Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) - The government's top spokesman said Monday that Japan doesn't have to apologize for its attack on Pearl Harbor and that the United States need not apologize for dropping atomic bombs on two Japanese cities.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Koichi Kato's remarks echoed those of President Bush, who said in a television interview broadcast Sunday that no apologies were unnecessary

"one way or the other" for the attacks.

The Japanese Parliament was considering whether to approve a resolution apologizing for the Pacific War before Saturday's 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

The surprise attack brought the United States into World War II. In 1945, the United States brought the Pacific war to an end with atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki that left up to 205,000 people dead.

Pearl Harbor and the atomic bombings were "unfortunate realities of war that must be kept in the hearts" of both nations, Kato told reporters.

He added that it was better to "place greater emphasis on building new history between the two nations than debating individual points."

Hiroshima Mayor Takashi Hiraoka said Monday that Bush's comments were regrettable because they justified the use of a "cruel and inhumane weapon," Kyodo News Service reported.

Nagasaki Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima said the United States should recognize that an atomic bombing violates international law, but he added Japan should apologize first for Pearl Harbor, Kyodo reported.

In his comments, Kato did not directly address the question of a parliamentary resolution that would express regret and apologize for the war.

Japanese media reported over the weekend that Parliament's lower house was expected to pass such a resolution, which also would convey appreciation for the help Japan received in recovering from its devastating defeat.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Bush administration overcame one dispute with Palestinian Arabs Monday but confronted the possibility of the Mideast peace talks opening Wednesday without Israel.

Despite expressions of confidence by U.S. officials that an Israeli delegation would show up, Israeli sources said their representatives would not arrive until the end of the week, thereby sticking to Israel's insistence that the negotiations be delayed until next Monday.

"There will be no Israeli delegation before then, low-level or otherwise," said the sources, insisting on anonymity.

U.S. officials said the talks probably would be held at the State Department.

Margaret D. Tutwiler, the department spokeswoman, said there was no final decision on the location. Officials were already giving up their offices to make room for the visitors.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III set Wednesday in Washington as the time and place for resuming the peace conference that recessed in Madrid, Spain, on Nov. 4 after a ceremonial and procedural opening.

The main issues to be negotiated include self-rule for Palestinians who live under Israel control, the Arabs' refusal to accept a Jewish state in the region and Israel's retention of lands captured from Syria and Jordan in the 1967 Six-Day war.

Israel's Cabinet on Sunday demanded that the talks be delayed until next Monday to give Israel's negotiators more time to prepare.

Palestinian delegates threatened to stay home unless advisers with strong ties to the Palestine Liberation Organization were given visas. They left for Washington Monday night after six hours of negotiations with U.S. officials in Amman, Jordan.

Visas may not be issued under the law to PLO officers or others prominent in Yasser Arafat's organization because Congress judged it to be engaged in terrorism. Waivers may be granted for humanitarian and other special reasons.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was no need to consider any waivers and that all Palestinians coming here qualified for visas.

They said Palestinians who would not qualify had been persuaded not to apply.

The officials also said Israel would send diplomats to Washington in time for the opening on Wednesday. There were hints last week in Jerusalem that low-level officials would show up but there was no assurance they would engage in substantive negotiations before Monday.

"They'll all be here," said a U.S. official, referring to Israel, the Palestinians and the Arab delegations.

While the administration is proceeding with extraordinary secrecy, withholding most details just two days before the scheduled opening, the officials also disclosed that the negotiations would be held at the State Department barring a last-minute change.

"We'll be open and ready for business," spokeswoman Tutwiler said without revealing the State Department was the choice.

She also said Benjamin Netanyahu, a senior aide to Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, would arrive here on Tuesday on business "not connected or related to the talks."

On the Palestinian problem, Ms. Tutwiler suggested the strategy followed on visas was to warn off the ineligible. One believed to be in that category is Nabil Shaath, a close adviser to Arafat.

Ms. Tutwiler said she was not aware of him requesting a visa. And, she said, "we have had discussions and we have seen some names surface that we have said that we would grant no visas for."

She also said no waivers had been issued.

"The problem was solved and we will be traveling to Washington tonight," Samir Abdullah, a member of the 14-member Palestinian delegation, said in Amman.

The other delegations participating are Syria, Jordan and Lebanon.

Haitians seeking refuge have no rights, Solicitor General says

By Michael Warren
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Haitians stopped at sea while trying to flee to the United States have no rights under American laws, the U.S. solicitor general said Monday. An attorney for a refugee group said the Haitians are being treated unfairly.

U.S. District Judge C. Clyde Atkins heard arguments on whether to lift a ban on returning 6,400 Haitians who fled their homeland following a military coup in hopes of being granted asylum in the United States.

At issue is whether brief shipboard interviews can adequately determine whether Haitians fear for their lives or just want to escape poverty. The return of Haitians was stopped Nov. 19 after refugee advocates challenged the government's 11-year-old interdiction policy.

Solicitor General Kenneth Starr, making an appearance in a District Court case, said only the executive branch can decide refugee policy.

"It is 'we the people' who are protected by U.S. law. We do not see fit to protect everyone, no matter how moving their case may be, outside our territorial limits," Starr said.

Refugee attorney Ira Kurzban said Haitians are being denied a fair chance to seek political asylum because immigration agents know little about the political situation in Haiti.

Kurzban said one interviewer for the Immigration and Naturalization Service had never adjudicated asylum claims before sending more than 50 people back to Haiti.

Pats hold tough despite loss to Broncos Sunday

The new New England Patriots looked an awful lot like the old New England Patriots - just plain awful.

But Sunday's one-sided loss in Denver didn't strip them of the confidence they've gained from being competitive in most games this season. Coach Dick MacPherson said Monday.

"I don't think there's any psychological damage," he said. "I think there's a recognition we didn't play well."

The Broncos beat the Patriots 20-3, ending New England's string of six games decided in the final minute.

The Patriots rarely were competitive last season. Their 1995 record was the worst in the NFL, and their reputation dropped with an allegation by a female reporter that the team had sexually harassed by several players.

"There's a normalcy here this season," MacPherson said.

Players agreed the loss was a disappointment of the worst season in the team's history shouldn't mean the team should start a downward spiral.

New England's defense was relatively easy remaining competitive against the Broncos against last season's Super Bowl champs to the New York Jets and the Cincinnati Bengals.

Five teams tied for Hockey East lead

Black Bear right winger Wayne Conlan scored two goals in Friday's 5-1 UMaine win. He was named Hockey East Rookie of the Week for his efforts.

By Tim Hopley
Sports Writer

When the season began, the University of Maine was chosen as the class of Hockey East followed by Providence and New Hampshire. Well, three weeks into the season parity reigns as five teams are tied for first place in the Hockey East standings. Boston College, UMaine, UMass/Lowell, UNH and Providence all share the top spot with six points.

Four of those top teams will square off this weekend as BC and UMass/Lowell meet Friday at the Tully Forum and UMaine and UNH get set to do battle at Alford Arena in a big early season two game series. Another game of note is BC versus BU Saturday at Walter Brown Arena.

•The New Hampshire Wildcats of Coach Dick Umile were rolling right along with an 8-0 record to start the year, the best start in the team's history. But the Wildcats have faltered of late, dropping their last two to Alaska-Anchorage and Clarkson by identical 5-4 scores.

UNH is led by HE Player of the Week Domenic Amodeo (13 goals 12 assists - 25 points, 2-4-6 in HE) who registered a hat trick against Clarkson.

He is joined by Savo Mitrovic (6-16-22, 2-7-9 HE) and Joe Flanagan (11-12-23, 4-4-8 HE) for the 'Cats who will play the series with the Black Bears without Scott Morrow (10-8-18, 4-3-7 HE) and Jesse Cooper, who were assessed fighting penalties versus Clarkson. Center Greg Klym also will not dress for UNH. He suffered a knee injury and will be out six-to-eight weeks.

Bonilla signs $29 million contract with Mets

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

New York (AP) - On Nov. 18, a day after meeting with Bobby Bonilla, New York general manager Al Harazin sent the outfielder a Mets jersey with the free agent's name stitched across the back.

It took two week and $29 million before Bonilla agreed to wear the uniform. But finally, after a frenzied six-team negotiation, the Mets won the biggest bidding war in the history of U.S. team sports.

Bonilla, a 28-year-old outfielder who left the Pittsburgh Pirates to become a free agent, agreed late Monday to a five-year contract.

"New York City was in my heart," Bonilla said from his home in Bradenton, Fla. "It'll be hard to knock the smile off my face."

The $5.8 million annual average value tops the previous record of $5,380,250 set by pitcher Roger Clemens in the four-year extension he begins with the Boston Red Sox next season. The total amount of Bonilla's deal breaks the previous record set by outfielder Jose Canseco in his five-year, $23.5 million contract with the Oakland Athletics.

"I'm going to probably take a lot of flack for this one," Harazin said. "I'm sure some people are going to see this as irresponsible. But it was obvious we had to do it to get Bobby here."

Bonilla turned down California's offer of $27.5 million for five years and Philadelphia's proposal of $26 million for five years. In the end, he wanted to play in the city of his birth.

Bonilla, a lifetime .283 hitter, wanted to sign a four-year extension with Pittsburgh last winter, but rejected the Pirates' $16 million offer as too low. He then lost his $3,475,000 request for salary arbitration and was awarded $2.4 million.

Pittsburgh increased its offer to $16.8 million during the season and after the World Series upped it to $18.5 million with a club option for a fifth year at $4 million. Bonilla's agent Dennis Gilbert said the Pirates then offered to guarantee the fifth year.

But by then it was too late. "They kept putting it off and putting it off. The Pirates really put me in a nice position," Bonilla said. "It was a frustrating process with the Pirates. I leave with no hard feelings."

The Mets will give Bonilla a $1.5 million signing bonus, $5.5 million in 1992, $5.6 million in 1993, $5.7 million in 1994, $4.7 million in 1995 and $4.5 million in 1996. In addition, the Mets agreed to guarantee Bonilla at least $1.5 million in promotional income during the contract.

Bonilla also gets $200,000 if he is traded, a $100,000 bonus if he wins a Most Valuable Player Award of finishes second or third, $250,000 for finishing among the top three in two MVP ballots, $1 million for finishing among the top three in three MVP ballots and $2 million for finishing among the top three in four MVP ballots.

"I'm still not thrilled with five years," Harazin said, "but to get a player we coveted we had to bite the bullet on the fifth year."

New York began by offering $24.5 million and increased its proposal to $27.5 million on Saturday. The final jump came during Monday's negotiations.

"We've been going at this since 10 a.m.," Gilbert said just before midnight.

In six major league seasons, Bonilla has 116 home runs (19.3 per season) and 526 RBI (87.6). He hit .302 last season with the Pirates who won their second straight division title only to lose in their second straight NL playoffs.

Last Wednesday, New York signed first baseman Eddie Murray to a $7.5 million, two-year contract. Bonilla joins Murray, Howard Johnson and Gregg Jefferies to give the Mets four impressive switch-hitters in the middle of their lineup.

Villanova is eighth on all-YC team

By Jeff Pinkham
Sports Writer

Delaware, New Hampshire and Villanova dominated the Yankee Conference all season long, so it's no surprise they also dominated the post-season all-conference team as well.

The tri-champions of the YC held 19 of the 26 first team selections, including Offensive Player, Defensive Player, Rookie and Coach of the Year as selected by the conference coaches.

Villanova led the way with eight first teamers, including linebacker Curtis Eller, who was named Defensive Player of the Year. Eller, a two-time first team selection, led the Wildcats with 94 tackles on the year.

UNH placed six players on the first team, highlighted by do-everything Barry Bourassa, who was named Offensive Player of the Year. Bourassa leads the nation in all-purpose yardage for the second consecutive year, as well as being second in scoring and third in kick returns.

Delaware placed five on the first team as well as having the Rookie and Coach of the Year. First-year running back Daryl Brown gained rookie honors while rushing 81 times for 561 yards and nine touchdowns.

Tubby Raymond won his first Coach of the Year award after 26 years as the head man at Delaware. In that time, Raymond has compiled a 212-84-2 record and ranks in the top 20 of all-time coaching victories in NCAA history.

As well as these teams did in the conference, none of them fared well in the playoffs with each losing in the first round.

UNH hosted Samford University and lost 29-13, Delaware lost to James Madison 42-35 in two overtimes, and Villanova lost to Youngston State 19-16 in overtime.

UMaine Athlete of the Week

Wayne Conlan First-year Forward Hockey

Wayne Conlan is this week's University of Maine Athlete of the Week.

Conlan has scored five goals in the last five Black Bear games including two in Friday's 5-1 UMaine win over Notre Dame.

For his efforts the first-year player from West Haven, Conn. earned Hockey East Rookie of the Week honors. He is the first Black Bear to receive the award this season.

At 5-foot-11, 180 pounds, Conlan provides Coach Shawn Walsh with speed on the wings which he uses to his advantage against bigger defensemen.

A former three-year letterman at Trinity Pawling, Conlan scored 23 goals and added 31 assists for 54 points in 21 games as a senior following up a year in which he had 53 points in 23 games. He also was a member of the U.S. Select-17 team.

Conlan is a seventh-round 1990 St. Louis Blues draft choice and is studying business.

Other candidates for the Athlete of the Week award were Heather Briggs and Julie Bradstreet (women's basketball).

Around Hockey East

up to date.

Led by the "Red Line" of Jim Montgomery (6-18-24, 3-7-10 HE), Jean-Yves Roy (10-9-19, 2-6-8 HE) and Brian Downey (7-12-19, 3-4-7 HE), the Black Bears come in with a 9-1 record after winning three times last week, 4-3 over Northeastern and 5-1 and 6-3 over Notre Dame.

Right wing Wayne Conlan was named HE Rookie of the Week after he notched five goals in his last five games, including three in the last week for Coach Shawn Walsh.

UMaine also received a boost when sophomore goaltender Mike Dunham returned to action, stopping 23 shots in the 6-3 win Saturday. He suffered a broken pinky in a practice earlier this season.

After an early season swoon, Coach Len Ceglarski has righted the Boston College Eagle ship. BC went 2-0 last week, downing Army 4-1 and Cornell 3-0. The Eagles have now won four in a row.

Goalie Scott LaGrand (4-3 2.86 goals against average) recorded his third career shut-out in the win over Cornell. The junior stopped 33 shots, including 20 in the third period.

Senior forward

David Fransoza leads BC in scoring with 9-9-18 and 4-3-7 in HE.

Providence

College has also picked up the pace lately, winning their only game last week 5-4 in overtime against Cornell.

Sophomore netminder Mike Heinke is leading the way, having won his last six games. He is 8-2 overall with a 2.59 gaa.

Defenseman Shaun Kane has scored a goal in each of the last three games and first-year winger George Breen has tallied four goals in the same span.

Surprise, the UMass/Lowell Chiefs are playing quality hockey and before falling to Alaska-Anchorage 7-6 Saturday, the charges of Coach Bruce Crowder had won four in a row.

continues to do all the right things, recording his second hat trick on the season. He now has 15 goals in all and is the first UMass/Lowell player in five years to record two three-goal games in a season (Jon Morris 1986-87 was the last).

Goalie Dwayne Roloson is undefeated in league action at 2-0 with a 3.00 gaa. The duo of Roloson and Mark Richards has been good, keeping the Chiefs in most every game it plays.

First-year netminder Derek Herlofsky earned a win in his first-collegiate start, turning aside 31 Army shots in Boston University's 3-2 win. The win snapped a three game losing streak for Coach Jack Parker's team.

Junior forward David Sacco (2-12-14, 0-4-4 HE) leads the Terriers offense, but hasn't scored a goal in the last seven BU games.

The young Terriers are indeed struggling in most aspects of the game as their 68.9 percent penalty killing and 19.6 percent power play would attest.

Merrimack College and Northeastern University bring up the rear in HE play. The Warriors are 0-4 in league action, 5-7 overall while the Huskies of first-year are 0-5 and 5-6.

Northeastern took two straight last week after falling to UMaine 4-3 Wednesday. The Huskies downed Ottawa (6-4) and Trois Rivieres (6-1) in winning the tournament championship in Ottawa.

Senior Rob Kenny was named tourney MVP with 2-2-4 numbers and great all-around play. Rookie goaltender Todd Reynolds was also outstanding and was named to the All-Tournament team.

The Warriors of Ron Anderson fell twice in the past week to Notre Dame (2-1) and Alaska-Anchorage (4-2) as Merrimack ran into a scoring drought which saw them go 93 minutes without lighting the lamp.

The Warriors now have not won a HE game in 12 consecutive tries dating back to January 26, a 4-2 win over Providence.

Former UMaine Coach Teevins joins former UMaine AD at Tulane

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Buddy Teevins, who coached Dartmouth College to its second consecutive Ivy League championship in 1991, will be named head football coach at Tulane University, two television stations reported Monday.

Tulane would not comment immediately on the reports by WWL-TV in New Orleans and WNNE-TV in White River Junction, Vt. However, the school scheduled a news conference for 10 a.m. CST Tuesday.

There were earlier reports that the school had narrowed its search to Teevins and Mark Duffner of Holy Cross.

Duffner withdrew as a candidate Monday, WWL-TV reported. The station said Tulane planned to announce Teevins' appointment on Tuesday.

Both Teevins and Duffner visited Tulane last week to be interviewed for the job vacated by Greg Davis after Tulane closed out a 1-10 season with a 39-20 loss to archrival Louisiana State.

Davis finished with a 14-31 record in four seasons at Tulane.

Teevins, 34, led Dartmouth to a 7-2-1 record this season and the Ivy League title that Dartmouth shared with Cornell in 1990. The 1991 title was the first outright Ivy League championship for Dartmouth since 1978, when Teevins was its quarterback.

In five seasons at Dartmouth, Teevins' teams compiled a record of 26-22-3. Before he took that job at Hanover, N.H., Teevins posted a 13-9 record at Maine from 1985-86, the team's first consecutive winning seasons in 21 years.

Kevin White, who was named Tulane's athletic director last summer, also has connections with Maine, where he served as athletic director from 1987 to 1991.

France wins Davis Cup

PARIS (AP) - Unforgettable!

That was the headline across the front of France's sports daily Monday as the nation savored one of its sweetest sporting triumphs, the emotional upset of the United States in the Davis Cup final.

The heroes - Guy Forget, Henri Leconte and captain Yannick Noah - were still partying in a Lyon night club at 3 a.m., nine hours after Forget's defeat of Pete Sampras enabled France to claim the Cup for the first time in 59 years.

As they celebrated, virtually every newspaper in France was coming off the presses with their exploits splashed across the front page. Even the staid Le Monde, which often omits sports coverage altogether, had a front-page story and a full-page spread on the back page, including a dispatch from Washington reporting that the final had received little attention in the U.S.

For the elated French, it was difficult to determine who was the biggest hero of the weekend. One Parliament member, Eric Raoult, proposed giving all three principals the Legion of Honor, France's highest award.

There was Forget, solidly established as the world's No. 7 player, but seemingly stuck with a reputation for falling short in crucial matches. That reputation endured through his loss to Andre Agassi in the opening match Friday, but was erased on Sunday when he beat Sampras with booming aces on several of the most nerve-wracking points.

One of those aces came on a second serve, with Sampras holding a break point that could have put him back in the match.

"My back was against the wall, and I decided to risk everything," Forget said.

There was Leconte, whose erratic career seemed in jeopardy after back surgery in July. He played in only a handful of matches since then, and his ranking fell to No. 159. But he displayed enough determination in training sessions to convince Noah he should make the team.

The gamble paid off. On Friday against Sampras, Leconte played what Noah called "the match I dreamed he would play" - an inspired, fist-pumping, straight-set victory over Sampras to put France back in contention after Forget's loss to Agassi.

The next day, Leconte's intensity proved contagious as he teamed with Forget to beat the U.S. doubles team of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso. U.S. captain Tom Gorman called Leconte "the man of the match" and Flach said his play was of Top 10 caliber.

And finally, there was Noah. He'd played in Davis Cup losses to the United States in the 1982 final and the 1989 quarterfinal, and he was tempted to play again this year.

Instead, he warmed to his new role as captain. Treating his players as buddies, he concentrated on boosting their confidence, convincing them that they could win.

On Saturday, after the doubles victory left France one point short of the title, Noah was asked if he was satisfied with what had happened thus far.

"Absolutely not," he said. "In France, we've had too many number twos. We're too fond of losers. We've got to stop that. We want victory."

Reporter booted from Rockingham press box

SALEM, N.H. (AP) - Rockingham Park has stopped selling The Racing Times and banned one of its reporters from the track press box after he wrote two articles that angered track officials.

The articles appeared in Monday's editions, and the track immediately let the publication know T.D. Thornton no longer would be allowed to work in the press box, and The Racing Times no longer would be sold.

One of Thornton's articles appeared on the front page and detailed the drug arrest of track President Joseph Carney's son. Joseph Carney III, 29, of Salem, the track's director of valet parking, was charged with selling narcotics and was arrested at the track last week.

The other story was a column in which Thornton banned Rockingham's plan to run one live race while simulcasting others starting Jan. 1. He called the idea "a mockery."

On Tuesday, Thornton removed his belongings from the press box, but said he has no plans to leave his beat. He said he'll pay to enter the track each day, and work from "any suitable area."

"I stand by what's written and I'm not going to shy away from it," he said. "If they'd like to differ, it's their race track. They seem to think they can control the news."

Track spokesman Bill Nader said General Manager Edward Callahan was angered by the stories, which Nader termed "irresponsible journalism." He said Nader didn't think Carney's arrest belonged on page one, and was upset Thornton didn't seek his input before writing the column.

Nader said New Hampshire law requires that one live race be run if a track wants to simulcast other races. He said Rockingham officials have worked without success to get the law changed.

Rockingham is waiting for New Hampshire's Legislature to approve a racing circuit with Boston's Suffolk Downs and Foxboro Park. The Massachusetts Legislature already has approved the circuit, and Nader said the agreement is contingent upon Rockingham simulcasting Suffolk's races when the track opens Jan. 1 after a two-year hiatus.

"Eddie felt he deserved the courtesy of phone call to explain his side of the situation," Nader said.

Thornton has covered racing at Rockingham for The Racing Times since it began publication in April. However, he said has spent nearly his whole life there because he grew up nearby and his parents owned horses that ran at the track.

Miami Coach Erickson would favor play-off game to decide No. 1

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Miami coach Dennis Erickson likes the current bowl system just fine. But he'd be willing to play an extra game to prevent a repeat of last season, when Georgia Tech and Colorado split the title.

"I'm saying if there's a situation where you have two teams like that, it would be a good thing," Erickson said Monday. "I would be against more than one extra game."

The potential is there for another controversy this season.

Erickson's top-ranked Hurricanes and No. 2 Washington both finished the season undefeated and were separated by a slim 14 points in the final Associated Press poll of the regular season.

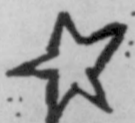

"I'm not in favor of a playoff," Erickson said prior to speaking to the Montgomery Quarterback Club. "I really like the bowls. The tradition of the bowls is what college football is all about."

While he's against a full-fledged playoff, Erickson said it might be feasible to settle any disputes over the national title with a championship game between the 1-2 teams after the bowls are over.

"I wouldn't mind playing one more game in a year like this, or like last year between Georgia Tech and Colorado," he said.

Colorado was named No. 1 in the AP Poll of writers and broadcasters while Georgia Tech was selected No. 1 in the UPI Coaches Poll.

Of course, any playoff is just a fantasy at this point. Miami (11-0) plays No. 11 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl the night of Jan. 1. Earlier in the day, Washington will take on fourth ranked Michigan in the Rose Bowl.
