New policy for alcohol ads a changing sign on campus

By Melissa Adams
Staff Writer

Beautiful blonde women in bathing suits, chilled bottles of long-neck beer and neon bar signs.

While these images may seem innocent to the average consumer, the University of Maine considers them inappropriate and has taken measures to abolish their display on campus through changes in its Alcohol Beverage Marketing and Promotion Policy.

Last revised in 1990 by the Faculty Senate in conjunction with Substance Abuse Services (SAS), the policy warns against the use of "irresponsible and inappropriate advertising and promotion of alcohol" which would encourage students to drink for the wrong reasons.

While the new policy pertains to the entire campus, it will affect the areas which traditionally advertise alcohol the most — the Bear's Den, Alford Arena and Athletic Department Sports Programs. Under the new proposals, all new alcohol advertising will only contain messages and graphics about responsible drinking.

According to Dr. Robert Dana, director of SAS, the university's new policy is a realistic approach.

"There was a lot of sentiment, as you might expect in an institute of higher education, to take the ideal, pristine, pure high road—do not advertise alcohol," he said.

While not regulating ads was out of the question, Dana said the resulting policy is the "best of both worlds."

"We shouldn't take alcohol advertising out. What we should do is have a higher order—a smarter ad campaign."

"If we're going to have alcohol advertising, let's make it alcohol ads that promote responsible drinking and anti-alcohol abuse," he said.

Although the policy is scheduled to take affect this September, the Bear's Den has already taken down all of its bar decorations at the request of SAS.

Neon bar signs depicting cold bottles of beer and slogans were removed one day after they were hung.

According to Jon Lewis, manager of the Bear's Den, it was simply an oversight in trying to "spruce up" the "unattractive" Bear's Den.

"We made a mistake when we read the guideline," he said. "I missed the first line which said prior approval by Substance Abuse Services."

Although he admitted the ads were "benign," Dana said the signs had to comply with the new rules. "They never had ads in the Bear's Den before. Those things came down because they simply weren't [educating students]."

"I didn't think they were offensive," he said.

Lewis and Dana are planning to consult the beer distributors and find new signs for the Den that comply with the new policy.

Coors beer has been advertised in Alford Arena for the past three years, as well as Budweiser in the sports programs, although no alcohol is served at any events.

Despite the innocent nature of the ads in both mediums, both Dana and Ian McCaw, assistant athletic director for external affairs, want change for the better.

♦ General Student Senate

Diversity demonstration creates division in Senate

By Kim Dineen
Staff Writer

The proper behavior of the General Student Senate was thrown into question last night as senators almost evenly split over the appropriateness of a program conducted by the Community Unification Committee (CUC).

Diversity was the subject of a program in which senators created a circle, linked arms, and prevented people outside the circle from entering it. The outsiders represented diversity and the exclusive circle represented people's resistance to it. This program lasted approximately 15 minutes.

Many senators refused to participate. When asked to join, Student Government president Brent Littlefield responded, "This is a governing board. I don't believe in doing programs during meetings." He attempted to end the demonstration by quoting the by-laws which limit board and committee reports to five minutes.

Knox Hall burglarized

$7,300 in damage done and $6,800 worth of students' possessions stolen over Spring Break

By Michael Reagan
Staff Writer

Knox Hall is not the luckiest place on campus. In January there was a fire on the fourth floor, destroying one room and damaging others.

Then during spring break, Knox Hall was burglarized.

Sometime between 4 p.m. on March 5 and 7:30 a.m. on March 6, 20 rooms were forcibly opened, according to Investigator William Laughlin of the University of Maine Department of Public Safety.

The break-ins occurred on the second, third and fourth floors. There were no external signs of entry on the building and all the doors on the first floor were secure, according to Laughlin.

Custodial staff discovered the damage to the locks and doors on March 6, but were unable to determine whether any items had been stolen.

Barbara Smith, assistant director of Residential Life, who is in charge of East-West campus, wrote letters to the students who lived in the rooms informing them about the break-ins.

On Monday, students began reporting stolen items. Currently, the value of all the stolen merchandise totals $6,800, Laughlin said.

Items reported stolen include two videocassette recorders, a stereo system, about 250 compact discs and a $2,100 computer from MacAct.

Smith said a number of rooms that had money and valuables lying about were untouched. Some rooms had various items moved, but not taken.

Mark Dakin, a freshman and resident of third floor west said he returned to find pieces of his door on the floor and his stereo moved.

Other people living on third floor west were not so fortunate. The two VCRs stolen were taken from Dakin's wing.

"If you find out who it is, I think a lot of people would like to get a hold of them," he said.

Steve Jalbert, another freshman resident of third floor west, was planning to give his brother a stereo with a CD player and dual cassette players for his birthday, but it was stolen along with a VCR and a watch.

The locks on all of the 20 doors had to be replaced and some doors sustained so much damage they had to be replaced entirely, Smith said. The total cost of replacing the doors and locks was $7,300.

Laughlin said the Department is continuing an investigation into the break-ins.

Anyone with information regarding the break-in can call the Department of Public Safety at x4040 or Laughlin at x4048.

UN starts peacekeeping operation; Cambodia begins war recovery

1 PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodia welcomed the start of the U.N. peacekeeping operation with a parade and speeches Monday, and Prince Norodom Sihanouk said his country can start convalescing from two decades of war.

Sihanouk, chairman of the reconciliation council set up under the peace accord signed by Cambodia's four warring factions, spoke at ceremonies for U.N. envoy Yasushi Akashi of Japan, who arrived Sunday to formally begin the U.N. mission.

Meanwhile, 11 Cambodians left refugee camps in Thailand to observe conditions in western Cambodia in preparation for U.N.-supervised repatriations set to begin at the end of March.

Jahanshah Ahshadi, chief representative at the border of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, said the visit would help build confidence among the 370,000 refugees who fled Cambodia's 13-year-old civil war.

Lebanon taking bids for oil exploration

3 NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Lebanon has invited companies to explore for oil and gas for the first time since the civil war broke out in 1975, the Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday.

The oil newsletter, published in Nicosia, said the Ministry of Industry and Oil set a July deadline for companies to submit bids for onshore or offshore exploration.

Before 1975, exploration in Lebanon was restricted to two dry wildcat wells drilled by the Elwerath company of West Germany in 1960-61, and a third drilled by Ausonia Mineraria of Italy in 1963 that found water, not oil.

Good samaritan leaves scuba diver boatless

4 OSLO, Norway (AP) — A scuba diver had to swim for his life due to the misplaced kindness of a passing fisherman.

The 28-year-old diver surfaced in a western Norway fjord Sunday to find his boat was gone, the Oslo paper Dagbladet said Monday. He swam from island to island for almost four hours before reaching the mainland.

When the diver reached the town of Fjell, he learned a search was under way for the occupants of an empty boat found on the fjord.

A fisherman had spotted the boat, assumed it was adrift and towed it to land, where he alerted rescuers.

◆ Resignation

Third governor quits in Eastern Germany

5 BERLIN (AP) — An eastern state governor from Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Party resigned Monday, leaving only two of the five states in the formerly communist east with the top officials elected 17 months ago.

The resignation of Alfred Gomolka in Mecklenburg-Lower Pomerania was rooted in deepening economic woes in shipbuilding, the state's major industry.

Although widely seen as symptomatic of immature democratic politics in the east, his resignation resulted partly from intervention by federal politicians in the debate over how to privatize the state's shipyards. Employment in the yards has plunged to about 20,000 from 55,000 before German unification.

Gomolka was the third eastern Christian Democratic governor to resign.

Antique French toilet out-sells Van Gogh sketch at art fair

2 MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (AP) — An ornate 18th century toilet outsold a Van Gogh at the European Fine Art Fair.

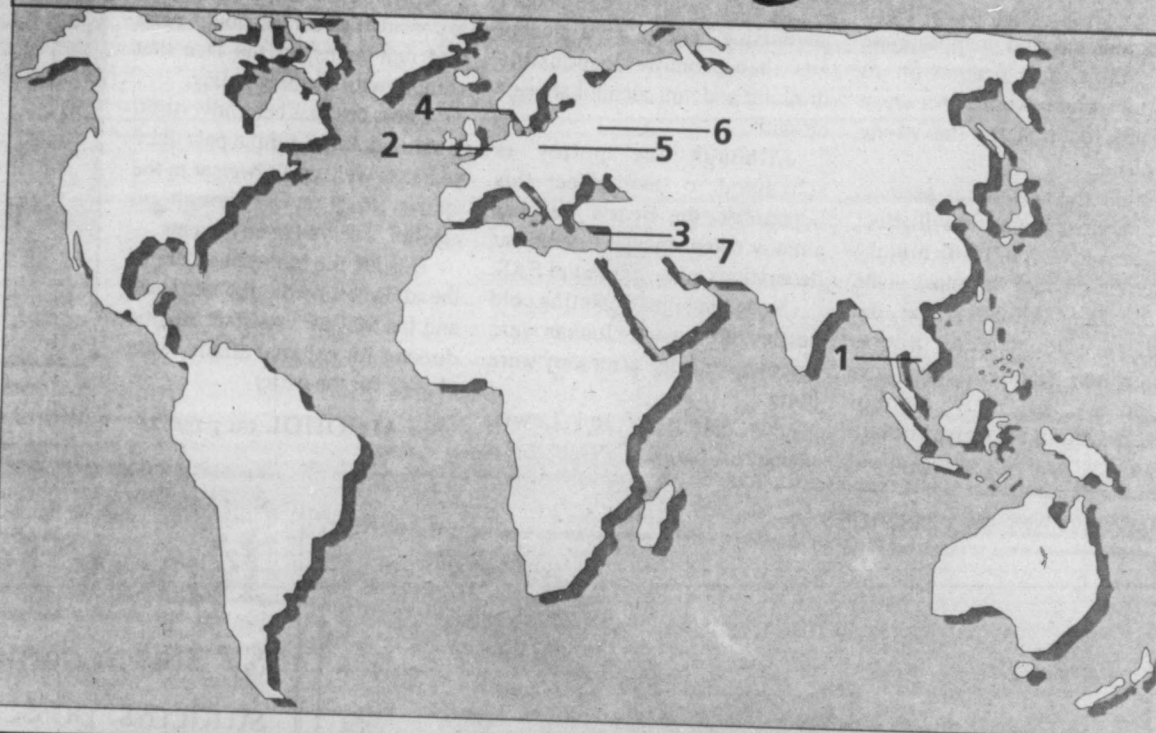

The patrician potty, which has tropical wood inlay, a marble lid and a French oak bowl, fetched 120,000 British pounds ($205,200) over the weekend.

"Women Working In The Field," a pencil sketch by Dutch impressionist Vincent van Gogh, sold for 200,000 German marks ($120,500) to a Spanish collector.

The toilet's seller, London antiques dealer Angela Grefen von Wallwitz, said the Louis XV-style piece likely belonged to an aristocratic or royal family. It is 4 feet wide, heavily ornamented in the style known as ormolu and carries a royal tax stamp.

The privy was bought by a German couple "who just wanted to live with it," said Grefen von Wallwitz. He did not give the buyers' names.

Lawmakers vow to restore Soviet Union, old parliament

6 MOSCOW (AP) — Hard-line Communists said Monday they would seek to reconvene the old Soviet parliament in defiance of the Russian government. Police planned to deploy thousands of officers to prevent unrest.

Members of the defunct Soviet Congress of People's Deputies announced plans for a Tuesday session and said they seek restoration of the Soviet Union.

Russian authorities said they would station police and Interior Ministry troops in downtown Moscow. The city's police chief, Arkady Murashev, told the ITAR-Tass news no army troops would be used.

Many supported the failed attempt in August to oust Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The prospect of such an assembly unnerved the Russian legislature, which banned the Congress and ordered Moscow Mayor Gavril Popov and city police to prevent the deputies from gathering.

A major demonstration opposing the Russian government's economic policies and supporting a revived Soviet Union also is planned for Tuesday. Popov agreed to allow the rally.

Commonwealth-wide TV on Sunday cited a public opinion poll indicating 64 percent of Muscovites opposed the Congress, 19 percent supported it and the rest were undecided.

◆ Holiday horror

Palestinian kills two, wounds 19 before killed by policeman

7 TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Palestinian attacked a crowd of high school students on a holiday outing Tuesday, fatally stabbing a teen-age girl and an adult and wounding 19 people before being killed, police said.

The assailant was shot by a border policeman who happened to be passing by and died minutes later at Ichilov Hospital, authorities said.

As the wounded attacker was taken away by police, a crowd gathered and began shouting "Kill him, kill him."

The stabbing occurred in a mixed Jewish-Arab section of Tel Aviv.

The youngsters were on an outing for Purim, a Jewish holiday similar to Halloween, and the victims first thought the attacker, who wore an Arab headdress, was in costume for the holiday.

Tel Aviv Police Commander Yigal Marcus said the assailant, bearded and about 30, was armed with two large knives.

He said a leaflet from the Islamic fundamentalist group Hamas was found on the attacker, who he said was from the occupied Gaza Strip.

Marcus said most of the wounded suffered superficial knife wounds. Israel army radio said the second fatality was an Arab from Jaffa.

A police official who spoke on condition of anonymity said a 14-year-old girl and another person were killed.

◆ Historic dig

Archaeological dig provides window to French-Abenaki past

By Randy Robinson
Volunteer Writer

The "unacceptable" behavior of a 17th-century French nobleman is providing archeologists with a chance to learn about early French presence in Maine and Acadia.

Jean Vincent de St-Castin forfeited his claim to a barony when he chose to live among and marry into the Etchemins, a Western tribe of the Abenaki Indians.

The settlement he founded, on the Bagaduce River in Castine, is currently being excavated under the direction of Alaric "Ric" Faulkner, an historical archaeologist and anthropology professor at the University of Maine.

Prior excavation of the village uncovered St-Castin's house, a warehouse, an apparent smithy, a well, and at least 32 temporary dwelling places, known as wigwams, for the native American villagers.

Faulkner said at least one-third of St-Castin's house has been washed away.

The National Park Service has nominated the privately owned site for designation as an historic landmark, which would help protect it from the damaging effects of civilization.

Faulkner said during the late 17th century, the French defined people without permanent homes as "savages."

St-Castin's efforts to integrate himself into the tribe, including marrying the daughter of the local sachem, or chief, made him unacceptable to claim the barony. St-Castin went back to France around 1700 to attempt just that, but was unsuccessful and died soon after his return.

Living among the Indians—rather than in a fort, like most French noblemen at the time—helped make St-Castin a hero in Acadian culture and literature, similar to George Washington and other "Founding Fathers" in America.

Faulkner said the project will enable archaeologists to learn about the interaction of the French, Indians, and early Maine settlers.

UMaine student Thomas Fenn said the excavation was "very exciting to be involved in."

Student Jeff Watts said the excavation gives him, "a good opportunity because it's something I plan to study." He also said he felt "lucky to work with Ric."

The National Endowment for the Humanities has donated $67,000 to the project. Faulkner said the project will require another $37,000 in matching funds, to be raised over the next three years. He said cash donations have so far totaled around $350.

Journalism dept chair has gone far, but he still can't type

By Holly Strahan
Volunteer Writer

Stuart Bullion, associate professor and department chair of Journalism and Mass Communications, describes himself as committed to his craft.

Bullion said he believes being a reporter, serving in two wars, and teaching at three different universities have given him the tools necessary for that craft.

"Journalists should be people with wisdom," Bullion said. "They should be people with a lot of experience, direct or indirect."

After serving in the Vietnam War, Bullion returned to graduate school at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis where he studied academic French literature.

Bullion said some professors and students discriminated against him and other war veterans, not realizing many who participated in the war may have been drafted against their will.

He said he felt faculty members were "out to get me."

He left graduate school while planning his wedding and began his journalism career by talking his way into a job. The only drawback was that he couldn't type. Smiling, he said, "I still can't."

Bullion spent two and half years at The St. Louis Park Sun in Minnesota, and though he enjoyed his job, it didn't pay very well. He knocked on other doors looking for a higher paying job, but was repeatedly told he needed a journalism degree.

He went back to school and received a Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota, but was "almost overqualified" for a job on a newspaper, and his teaching career began.

Before coming to the University of Maine, Bullion worked at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale and Spring Hill College in Mobile, Alabama.

Bullion's students say they enjoy his teaching techniques.

"It's the most interesting 100-level class I've ever taken. He gives examples that I can relate to," Terry McDonald, who is presently taking Introduction to Journalism and Mass Communications, said.

"He doesn't use theory alone, he applies the information so I can relate to it," Sara Bourque said.

Bullion said he often misses reporting and the thrill of discovery. He said the challenge to question, to find out why, is where he found his greatest satisfaction while reporting.

The lead, (the first paragraph of an article) was always the hardest part for Bullion.

"Just give me the lead, Lord, and I'll do the rest," is an old journalist's quote he said he became familiar with.

Bullion said he has started several books, yet never found the time to finish.

He said he has not found an introduction to journalism and mass communications book that covers the essentials. So if time allows, there may be a Bullion publication of a JMC 100 text.

Bullion has had essays published in professional journals such as Journal of Mass Media Ethics, Journalism Quarterly and Nieman Reports.

Bullion is married, has three children, and lives in Alton, Maine.

700 gallons of fuel spilled in Bangor

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — A Webber Oil truck blew a tire and overturned spilling an estimated 700 gallons of kerosene and oil that threatened the Kenduskeag Stream.

Driver Harlan Green said on Monday that the truck tipped over when it hit the soft shoulder of the 14th Street Extension and became unbalanced. Green was not injured.

Although some of the fuel went into the stream, officials said the quick response of city workers lessened the environmental hazard.

The Fire Department and the Public Works Department made a dike about two feet tall from sand and used absorbent pads to soak up the fuel, said Assistant Fire Chief Michael Anderson.

The fuel collected in the lower section of a parking lot alongside the stream forming a pool about 18 inches deep, Anderson said.

Some of the fuel did get into the stream, but in the fast-moving water it was expected to break up and dissipate fairly quickly, Anderson said.

"It's not a slick, you can see a shine. DEP (Department of Environmental Protection) looked at it and they're not real concerned about it," Anderson said.

♦ Rape series

Survey of students show most believe rapes underreported

By Kathryn Krahn Tulman and Catherine Leombruno
Lounsbury
Volunteer Writers

"Rape affects all women. It affects us all in that we have to alter the way we dress, behave, the places we go on a daily basis," an anonymous University of Maine student said.

Statistics say one in four women will be the victim of rape or attempted rape during their life. Student responses when asked how rape affects them indicate they consider this statistic daily.

A recent theory in criminology is that the consequences of crime are not limited to those directly victimized; in fact, fear of victimization occurs at both individual and social levels. Fear of rape is a central feature of a woman's socialization process and can restrict her activities.

Reports indicate rape is highest for females in the 16-19-year-old age group; the second highest is the 20-24 group. Women in these age groups have a four times greater chance of being raped than all other women.

In a 1987 study of 6,159 students at 32 colleges and universities across the nation, 53.7 percent of the women indicated they had experienced some form of sexual victimization—rape, attempted rape, sexual coercion or unwanted sexual contact. When translated, this means as many as 3,000 women on this campus have been sexually victimized at some point.

Students at UMaine were recently surveyed about their perceptions of rape on campus. The majority felt more rapes occur than are reported. Despite efforts by UMaine to promote rape awareness, most students did not think they were informed about rapes on campus.

"I know it happens; it seems to me like the university tries to cover it up and pretend as though it never happens," an anonymous female junior said.

Judith Herman, M.D., a member of the Women's Mental Health Collective in Somerville, Mass. and assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, said the possibility of sexual assault begins from the moment women begin to socialize with men.

"We who are unescorted are at risk for street rape, and we who are escorted by men are at risk for date rape and marital rape," she said.

This sentiment was also expressed by a female junior at UMaine. "It (rape) affects me because I worry about walking alone after dark or even meeting someone new at a party and talking to them alone."

Herman said rape "is a form of terrorism by which men as a group keep women as a group frightened and submissive. It serves the same political function as the lynch threat or the pogrom."

The difficulty of stopping rape has led some, like legal scholar and feminist theorist it angers me that there is a fear specific to one gender due to the actions of another (in most cases)," Dina Rugani, junior.

"Going to a campus in the woods of Maine you think you're safe. But the point is you don't even know if you're safe from your boyfriend or close male friend anymore."

"It's upsetting to me. Especially date by the victim.

"I am a very friendly person, but I find myself aware and cautious because (rape) does happen," a senior said.

Men are also affected by rape. The UMaine survey found that many men fear for their friends, family members and girlfriends.

"The statistics of women being raped are terrifying. A victim of rape could easily be one of my friends or family members. This absolutely frightens me," a male member of Athletes for Sexual Responsibility said.

"It's almost a helpless feeling. If anything did happen, knowing that I wasn't there would drive me nuts," Jamie Robertson, a male student said.

Other students described additional effects rape has on men.

"Rape affects me as a male because some women associate rape with all men. I also feel as a student at UMaine I have a responsibility to help stop rape," said Eric Pooler.

"Rape affects men as well. Men who are caring individuals are also feared," said a female junior.

"In order for rape to end in this society and campus, men must take the responsibility," said a male undergraduate.

"The people that could really do things (about rape) don't. We have our Rape Center and Rape Awareness Week, but it kinda stops there," said a senior.

This has been the second in a five-part series on rape.

You don't even know if you're safe from your boyfriend or close male friend anymore."

—Dina Rugani, junior

Catherine MacKinnon, to believe sexual assault is "not prohibited, but regulated." She said this expresses itself in the lack of publicity surrounding rape, blaming of the victim in rape trials, and apathy on the part of those who have not experienced rape.

A female junior described her fear that she is in the highest risk group for rape. "It's scary and it makes me feel that this campus has inadequate means of protecting its students."

When asked how rape affected them, female UMaine students responded, though most chose to remain anonymous.

"The knowledge of rape causes me to be a paranoid female. I carry mace with me at all times."

"As a woman, rape scares me; as a person rape, because it's discouraging to know you may be trusting the wrong person," said Jennifer Sibley, a junior.

Martha A. Burt, researcher at the Urban Institute in Washington, D.C., said because of the fear of rape, women may modify or limit their behavior. While students say they are cautious in selecting their dating partners, they seem to be less cautious with those they believe they know.

According to a report by the Association of American Colleges, "Most rapes are not committed by strangers but by men who know their victims, who have often gone out with them previously and are supposed to be their friends." One study shows eight of 10 sexual assaults involve perpetrators known

Castration of child molester called off

By Laura Tolley
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—A deal under which an alleged child molester agreed to castration instead of prison was called off when two doctors reneged on offers to perform the surgery.

Medical ethicists, meanwhile, say no physician should have agreed to do the procedure in the first place.

"Doctors are actively discouraged from participating in punishment-related treatment since it is not in the patient's best interest," Dr. Eugene Boisubin, an ethics committee member at Methodist Hospital, said Monday.

Henry Strobel, a biochemistry professor at the University of Texas Medical School in Houston, also said he didn't think castration was proper in the case.

State District Judge Michael McSpadden agreed March 6 to let Steven Allen Butler be castrated after the 28-year-old man asked to undergo the procedure rather than stand trial on charges he raped a 13-year-old girl.

McSpadden withdrew his approval Monday, saying a doctor could not be found to perform the surgery.

The case touched off a storm of controversy. Critics said castration did nothing to address the crime of rape, and black activists said the action was racially motivated because Butler is black.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson met with Butler on Friday in jail. Jackson told reporters castration is "immoral and uncivilized and an act of barbarism and a step backward."

One of Butler's sisters and a lawyer representing Butler's family said last week Butler had had second thoughts about undergoing the procedure. But his attorney, Clyde Williams, said Butler had told her as recently as Friday he still wanted to.

McSpadden's ruling effectively put an end to the castration option, meaning Butler still faces the aggravated sexual assault charge. Earlier, the judge said Butler would be placed on a form of probation for 10 years if he underwent the surgery.

If he stands trial and is convicted, he could be sentenced to life in prison. No trial date has been set.

Butler was on probation for indecency with a 7-year-old girl when he was arrested last April for his alleged attacks on the 13-year-old.

Elderly of rural Maine and NH targets in robbery spree

PORTLAND, Maine (AP)—Police are searching for a ring of phony repairmen suspected in six violent robberies of elderly residents in rural Maine and New Hampshire.

Police say they aren't sure if the six cases are related, but there are similarities that make them suspect the crimes are being committed by a ring of con men.

In most cases, the robbers have posed as lightning rod salesmen or basement repairmen. They offer inexpensive services to get into the homes, and then tie up their victims, authorities say.

Police are warning elderly people not to keep large amounts of cash at home and not to open their doors to strangers.

Since January, nine elderly people have been robbed in their homes in the Maine towns of Berwick, Livermore Falls, West Paris and Sumner, and in the New Hampshire towns of Madbury and Wakefield.

"Unfortunately, a lot of people victimized in these cases are vulnerable because it's easy for people to fast-talk their way right past them," said Larry Gross, executive director of the Southern Maine Area Agency on Aging.

In the most vicious case, an 83-year-old Berwick woman, Eva Payne, was robbed, beaten and left unconscious on her bedroom floor Feb. 29. She was found by a neighbor.

In the most recent case, Diane Collette, 77, and Henry Baril, 85, were robbed when two masked men forced their way into the couple's Livermore Falls home. The couple was bound and gagged with duct tape, and the robbers stole between $400 and $500.

In both cases, police say, the residents' phone lines were cut by the robbers.

Here are details of the other cases police suspect may be related:

- On Feb. 24 in West Paris, three men handcuffed and terrorized an elderly couple and stole hundreds of dollars from their Route 219 farmhouse.

- On Feb. 22 in Sumner, thieves posing as home repairmen stole a pocketbook from an elderly woman and cut her phone service.

- On Feb. 20 in Madbury, N.H., a 70-year-old woman was robbed of more than $1,000 by three men who offered to seal cracks in her basement.

- On Jan. 4 in Wakefield, N.H., a husband and wife were terrorized by three assailants who shot the man with a stun gun before fleeing in what police suspected was a stolen van.

Detective James Miclon of the Oxford County Sheriff's Department said police have sent evidence from the cases to the FBI in Washington for analysis, hoping to find clues linking them.

He said investigators hope to get clues from hair samples and clothing fibers taken from one victim's home. He declined to give further details.

He also said several victims told police their assailants were driving a white mid-sized four-door car.

But Miclon said the cases are difficult to investigate because the victims were so terrified they could not recall details of their ordeal.

♦ Foreign policy

Mitchell wants Bush to consult Congress about former USSR

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell is calling on President Bush to meet with leaders of Congress to come up with a policy to help the republics of the former Soviet Union.

"The president cannot shrink from a leadership role on this crucial issue," Mitchell, a Maine Democrat, said Monday in a speech to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council. A text was released in Washington.

Bush has been harshly criticized in recent days for not doing enough to shore up the forces of democracy. Members of Congress and even former President Nixon have said the administration's response falls far short and could jeopardize reforms already made.

When Congress approved $500 million last year for humanitarian aid and to safeguard nuclear weapons, "The president did not lift a finger," Mitchell said.

"I believe that the survival of democracy in what was the Soviet Union is important to the United States," he said. "If the president agrees, then he should join the Congress in helping the people in those countries make the transition."

Mitchell called specifically for U.S. support for currency stabilization and debt relief for the republics through the International Monetary Fund. He also said the United States should move ahead with deeper cuts in nuclear weapons on both sides and an end to nuclear testing.

In addition, he said it is time for Cold War rationales to be weeded out of America's foreign aid program. Aid should be shifted from military categories, and conditioned on how well recipients embrace American ideals.

♦ Murder trial

Jury to decide whether shooting was accidental

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A jury deliberating the fate of a Brunswick man accused of murder must decide whether he intentionally fired the fatal shot or whether the gun discharged accidentally.

Michael Mannion, 27, is accused of shooting his roommate on Christmas Day 1990 after an argument over Mannion's sloppiness in their Brunswick mobile home.

Jurors deliberated five hours Monday before Justice G. Arthur Brennan sent them home at 7 p.m. Before resuming deliberations this morning in Cumberland County Superior Court, the jurors asked Brennan to read back his legal instructions on the different elements involved in murder and manslaughter charges.

In closing arguments, Assistant Attorney General Pamela Ames told jurors Monday that Mannion shot William Lewis, 63, out of anger because he knew Lewis was planning to throw him out.

"He was so mad he was going to get thrown out of the trailer that he just didn't care," Ames said. "He intentionally pointed the gun at Bill Lewis and pulled the trigger."

Throughout the trial, which began a week ago, the prosecution maintained that Mannion shot Lewis after the argument and that Lewis told his nephew on the day of the shooting that he was going to tell his roommate to move out.

The defense contends the rifle went off accidentally as Mannion was preparing to clean it.

◆ Presidential primaries

Clinton takes Michigan, finishes strong in Illinois

By John King
AP Political Writer

DETROIT (AP)—Michigan and Illinois voters Tuesday settle presidential contests that seem destined to vault Bill Clinton miles ahead in the Democratic race and sap more strength from Patrick Buchanan's Republican revolt.

Jobs and trade were the dominant issues in the weeklong campaign to win the struggling Rust Belt, although the Democratic race was sidetracked at the end by rough mudslinging between Clinton and Jerry Brown.

Clinton hoped for a Midwestern sweep to add to last week's Super Tuesday blowout. Well ahead in late polls in both states, the Arkansas governor was poised to become the prohibitive favorite for the Democratic nomination.

Buchanan himself established Michigan as perfect proving ground for his "America First" message, but late polls showed he was more likely to have a tough time matching past showings.

Buchanan abandoned his talk of toppling Bush and returned to his battle cry that a vote for him would "send Washington a message to wake up."

Bush, in a stop in Milwaukee, hardly sounded worried on an election-eve trip to Wisconsin and Illinois that raised $1 million for his re-election effort at a time even conservative enthusiasm for Buchanan's rebellion appeared to be waning.

"I've been very pleased," Bush said of his unbroken string of 15 victories. But he refused to predict his margins: "Never try to say how high the high bar should be on these primaries."

Among the Democrats, Clinton held healthy leads heading into Tuesday's balloting and sought to end the day with a good chunk of the 295 Democratic delegates at stake. He had 766.25 delegates even before the polls opened — one third of what it takes to be nominated.

While predicting wins in both states, Clinton aides said the man to watch in Michigan was Brown, the former California governor and angry-man candidate who worked feverishly to tap into the state's economic anger — vividly illustrated by mounting auto layoffs and anger at perceived unfair Japanese trade practices. Clinton aides said Brown was approaching 30 percent in late internal Michigan polls.

A strong showing by Brown would be more bad news for former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who immediately after poor showings in the South said the real test of the race would come on the neutral Midwest turf.

Canadate's wives facing own problems in political campaigns

By Wendy Benjaminson
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Being a successful lawyer has long been a path to political power. But if that attorney is married to a presidential candidate, it means tiptoeing through a mine field of potential conflicts of interests and tainted fees.

And what do they do if their husbands win? A new breed of political wife is emerging, women who don't gain fame or power only from a fortuitous marriage. They walk a fine line between taking pride in their success and enduring barbs that "they're the brains in the family," a veiled swipe at their husbands that they deflect with lines like, "You want me? Vote for him."

Four women struggled this year with the new pressures of being successful lawyers and good candidates' wives:

- Hillary Rodham Clinton, a partner in a prestigious Little Rock, Ark., law firm.
- Marilyn Quayle, an attorney whose legal career has been on indefinite hold.

- Ruth Harkin, a lawyer with the Washington powerhouse firm Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld.

- Niki Tsongas, who got her law degree after her husband, Paul, contracted cancer to provide financial stability to their family.

Hillary Clinton became a lightning rod for criticism of husband Bill Clinton's Democratic presidential campaign when rival Jerry Brown accused the Arkansas governor of funneling money to her law firm.

"I suppose I could have stayed home and baked cookies and had teas," she responded.

Both Clintons have denied Brown's accusation, which was based on a misinterpretation of a Washington Post article on the Rose Law Firm's power in Little Rock.

The Clintons also have noted that she has refused hundreds of thousands of dollars in potential earnings from her firm's work with the state because of the possibility for conflict of interest.

Phone records of reporter subpoenaed

NEW YORK (AP) — A special Senate investigator has subpoenaed the phone records of two reporters who refused to tell how they learned of sexual harassment allegations against Clarence Thomas, it was reported.

Newsday reporter Timothy M. Phelps was notified Monday that Senate Special Independent Counsel Peter E. Fleming Jr. had subpoenaed phone records from Sept. 23 through Oct. 6, his newspaper said in a news release.

The New York Times reported in Tuesday's editions that National Public Radio reporter Nina Totenberg's phone records were also subpoenaed.

The Times said the personal phone records of both reporters were subpoenaed.

The reporters have refused to tell Fleming how they learned of Professor Anita Hill's allegations that Thomas had sexually harassed her when she worked for him.

Thomas is now an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. His confirmation last year was briefly thrown into doubt, however, after Hill's allegations were reported and she went on to testify at his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Newsday Publisher Robert M. Johnson called the action "a gross, dangerous and destructive invasion of the reporting process."

Bush says options open with Iraqi missile problem

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — President Bush said Monday that Iraq is still hiding many ballistic missiles and "all options are open" to force Baghdad to comply with the United Nations' orders to dismantle its arsenal.

"We are just insisting in every way we can that Iraq comply with the United Nations resolutions," Bush told reporters. "I'm not discussing options. All options are open..." he said. "Serious business here."

He suggested that the movement of the U.S. aircraft carrier America into the Persian Gulf was not a sign of imminent military action against Iraq.

"I wouldn't read too much into the movement of a carrier," the president told reporters aboard Air Force One.

Later, in a written bimonthly report to Congress, Bush described instances of Iraqi noncompliance with U.N. inspectors charged

U.N. offer to allow the sale of $1.6 billion of Iraqi oil to buy food and medicine.

Bush also derided Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz, who appealed to the United Nations last week for an easing of the economic blockade against his country and less stringent enforcement of an order for full disclosure and elimination of its chemical, biological, nuclear and missile capabilities.

Asked by a reporter if Aziz were footdragging, Bush replied, "Yes, bobbing and weaving."

In the face of Baghdad's intransigence, there has been speculation that the United States and its allies might take military action against Iraq.

The speculation also has been fueled by the belief that tough action against Iraq would give a political boost to Bush.

"We're insisting in every way we can that Iraq comply with the United Nations resolutions," Bush said. "I'm not discussing options. All options are open."

PRINCIPLES OF SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

WHY YOU SHOULD START PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT WITH YOUR EYES CLOSED.

For retirement to be the time of your life, you have to dream a little—about the things you've always wanted to do: travel, explore, start a business. Just imagine...

With a dream and a plan, you can make it happen. Your pension and Social Security should provide a good basic retirement income, but what about all those extras that make your dreams possible? You'll probably need some additional savings.

THE DREAM IS YOUR OWN. WE CAN HELP YOU WITH THE PLAN.

TIAA-CREF Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs), tax-deferred annuities for people like you in education and research, are a good way to save for retirement and save on taxes now. SRAs are easy—you make contributions through your institution before your taxes are calculated, so you pay less tax now.

You pay no tax on your SRA contributions and earnings until you receive them as income. And saving regularly means your contributions and their earnings can add up quickly.

What else makes SRAs so special? A broad range of allocation choices, from the safety of TIAA to the investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity; no sales charges; a variety of ways to receive income, including annuities, payments over a fixed period, or cash. You may also be able to borrow against your SRA accumulation before you retire.*

All this, plus the top investment management that has helped make TIAA-CREF the largest retirement system in the country.

So start dreaming and planning for the time of your life. Because the sooner you start your SRA, the greater your savings and your retirement will be.

South Africa at crossroads with referendum

By Barry Renfrew
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Whites voted Tuesday in a referendum on ending three centuries of white domination and sharing power with blacks, a vote on which President F.W. de Klerk has staked his political future.

Most political analysts predicted a government victory in the whites-only poll, with some saying support has been swinging to de Klerk in the final days of the three-week campaign.

"I voted 'yes.' It's the only thing to do for the future of this country... my (black) work mates don't have the vote and I must vote for them," construction worker Chris Bakker said after voting in Johannesburg.

Yet predictions were uncertain, as there was a ban on publishing opinion polls during the campaign. Party workers taking private polls said many whites were refusing to say how they would vote, adding to the doubt.

Analysts said that the up to 25 percent of white voters who were undecided were likely to decide the outcome.

Long lines formed at many urban polling stations as voting began shortly after dawn on a warm summer day. A heavy voter turnout of the nation's 3.3 million white voters was expected to favor de Klerk.

Results were not to be announced until Wednesday.

A victory for de Klerk would signal the end of white domination stretching back to the 17th century.

A victory for de Klerk, who has scrapped most apartheid laws during two years of lightning reform, would signal the end of white domination stretching back to the arrival of European settlers in the 17th century.

But if defeated, de Klerk has said he would resign, clearing the way for a whites-only general election and the probable victory of pro-apartheid forces.

Any attempt to reimpose apartheid would be resisted by the nation's 30 million blacks, plunging the country into political chaos.

If reform is rejected, "there is no doubt where that must lead us — to a dead end of division and destruction," de Klerk said in a newspaper message to voters on the eve of the referendum.

Nelson Mandela, president of the African National Congress, said the black opposition group would fight if reforms were halted.

"Any suggestion that we should return to those days (of old-style apartheid) will be resisted with all the power at our command," Mandela said Monday in a final appeal for 'yes' votes.

"Those who remember what the swastika meant in Europe... know it means the same thing in South Africa now," said Zach de Beer, leader of the anti-apartheid Democratic Party, which is backing de Klerk.

De Klerk says the country's only hope is a negotiated deal with the black majority. Pro-apartheid forces, however, say de Klerk is leading the country into the kind of chaos that they claim has wrecked black Africa.

Andries Treurnicht, head of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, has told the country's 5 million whites they could lose everything to a government run by black Marxists if the referendum passes.

◆ Technology

Sanyo says it has superconducting transistor

TOKYO (AP) — Sanyo Electric Co. on Monday announced the development of a superconducting transistor that works up to 10 times faster than current semiconductors and uses less than one-hundredth the electricity.

The device would be useful in such electronic equipment as microwave communication systems and super-computers capable of extreme high speeds, Sanyo said. But it isn't likely to be available for commercial use until after 2000, Sanyo said.

Sanyo said the transistor consists of a extremely thin film — one crystal deep — of high-temperature superconductor material deposited on an oxide semi-conductor.

The thin film creates a junction in which electrons move under the laws of quantum mechanics, resulting in high speeds and low power consumption.

In a phenomenon in quantum mechanics called the tunnel effect, electrons can "tunnel" through thin barriers at very high speed under certain conditions. By varying those conditions, the flow of electrons through the transistor can be regulated, Sanyo said.

◆ Mideast peace talks

Palensitians not pleased with peace talks, but not quitting yet

By Haitham Hamad
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — The head of the Palestinian delegation to Middle East peace talks said Monday that the negotiations were in jeopardy because each side was rejecting the other's position.

Dr. Haidar Abdul-Shafi said the Palestinians were re-evaluating their role in the U.S.-backed talks but stopped short of suggesting they would quit.

"We are still interested in continuing the process but not at the loss of Palestinian basic rights," the Gaza Strip physician told reporters in east Jerusalem.

"We are evaluating the whole negotiating process, and you will hear later the Palestinian decision on how to continue," Abdul-Shafi said.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir repeated his position Monday that the Jewish state was unwilling to trade land for peace with its Arab neighbors.

"To my regret," said Shamir, "there are friends and foe who are trying to conclude that the key to peace is based on one-sided concessions even at the expense of the wholeness of the land of Israel and our future security."

"They are terribly mistaken," Shamir told a memorial gathering for Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who died last week.

Abdul-Shafi told reporters that the peace process is being conducted on the basis of U.N. Resolution 242, which calls for Israel to relinquish land captured from Jordan, Syria and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war.

Asked why he characterized the talks as in trouble, Abdul-Shafi said: "When I say that we are in trouble, I mean that both sides are rejecting each other's proposals."

Ehud Gol, Shamir's media adviser, dismissed this, saying progress had been made at the last round of talks this month in Washington. The talks began in October in Spain.

"We feel we moved forward. We know that you cannot solve the problems in three or four meetings, but each meeting brings us closer to an understanding," Gol said by telephone.

At the last round, Israel said the Palestinians' plan was a model for a Palestinian state. The Palestinians had urged election of a legislative assembly to govern the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and the withdrawal of Israeli troops.

The Palestinians rejected the Israeli proposal as outdated. While Israel offered some self-rule, it proposed keeping in place the military regulations under which the territories are ruled and allowing more Jewish settlements.

◆ Child bride

Ten-year-old bride returned to parents after forced marriage

HYDERABAD, India (AP) — A 10-year-old girl was reunited Monday with her parents, who had forced the child to marry a Saudi Arabian man 50 years her senior so they could collect $4,100.

The reunion came seven months after Indian police interceded in the marriage and took the girl from her husband, who was arrested.

The marriage between Ameena, the child bride, and 60-year-old Sheikh Yahya al-Sageish created a national furor and touched off newspaper debates on such marriages, which often occur in India between young Muslim girls and older men from the Arabian peninsula.

Al-Sageish took Ameena to New Delhi

after the August wedding, but the girl burst into tears on the flight and told a flight attendant she had been married against her will.

Al-Sageish acknowledged paying $4,100 to Ameena's father, Syed Badruddin, who works as a motor scooter taxi driver, a job with an annual income of about $460.

Meanwhile, Al-Sageish, who was released on bail, divorced Ameena and returned to Saudi Arabia.

On Thursday, the Delhi High Court ordered Ameena returned to her parents, rejecting claims by the social groups that they would take better care of the girl.

Ameena returned to Hyderabad on Sunday, where she was reunited with her parents in court. Her two brothers and five sisters, all younger, also were present. Ameena hugged her parents.

Ameena's mother, Sabira Begum, told The Associated Press the family would not attempt another marriage until Ameena turned 18. She said she would not accept any foreigners as prospective bridegrooms.

The marriage between the child bride and 60-year-old Sheikh Yahya al-Sageish created a national furor and touched off newspaper debates on such marriages.

The flight attendant alerted the airport police, who arrested al-Sageish on a charge of illegally marrying a minor. India prohibits the marriage of girls under the age of 18, although the law is often ignored.

Since August, Ameena had lived in a government-run home for destitute women while several social organizations and the flight attendant, Amrita Ahluwalia, appealed in a New Delhi court for her custody.

◆ Substance Abuse Services

Ads are just a symptom

Substance Abuse Services is regulating the advertising of alcoholic beverages on campus which "would encourage drinking for the wrong reasons."

What reasons does SAS consider the "right" reasons for drinking?

This whole campaign is preposterous. If you can lead a horse to water and not make it drink, it would seem to be true that you can lead students away from alcohol and still have them drink.

Drinking on campus is nothing new. Maybe SAS should be addressing the problems that exist at UMaine that encourage students to drink instead of trying to blame it on "harmless" advertisements.

It seems to me that students over the age of 21 won't be convinced to drink simply because of the effects of bikini-clad women appearing with an open beer.

The responsibility of advertising is to sell the product, not to educate. If the SAS wants to educate people to drink responsibly then they should be focusing on educational campaigns, not exercises in censorship.

This committee has had the power to control the beer advertisements on campus for years, but that doesn't make it right. The Coors ad that has been removed from Alford Arena was admittedly "relatively harmless," yet it's being removed because it doesn't educate and promote responsible drinking.

Aren't there more important issues facing this campus that need to be addressed than the type of alcohol advertisements contained herein?

The energies of the campus leaders involved in this project could be better spent. Alcoholism is a disease; wouldn't it make more sense to try to cure the illness than to treat a symptom? (CJC)

◆ Substance Abuse Services

On the right track

Substance Abuse Services, the Bear's Den and the Athletic Department have teamed up to take on an opponent that makes two billion dollars a year—alcohol advertising.

In an attempt to best educate the students they serve, the three have decided, along with the university as a whole, to change the tactic of alcohol advertising on campus to that of responsible drinking and education.

While alcohol advertising on campus has been relatively sparse and innocent compared to the "real world," the university has decided to replace cold bottles of beer with educational messages and the encouragement of responsible drinking.

Critics argue that the university is censoring the campus, and students—especially those over 21—are old enough to determine their drinking behaviors and the factors that affect them. They also see the change as an attempt to prohibit students from drinking altogether.

If the university truly wanted to discourage drinking, they wouldn't allow alcohol advertising at all. It is their property and their right to control what appears on the premises.

Instead of sticking its head in the ground like so many universities have been known to do, UMaine is taking a realistic approach to advertising.

Not only does the university accept the fact that drinking is a part of collegiate life, it encourages students to drink responsibly and attempts to better educate them to the realities of irresponsible drinking.

UMaine has tackled a very real problem with a very real answer, an answer that acknowledges the students' maturity along with its own. (MAA)

Burning vacation questions

Michael Reagan

Given the current thinning of the ozone layer the obsession of Americans and even the allegedly more educated college students over getting well done in a time of ozone depletion shows that self-delusion is alive and well.

The burnished look is popular in the present, even if more ultraviolet light is filtered in.

The "fake bake" further testifies to the all-powerful look which dries up, wrinkles, and causes cancer in many of the status-seekers in our society.

Beyond the admiring gazes of fellow peers, there is no benefit for anyone from tanning salons, except health clubs trying to make money in the winter.

It is simply a glowing bed where the moving slab of flesh lays to get a darker color; a toaster-oven for people, except the toast pays to get a dark brown look and brings its own butter.

There are even greater lengths most go to to have what is all-American.

The national sign of status which encompasses crispy-brown south-bound college students and even the palest of Americans is the only true religious shrine in America, Disney World.

There is no motivation like spiritual renewal or answers to deep questions which push on American pilgrims. It's to have the mouse ears with the name sewn on it, to wait forever for short rides, to be a part of it, whatever "it" means.

A century ago the young educated elite of America took "the Grand Tour," a trip meant not only to be fun but to teach about the past and the historical lessons of great cities like Paris, London, and Vienna.

Now young Americans of many backgrounds and in far larger numbers travel to see oversized mice and replicas of castles and submarines and pay exorbitant prices for the thoroughly false experience.

And most of them make sure they burn their skin in the process. Ah, progress.

Peer pressure is hardly a new innovation, but the famous American rebelliousness is tied with the national definition of cool, a contradiction in terms. Dark tans are the accepted definition of cool and pasty-faced rebels are not seen very much.

College students, a veritable crop of would-be troublemakers and miscreants, are instead the big buyers of mainstream Disneyfication.

And the big question of whether or not the big price tag was worth it may never be answered, because just being at the Magic Kingdom is enough. It's just like having the cool toy or clothes in childhood, except the dollar values are quadrupled.

In this country, freedom means being able to do about anything with one's own money and a few other things. The people of the U.S. are more or less allowed to choose where to have their vacations or how they should look, if they would only have the spine enough to do so.

◆ Presidential Search

Orenduff expresses gratitude

To the editor:

To the University of Maine community: Now that the process of selecting a new president for the University of Maine is officially complete, I want to express my gratitude of the many expressions of support for my candidacy. I appreciate greatly the confidence expressed in your many statements, letters and telephone calls. And I remain honored to have been considered for the position.

As I promised during the interview, I will continue to advocate for a change in the way funds are distributed among campuses and for a reshaping of the roles of our seven institutions.

Because of the prominent position of Orono in that system, we all have a stake in your success. So I look forward to working with Fred Hutchinson to improve public higher education in Maine.

Over the past several years, I have been fortunate to make a number of friends at the University of Maine. As a result of the search process and interview, that number has increased.

You have a new president who seems a perfect match for the campus. And I get to remain a college president in Maine.

Seems like a pretty good outcome to me.

Sincerely,
J. Michael Orenduff
President UMF

ROY AND HELEN'S LIFE-LONG DREAM OF VISITING BUTTE, MONTANA, WAS ENDED BY A SIMPLE TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR ON THEIR PLANE TICKETS.

◆ Condoms

Condoms don't always provide totally safe sex

To the editor:

In the "safe sex" article in Monday's paper, JWB expressed contempt with the Kennebunk school system's decision not to allow Miss Fecto to pass out condoms and literature pertaining to "safe sex." Well that's the problem. It's not "safe sex," it's safer sex.

This method of preventing the spread of AIDS is improper and ineffective. A condom will only last a week in a wallet and then its like skydiving with a ripped parachute. Not only that, but it takes no thought to take a condom from someone and then use it. When a student goes to Cutler, it is a conscious decision to go and get a condom. When a person puts a quarter into a machine it's a conscious decision to get a condom.

We must remember to tell people that no sex is "safe sex" but if they are going to have sex then there are safer ways to do so. We must also make sure that we are providing students with the safest possible types of protection and that the students are thinking before they are having sex.

Editorial policy

Letters to the editor of The Maine Campus should be no longer than 250 words. Letters should be typed or clearly written and include a name, address and phone number.

The Campus will not accept letters which appear to be advertisements or announcements for upcoming events or activities.

Guest columns must be arranged with the editor and be no longer than 450 words.

The Maine Campus reserves the right to edit all submissions for length, taste and libel.

◆ Budget Cuts

UMaine in a hole

To the editor:

Maine is making a big mistake by cutting UMaine Orono's budget.

By cutting budgets on campus and increasing tuition, UMaine will fall into a deep hole which will be near impossible to get out of.

The Maine legislature is doing it all wrong, they should be pumping more money into the school not taking it away.

What they have to do is treat UMaine like a product and the student like the customer. Once they have done this, their job will seem much clearer. By giving UMaine a higher price tag, while at the same time making cuts, the customer is going to go elsewhere and buy the other product, another school. As it is, residence halls and classes aren't filled to capacity, UMaine can't afford this loss.

Less students means less money. Unfortunately, those who pay the most will be the first to leave. Out of state students will go to where it's cheaper and where the quality is about the same or better.

Just look at the University of New Hampshire. It is a quality school at a fair price. This past fall, enrollment at UNH was the highest it's been in past years. I had been accepted into UNH, but turned it down to come here. I hope I did not make a big mistake, just like the Maine legislature is doing right now!

David Russell
Student Senator
Stodder Hall

◆ Campus ads

Ad was excellent and readable

To the editor:

I recently placed an ad with The Maine Campus (two weeks prior to March break) that was not "camera-ready" in any sense of the word.

I am writing to congratulate your advertising staff on the excellent graphics used in the ad to convey information about summer job openings available to UMaine students through the Part-Time & Summer Employment Program.

Student response to this ad was very high, an indication of the excellent visibility and readability of the ad.

I do want to apologize to any students who were unable to access job information at my office during the first day the ad appeared; unexpected staffing problems led to an inability to meet with students for a brief time that day.

Sincerely,
Cathy Marquez
Coordinator Part Time
& Summer Employment
Program

◆ Women's Ice Hockey

Team successful but got little attention

To the editor:

You neglected to cite the accomplishments of the UMaine Women's Ice Hockey Team during the spring break.

Seeded #2 in the East, Maine traveled to Massachusetts for the National Club Championships in a round-robin semi-final tournament; which included Colgate University, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and Boston College.

Maine succeeded in beating R.P.I. in the semi-final match at Northeastern University on February 28th and moved into the finals against #1 seed Boston College on Feb. 29.

Although Maine lost to Boston

College, they remain #2 in the nation for their division.

We, the fans, are disappointed because of the lack of recognition for what this club sport has accomplished in the course of four years.

We expected a campus newspaper to be inclusive rather than exclusive of sporting events at the University of Maine.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You view life with clarity and objectivity, seeing yourself as part of a larger picture. You ascribe to a rigid personal code of ethics, and your motto can be summed up in one word: Integrity. Selflessness and devotion to principles can sometimes make you appear cold to others, when in fact the opposite is the case.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): Good news is cause for celebration, so get together with a few close friends! A romantic rendezvous with a loved one this evening is the icing on the cake.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): Slow down and notice things that are often taken for granted. Being aware of all the details that make up your life makes you appreciate what you have.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): A friend's excitement may seem unfounded, but consider the elements before dismissing the idea. Your participation could tip the scales toward success.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Career advancement may not be on your mind, but a casual conversation could stimulate just that. Take the initiative and don't be afraid to blow your own horn.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Step out of routine and walk the path of discovery! An intriguing acquaintance can guide you into excitingly unfamiliar territory.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): When your intellect and feelings are in conflict, follow your instincts. Suspend logic: playing a hunch could reveal the solution to difficult problems.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): Shelve ambition and enjoy the fruit of your labors. Accept social invitations now, you're sure to have a ball! Laughter and pleasant conversation abound.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Don't allow preoccupation with a project detract from the quality time you spend with loved ones. A dialogue with a trusted friend helps to stimulate new ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): A buoyant mood should not be wasted in solitude. Plan a get-together with friends; your effervescent spirit will enliven an otherwise listless gathering!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Celebrating good fortune takes you on a carefree voyage through uncharted waters. Go somewhere you've been meaning to go, throw caution to the wind!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): In order to prevent the pace of events from accelerating out of control, establish priorities and tie up loose ends. Doing too much at once can be overwhelming.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): Splurge on something special for yourself. The dent that you make in your finances could be replenished through your own creativity.

Your Daily Horoscope

By Carl Paul

For Thursday March 19

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A sensualist, you're a lover of physical pleasures and earthly bliss. Your lust for life gives you appreciation for the beauty of nature, art, and love. You make no apologies for the way you are, and prefer to be right up front about what you want from others. You are a faithful friend and an ardent and considerate lover.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): What you see as harmless flirtation from an acquaintance may actually be an attempt to ferret out your feelings toward them. Trifling with emotions would be cruel.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): Although luck remains in your corner, don't tempt fate! Taking loved ones for granted is the surest way to reverse your good fortune.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The stars have a romantic surprise in store for you! It may come as renewed passion with your mate, or the rekindling of an old flame! Whatever the form: enjoy!

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): An influential figure is ushered into your life, someone who piques your curiosity. A lot can be learned from their unique approach and depth of experience.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Attention to detail is crucial to the success of any business venture. Take the time to read the fine print on any contract or you'll have no one to blame but yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Hard work pays off when favorable circumstances develop for a project you've been nudging along. This is your opportunity to shine; go for it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): Making peace with a colleague who annoys the heck out of you signals the advent of a pleasant day. After gliding through work, a romantic diversion awaits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Surround yourself with people and your buoyant mood will energize all who cross your path! Don't take life too seriously, this is a time for relaxation and revelry!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): If you successfully fight off a tendency to gloss over important details, your efforts will yield lasting results. Optimism is reflected in all aspects of your life!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Snap decisions made in the heat of the moment lead to nothing but regret. Wait until the your mind is clear before drawing a conclusion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Avoid painting yourself into a corner with a capricious approach to romance. Before making lavish gestures. Remember that what goes around comes around!

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): Basking in the glory of a personal triumph can blind you to the needs of those close to you. A little effort is all it takes to make loved ones feel a part of your celebration.

Ads

"They [Alfond] had some of the most benign ads in the world, they're still ads," Dana said. "They just need to be a little more responsive to the needs of the student body."

"We're all in agreement, from the beer distributors to Dr. Dana to our department. We want to take a leadership role in education," McCaw said.

According to Dana, alcohol ads that seem innocent to the average consumer aren't all they seem to be.

"Alcohol ads are designed to get people to drink a product and designed to [so] they're very clearly stating alcohol will make you happy, more beautiful, capable and confident."

"[They] sell a bag of goods that's really false. In the best of all worlds you'll see ads that are more educationally oriented," Dana said.

Senate

"In three years of GSS, I've never heard you [Littlefield] end a report. A committee or board should be able to present their report in any way they want," said former Senator Ethan Strimling.

"Those people who preached diversity tonight weren't themselves diverse in their program," said Senator Grant Samson. "Diversity involves many controversial issues which aren't all accepted by the general public."

Harry Nadeau, former Residents on Campus vice president who conducted the program, defended it. "We need programs on diversity and we need to understand what it is," he said. "We all have to learn about differences and how to incorporate them into our lives; that's CUC's purpose."

Although senators continued to debate the value of the program, its legality was not determined.

Another lengthy discussion last night involved Student Government's budget. Rich Aldrich, vice president of Financial Affairs, reported that their budget was running a $5,606 deficit. But GSS approved Aldrich's recommendations in reducing Student Government's operating budget, thereby leaving a lesser deficit of $1,759.

Budget predictions proved inaccurate due to lower student enrollment. Since their budget is derived solely from the activity fee, one result of decreased enrollment is less money available for Student Government.

In order to compensate for decreased funding next year, Aldrich is considering soliciting outside funds such as alumni or corporate donations. According to Aldrich, to the best of his knowledge, Student Government has never used outside funding before in its budget.

Reagan Democrats not sure who they like

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Erna Gilbertson was bragging about how she convinced her husband to vote for Democrat Walter Mondale in 1984 when he leaned back in his chair, winked, and sheepishly shook his head.

Walter Gilbertson, once an "Adlai Stevenson Democrat," says he voted for Jack Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, Jimmy Carter — and then Ronald Reagan, never mind what his wife says, and George Bush.

He doesn't like the label, but Gilbertson is a Reagan Democrat — one of those folks who mostly vote for Democrats but defect every four years to pick a Republican in the presidential race.

"It just seems the Democrats got lost there for awhile," the retiree says. "I like to think of myself as a Democrat, but I can go either way."

It was in 97-percent white, largely ethnic Macomb County that the Democratic Party first took time to study disaffected or Reagan Democrats. The county is a favorite laboratory for Democrats trying to craft a message that will win back the White House.

In theory, as Macomb County votes, so vote the suburban, middle-class Americans across the country who are the swing voters in presidential elections.

Interviews with two dozen Macomb County residents in advance of Tuesday's presidential primary offer ample evidence of a turbulent and testy electorate that has little taste for President Bush's handling of the economy and nagging doubts about the men who want to replace him.

Most of all, they're not sure anyone is really listening to them.

Ask 28-year Chrysler worker Ed Sosnowski what the issues ought to be in this year's election and he doesn't hesitate.

"Everything George Bush said he was going to be but isn't," said Sosnowski, putting the economy, education, environmental protection and national health care high on his list.

"The American dream — that's gone now," Sosnowski said. "You used to be able to go to one of the local factories and make a decent living."

He won't get any argument from Bob Culhane, a retiree who labels himself an independent.

"The need to change is so apparent," said Culhane. "People are starting to think of government as unreliable, as ineffective, or worse as half crooked."

Such suspicion and cynicism was shared by many of those interviewed. Although few had kind words for Bush, still fewer had anything nice to say about Congress.

Culhane says he's likely to reluctantly vote for President Bush again. Yet he felt compelled to come hear Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton speak at Macomb County Community College because of one word he had heard in a Clinton speech — change.

"If he can convince me he can really bring about this change he talks about, I might go for him," Culhane said of the Democratic front-runner.

Clinton has carefully crafted his message to appeal to the middle class, and random interviews provided evidence he's having some success.

Even among those who were leaning toward a Bush vote in the fall, Clinton was overwhelmingly the choice when people were asked which Democrat they might support.

The interviews also offered evidence of Paul Tsongas' troubles connecting with the blue-collar middle class, people like those who live in the neatly lined brick houses of Warren a few miles from Detroit.

"He's a little bit too pro-business," said Sosnowski.

"I just question his ability to communicate," said Clem Garrett, a retired former Army officer.

Many residents also voiced support for the middle-class tax cut that Clinton supports and Tsongas opposes — even though they often said it would make little difference in their lives.

"I sure could use it," said Mary Jane Amicarelli, who publishes high school and college yearbooks.

Others dismissed the importance of the tax cut.

"It's just a drop in the bucket, really," said Shirley Simpson of St. Clair Shores.

The key question in Macomb County this year is whether Reagan and Bush voters will come home to the Democratic Party.

Elaine Vitale says she will. "He's just killing companies by not caring," said Vitale, who blames Bush for the loss of her secretarial job at General Motors Corp.

Culhane spoke for many, however, in saying: "I just don't know."

He said he knew too little about the Democratic candidates to make his decision right now — so he'll sit out Tuesday's primary.

Army screws up reporting soldier's war death

By Donna Cassata

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, through a series of "bungles, glitches, errors and wrong assumptions," mishandled notifying the family of a soldier killed by friendly fire in the Gulf War, says a congressional study released Sunday.

The House Armed Services investigations subcommittee found no evidence of a conspiracy or cover-up in the death of Army Sgt. Douglas Lance Fielder, a 22-year-old killed accidentally by his comrades' guns.

The family initially was told Fielder was killed by enemy fire.

"In this instance, virtually everything that could go wrong did go wrong," the panel said in its report.

The subcommittee is conducting a full investigation of the military process for notifying families of casualties and plans a complete report later in the year. Because of the large number of inquiries, the panel issued a nine-page report on the Fielder case.

Fielder was one of 35 American servicemen accidentally killed in the Gulf War by U.S. forces, the Defense Department said in August. In the Army alone, friendly fire was blamed for 21 of the 96 deaths and 65 of the 354 injuries.

The subcommittee report detailed the notification process that occurred after Fielder's death in the early morning hours of Feb. 27, 1991. His unit, stranded in southern Iraq after its vehicle broke down, awaited assistance.

"There were a total of 11 bungles, glitches, errors and wrong assumptions that cascaded one after another to make the handling of this particular death notification little short of an administrative disaster," the report said.

In a statement, the Army said the panel's report "clearly indicates there was no intention on the part of the Army to cover up a friendly fire incident or mislead the family."

Turkish government criticized in quake relief effort

By Terry Leonard
Associated Press Writer

ERZINCAN, Turkey (AP) — Hundreds of frightened men left without jobs and homes by a devastating earthquake besieged the provincial governor's office Monday, demanding help for their families.

"We have no food and our children are hungry," cried Yilmaz Karayazi, who said he lost his home and the tea house that provided his living. "I am left without hope."

There are growing complaints that government bungling has hindered relief efforts since the quake hit eastern Turkey on Friday. Officials estimate at least 800 people were killed and 180,000 are homeless. The quake measured 6.8 on the Richter scale and was followed by strong aftershocks.

There were reports of looting and the theft of aid shipments. Soldiers patrolled some main streets and storeowners guarded their shops.

Complaints about the chaotic relief effort also came from doctors who were furious a 200-bed field hospital promised by the Turkish Red Crescent didn't arrive until Monday and wouldn't be ready before Tuesday.

More than 100 surgeons sent by the government have been unable to perform operations without the field hospital.

Mustafa Kul, the city's deputy in parliament, said steps had been taken to improve organization and ensure that aid is fairly distributed. He also conceded that about 1,000 of the 8,675 tents sent to Erzincan had been stolen.

The Istanbul newspaper Milliyet reported that relief supplies were being sold on the black market with tents going for $330 and blankets $15.

Kul said 376 bodies had been recovered and a still unknown number of others had been dug out by their own relatives. The government and relief workers estimate 800 people died.

"The death toll will rise. But I'm sure it won't be more than a thousand," said Kul, who added there were no figures for the missing.

Many deaths were blamed on poor construction and structures built above a limit of three stories.

Swiss rescue teams said they called off their search for survivors late Monday after finding four people alive in the debris. They said they found 36 bodies.

"If we thought there was no more hope we would not work so hard," said Kostas Holevas, a member of the 50-person Greek team.

Temperatures have been below freezing at night and most of the city sleeps outdoors for fear of another tremor.

Doctors said they feared that thousands of people living in tents were in danger of diseases from contaminated water.

A team of 18 U.S. military engineers arrived Monday to put up lights for night rescue efforts and make repairs on one wing of the city's badly damaged hospital.

◆ School safety

Maine schools reopen after investigation over mercury

WALES, Maine (AP) — The five schools in Union 44 reopened Tuesday following a two-day closure that was ordered following the disappearance of a small amount of mercury from a teacher's desk at Oak Hill High School.

Air tests conducted by a consultant showed that any significant sources of mercury vapor had been eliminated and that any vapor levels were well below the 0.05 parts-per-million safety threshold set by the federal government.

The local school committee voted to temporarily shut down schools in Wales, Sabattus and Litchfield last Thursday night because of lingering concerns about potential health threats.

School officials said students had taken a bottle containing a little more than a tablespoon of mercury from a teacher's desk, following a demonstration on thermometers. About half of the mercury was found in a sink in the boy's bathroom and smaller amounts were removed elsewhere, but the school committee voted to close the schools because of concerns that students from the high school might have carried mercury aboard buses.

◆ Firefighting

Volunteer firefighter critical after chimney collapses on him

ETNA, Maine (AP) — A volunteer firefighter was in critical condition Tuesday at a Bangor hospital after a chimney collapsed on top of him while he was battling a house fire.

Irving Gray, 24, a volunteer from the Stetson Fire Department, was hurt the most seriously of three firefighters injured while battling the blaze that destroyed a two-story home in Etna on Monday.

Gray was listed in critical condition this morning at St. Joseph Hospital in Bangor with head and chest injuries.

Gray and another firefighter were injured when a chimney collapsed on top of them.

A third firefighter hurt his leg when he slipped, said Stephen McCausland, spokesman for the state Department of Public Safety.

McCausland said state fire marshals have determined the blaze started in the basement of the home. He said they don't believe the fire was suspicious, but were returning to the scene Tuesday to try to pinpoint the exact cause.

◆ Mystery

Man says he's solved the mystery of Earhart's disappearance

By Paul Recer
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A piece of metal and a size 9 shoe heel found on a deserted Pacific atoll have combined with other evidence to convince an investigator he has solved the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Amelia Earhart 55 years ago.

"We have recovered artifacts that conclusively prove this case," Richard Gillespie, executive director of the International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery, said at a news conference today. "We're very confident that the Amelia Earhart case is solved."

Ms. Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared on July 2, 1937, during an attempt to circumnavigate the globe.

Gillespie said Earhart herself described her attempt to fly around the Earth near the equator as a "stunt."

He said it had no historical significance, but her disappearance captured the imagination of the world.

Gillespie has submitted what he believes is a piece of metal from the two-engine Lockheed 10-E Electra plane flown by Ms. Earhart to the National Transportation Safety Board for authentication. The NTSB provided a detailed analysis of the material, but did not state whether they were from Ms. Earhart's plane.

Gillespie also is relying heavily on a size 9 shoe heel and sole — Ms. Earhart's size and a Cat's Paw brand popular at the time.

He told reporters today that the shoe and other artifacts "form circumstantial evidence in such an overwhelming way as to make them conclusive."

Gillespie's team found the fuselage remnants in a search of the jungle on the remote South Pacific atoll of Nikumaroro during an expedition last October.

Ms. Earhart and Noonan disappeared between New Guinea and Howland Island in the Central Pacific. They planned to use Howland as a way station en route to Honolulu and Oakland, Calif., thus completing the mission.

Her disappearance triggered a massive search and has led to speculation ever since.

Among the theories was that she was spying on the Japanese for the United States and was captured and died in captivity.

Gillespie's organization theorized that through a navigational error, the pair missed their target of Howland Island and crash-landed on or near Nikumaroro, 350 miles away.

Tom Willi and Tom Gannon, retired military navigators, developed the theory after studying potential routes and plotting transmissions sent on Earhart's frequency. The Wilmington, Del.-based TIGHAR funded the $750,000 search project.

UNH hoop coach fired

Basketball Coach Jim Boylan of the University of New Hampshire has been fired at the end of his three-year contract, the school said today.

The school said a search for a new coach would begin immediately.

Boylan took over a team that won four games in each of the previous three years, and won five, three and seven games during his tenure. His overall record was 15-69. UNH was 7-21 this season, its best since 1985-86.

After his first year, Boylan expressed interest in the vacant Miami of Ohio job, but later withdrew from consideration and stayed at UNH.

Before coming to UNH, he was an assistant at Michigan State for three years after coaching a community college in Arizona and a team in Switzerland.

He was a member of the 1977 NCAA championship team at Marquette under Coach Al McGuire.

Pirates trade Smiley

The Pittsburgh Pirates traded 20-game winner John Smiley to the Minnesota Twins Tuesday for top pitching prospect Danny Neagle and a minor-league outfielder.

The Pirates were faced with the possibility of losing Smiley to free agency at the end of the season.

Today was Smiley's 27th birthday, and he said it wasn't a happy one, considering the trade.

"I'm surprised and shocked by it," Smiley said. "I had no idea this was coming. I had no desire to leave Pittsburgh. This is the only organization I've ever known. I'm very disappointed. I'm going to miss these guys."

Smiley was 20-8 last season with a 3.08 earned run average last season. He avoided salary arbitration in February by signing a one-year contract worth $3.44 million.

Neagle, a 23-year-old left-hander, was 9-4 with a 3.27 in 19 games with Class AAA Portland last season and 0-1 with a 4.05 ERA in seven starts with Minnesota.

The Twins also parted with outfielder Midre Cummings. He won the Class A Midwest League batting title last season, batting .322 for Kenosha.

Angels' Keough critical

California Angels pitcher Matt Keough underwent emergency brain surgery and was in critical condition after being hit in the head by a foul ball during an exhibition game.

"The doctors have given the Angels no reason to believe that the injury is life-threatening," team spokesman Tim Mead said. "He is resting in intensive care and tests have been scheduled for tomorrow."

Keough, 36, underwent a craniotomy at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital to relieve pressure caused by a blood clot on the brain.

UMaine Hockey

The puck stops here for UMaine opponents

By Tim Hopley

On the ice they look alike. The only difference is one has a US Olympic goalie's mask and Brian's blocker while the other a white Eye-

Tech and Vaughn blocker. They're both big, one stands 6'3" while the other is 6'4". Together they form one of the most respected and maybe best goaltending duos in the country.

Junior Garth Snow has been a major reason the University of Maine hockey team will now enter the NCAA tournament as a probable No. 1 seed come March 28.

Snow stepped to center stage this season, appearing in 30 games, picking up 25 wins against just three losses and two ties. He also compiled a nation's best .866 winning percentage and top-notch 2.42 goals against average.

In his career at UMaine, Snow holds a 45-9-2 record with a Black Bear best 2.70 gaa. He also recently tied Scott King's record for most wins in a season (25) when he shut down Boston College 7-3 in the Hockey East semi-finals. Additionally, he has seven career assists, most ever by a UMaine netminder.

His equal in the Black Bear nets is sophomore Mike Dunham. Dunham has undergone a most peculiar season this year after posting a 14-5-2 mark in his rookie season with a 2.96 gaa. and .890 save percentage.

After breaking his left pinky before the season began, the Endwell, NY native joined the US Junior National Team after returning to the UMaine line-up for two games, both wins.

While with the juniors over the Christmas break, he was selected as the All-World goalie after leading Team USA to a bronze medal at Füssen/Kaufbeuren, Germany.

He went 5-1 with a 2.33 gaa. and a stunning .932 save pct. in the tourney.

Then on Jan. 17, US Coach Dave Petersen named Dunham as one of three goalies to travel with the Team USA squad for the Olympic games.

After playing one last game with the Black Bears (a 10-4 win over Merrimack), Dunham headed to Meribel, France where he dressed and served as Ray LeBlanc's

Although their season closed on a sour note after being drubbed by Drexel University 97-79 in the semi-finals of the North Atlantic Conference tournament, the University of Maine men's basketball team still had their most successful season in recent years.

The Black Bears' 17-15 record enabled them to finish over .500 for the first time since the '83-84 season, while the 17 wins were also a high for the UMaine hoopsters in eight seasons.

Black Bear Coach Rudy Keeling was pleased with his team's overall season, but was disappointed with the abrupt way it ended.

"It would have been nice to get back to the (conference) championship game," Keeling said, noting his squad lost in the finals last season to Northeastern. "I'm happy on one hand that we had such a successful season, but on the other hand it would have been nice to go a step or two further than we did."

◆ UMaine Baseball

Pitching questions face UMaine as they head to Pleasantville

By Tim Hopley
Sports Editor

A year ago, following their southern swing, the University of Maine baseball team held a 10-9 record. They also had a pitching staff which included second-round major league draft pick Larry Thomas and Chicago Cub signee Ben Burlingame.

So all things considered, the Black Bears' 8-9 mark thus far this season is quite respectable. After all, the only holdovers from the starting staff of a year ago are Mike D'Andrea, who suffered through his worst season to date, and Jason Dryswak, who has been moved to the bullpen this year.

UMaine did come up with big wins on the trip, beating defending national champions LSU, the powerful Oklahoma St. Cowboys twice, along with Creighton and SW Louisiana.

D'Andrea, however, has continued to struggle following off-season elbow surgery, pitching 20 innings down south, allowing 27 hits and 25 walks, while striking out a team-high 24 batters. The senior has a 9.00 ERA.

According to Coach John Winkin, his ace had an up-and-down trip.

"Michael had two outings which were a little rough (vs. Tulane - 2 1/3 ip, 9 hits, 8 earned runs and vs. Rollins - 6 ip, 6 hits, 7 walks) and two that were outstanding (vs. LSU - 5 ip, 6 hits, 4 k's and vs. Oklahoma St. - 6 2/3 ip, 6 hits, 12 k's). His game against Oklahoma St. was really great," Winkin said.

Meanwhile, a surprise on the trip may hasten closer Ronnie Hewes' move to the starting rotation, something Winkin hinted at if the team didn't receive quality starting pitching.

Hewes picked up a save in relief of D'Andrea in the opener and then made three starts, going 21 innings while allowing 23 hits, 12 earned runs and 12 walks. He also struck out 18 as a starter.

On the year, the junior from Brewer is 1-1 with a 5.04 ERA.

To fill the closer role vacated by Hewes, sophomore football/baseball player Bob Zurinkas stepped to the fore and compiled three saves on the trip to Louisiana and Florida.

While appearing in a team-high eight games, Zurinkas has pitched 7 2/3 innings with a 12.91 ERA. A sore spot with the 6'2" right-hander from Brockton, Mass., however has been control, evidenced by his 13 walks on the year.

A last pitching note, junior Val Beaudet has been impressive with a team-low 4.32 ERA. Beaudet, from Lewiston, had pitched just one inning for the Black Bears back in 1990. Thus far this season Beaudet has appeared in six games, going 8 1/3 innings with a 1-1 record.

Offensively, UMaine will be hurt by the temporary loss of first baseman Gabe Duross.

In a game versus Penn State, the sophomore separated his shoulder while making a play in the field. He was hitting .291 at the time with a homer and nine RBIs. He will be replaced in the field by catcher Shawn Tobin and outfielder Glen Stupinski.

"Originally when (Duross) was hurt they told me he'd be out two to three weeks," Winkin said. "Now they tell me he's making real good progress so we don't really know when he'll be back."

Chad White has also impressed early on. Replacing Mark Sweeney in center field, White has proven he's more than capable of filling Sweeney's shoes defensively while showing some pop in his bat with a team-high 17 RBI. "Chad has been outstanding," Winkin said. "Defensively we haven't lost anything. He's everything Mark was in the field and while no one will replace Mark offensively, Chad is doing it in his own way."

Men's Hoop wrap-up

UMaine finished a respectable third in the regular season, with an 8-6 league mark as the two league newcomers, Delaware and Drexel, claimed the top two slots in the standings.

Five of the Black Bear losses were versus the two former East Coast Conference members, as Delaware went 27-3 on the season and didn't lose an NAC game in 14 tries.

Still, with three starters and the entire bench returning plus a promising crop of freshman coming in, the Black Bears appear to be ready to contend in the NAC again next season.

"We were pretty much all sophomores this season," Keeling said. "Ed (Jones), Deonte (Hursey), Francois (Bouchard), Kevin (Tertell) and Kenny (Barnes) all played important roles in their second season, and the experience they gained is invaluable for next year."

Bouchard led the team with a 13.5 ppg scoring average, but Keeling cited Hursey as the season's most pleasant surprise as he went from backup point guard in the pre-season to one of the Black Bears' most outstanding all-around performers down the stretch.

"Deonte was improved a lot over the course of the season," Keeling said. "He gained confidence and improved his consistency tremendously."

However, two talented Black Bears are out of eligibility and will be missed immensely next season.

Senior captain Marty Higgins, UMaine's all-time leader in assists (619) and steals (243), and senior forward Derrick Hodge, the 10th leading scorer in Black Bear history with 1,206 points, have played their final games for the Blue-and-White. Keeling says they will be missed for more than just their basketball skills.

"The were from my first recruiting class," Keeling said, "and it was kind of comforting to me to look out on the floor and see Marty providing leadership and Derrick scoring all those points. They will definitely be missed."

But Keeling brings in a solid recruiting class that is expected to contribute immediately. Casey Arena, a 6-foot guard from Bishop Fenwick High in Peabody, Mass., who recently scored 86 points in two games in the Massachusetts high school tournament, has been compared favorably to Higgins by Keeling.

"He's cut out in the Marty Higgins mold," Keeling said earlier in the season. "He's tough and brash and can play either guard position."

UMaine has also signed 6-foot-4 guard Terrence Hunt, an athletic swingman from St. Anthony's High in Jersey City, New Jersey, and 6-foot-10 Reggie Smith from Northwestern Prep in Watertown, Wisconsin.

Keeling is especially excited about the signing of Smith, a diamond in the rough with loads of potential.

"He is the first true center we have ever recruited here and the biggest player we have ever recruited," Keeling said. "He's athletic and can shoot from 15 feet. He may be the steal of the year."

With one more scholarship left to give out, Keeling said he hopes to land a small forward to replace Hodge. Meanwhile, returning sub Rossie Kearson looks to be the leading candidate for the spot right now.

With Delaware losing a trio of key players and Drexel graduating four, Keeling thinks his Bears will be prime contenders again next season.

"We have a solid nucleus, and a wealth of experience coming back. If we get some breaks and improve as the season progresses, we'll be right there in the hunt at the end," Keeling said.

Laettner, O'Neal head AP All-Americans

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

Shaquille O'Neal of LSU wasn't a surprise on The Associated Press All-America team since he was on it last season.

Duke's Christian Laettner, the only unanimous selection, and Ohio State's Jimmy Jackson both made the jump from last year's second team, so there was no shock there.

Alonzo Mourning of Georgetown had been a second-team selection as a sophomore two years ago before an injury set him back last season, so his presence when the team was announced Monday was no upset.

Then there's Harold Miner, the guard from Southern Cal who is known as much for his resemblance to Michael Jordan and his superstitious on-court antics as he is for his remarkable talent.

The 6-foot-5 junior has the highest scoring average among the five first-teamers — 26.7 — and few can claim the number of oohs, aahs and opened mouths Miner can after one of his performances.

"This honor is consistent with his performance all year. He's done so much for this program," Southern Cal coach George Raveling said.

The Trojans have returned to the Top Ten, let alone the rankings, and with Miner giving clinics on slick ball-handling, off-balance jumpers and crowd charisma, they have become a No. 2 seed in the NCAA tournament.

O'Neal, who averaged 23.6 points per game and was the nation's leading rebounder at 14.1, is the 43rd player to repeat as an All-American, and Jackson are also juniors, while Laettner and Mourning are seniors.

Black Bear goalies

back-up for two Olympic contests.

Upon returning Feb. 24, Dunham appeared in three games, all wins, turning aside 17 shots in a 4-3 win over Providence and six shots in 29 minutes of work in the Black Bears' quarter-final HE match-up with Merrimack.

He then was in the nets as UMaine won the HE championship, stopping 19 shots in a 4-1 win over the University of New Hampshire. In that game he was tested early and responded in fine fashion.

"It's been a different season for me, I wanted to go out tonight and play a solid game," Dunham said following his win over the Wildcats. "After not being around I just wanted to come back and fill my role and help as much as possible."

As has been Coach Shawn Walsh's tendency, both goaltenders expect to continue to rotate as they have for the past two seasons.

"Both goalies have come up big all season," Walsh said. "We played (Dunham in the HE finals) to make sure they're both ready for the NCAA tournament and both showed they were."

Following off-days Monday and Tuesday, the team will return to formal practice Wednesday when they begin the final push to what could be the university's first national championship ever.
