♦ Women's History Fortnight

Abuse of women a centuries-old problem

By Elizabeth Satterfield
Staff Writer

Nineteenth century newspapers helped correct the common attitude that wife beating and domestic violence was a private affair in which people should not interfere, according to Jerome Nadelhaft.

Nadelhaft, history professor at the University of Maine, presented "Crimes Against Women: Wife Torture and 19th Century Newspapers" Friday as part of Women's History Fortnight.

Nadelhaft said newspapers may have increased women's fears about reporting abuse because of the fear of more severe abuse by their husbands.

"Believable threats of murder [if the wives retaliated with legal action] were reinforced by the papers," Nadelhaft said.

According to Nadelhaft, some American editors also stated they were afraid to report crimes and make their publications look like police blotters and said familiarity with the crimes could lead to acceptance.

Nadelhaft quoted William Blackwell, editor of the "Women's Journal," as having said, "The crimes are too numerous. It would make the publication resemble a police gazette."

Nadelhaft said European newspapers were much more thorough in their coverage of wife abuse. He related the publicity to the fact that in England, people lived much closer together, while in America, population concentrations were generally sparser.

"Off-hand remarks of neighbors proved the constancy of abuse," Nadelhaft said.

Suspected motives for abuse are as varied as the acts of violence inflicted on women. Many men, according to Nadelhaft, believed their wives were a material possession, literally a part of their property once married to them.

"The men were preserving their claim to physical ownership of the wife, not just their control of the wife," he said.

Elizabeth Oakes Smith, a supporter of women's rights, wrote during the time that to be married was to be murdered because no one would help fight the abuse since wives were seen as one man's property to treat

Student rape reported on Providence trip

First-year student says she was raped by fellow student before UMaine hockey game Saturday

By Michael Reagan
Staff Writer

A University of Maine student was reportedly raped Saturday evening in Providence, Rhode Island by another UMaine student before the UMaine-Michigan State hockey game.

The woman, an 18-year-old first-year student, was reportedly raped by a fellow undergraduate on the student-sponsored trip both were taking.

The trip was organized by a number of student groups and was funded by Student Government. About 400 students, alumni and fans left UMaine at 9 a.m. Saturday on 10 buses. They arrived at about 4:15 p.m. in Providence for the 8:30 p.m. game.

Jill Harmon, a student senator who helped to organize the trip, said she went to a local hospital with the victim and her friend after she was informed early in the game.

According to Harmon, the alleged victim had met the alleged rapist the night before. She said the woman knew his first name and could give a description of what he was wearing.

The woman was released from the hospital early Sunday morning. Harmon said the alleged victim was not injured and was at the hospital for evidence. After her release she made a statement to the Providence police.

She returned to UMaine late Sunday evening.

After the game, most of the buses were detained by the Providence police so all the passengers could write out their names, addresses and telephone numbers, according to Harry Nadeau, a UMaine student who also helped to organize the trip. The buses finally left Providence at 1 a.m. Sunday.

Three of the buses left before the police could get to them. Attempts were made to try to contact the buses and return them to Providence, but they were unsuccessful, Nadeau said.

The Providence police department said it is continuing its investigation.

Carlin speaks his mind at MCA

By Frank Spurr
Staff Writer

It was comedy as usual Friday night, as George Carlin brought down the house at the Maine Center for the Arts.

Combining fresh material with classic routines, Carlin offered comedic insights into such topics as the Gulf War, golf, airports and pets.

"The Persian Gulf War was the first war that was on every channel and cable," Carlin said. Carlin didn't approve of the war because he said he has a habit "called thinking."

He also said he has a hard time with the symbols of the war, such as yellow ribbons and flags.

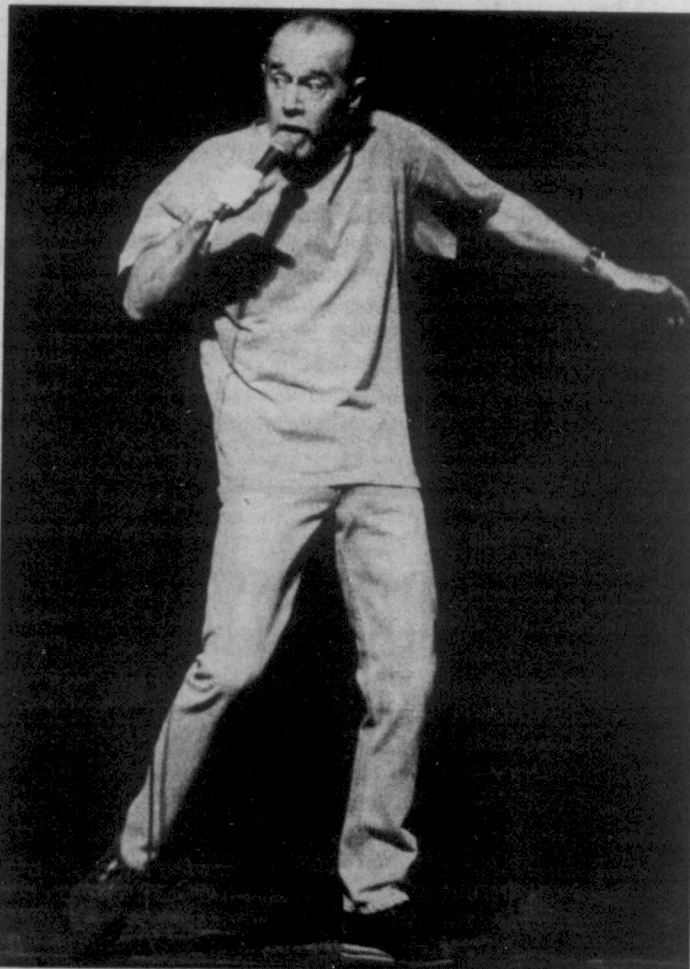

"These things are for the symbol-minded," Carlin said.

Carlin explained Americans like wars because we're good at it. He also theorized wars are sexual in nature, resulting from opposing leaders insulting each other's penis size.

"Everything about war is sexual. Just look at George Bush's last name."

"Even the guys who led us through the war have sexual names, DICK Cheney and COLIN Powell," he said.

Carlin's humor is also often sexual, and he uses many vulgarities to bring this humor to the audience. T-Shirts and caps sold in the lobby were emblazoned with sayings like

"When the going gets tough, the tough get fucked" and "Simon says: 'Go fuck yourself.'"

Despite the vulgarities, Carlin

Car sales declining due to parking shortage as parking fees increase

1 TOKYO (AP) — Japan's once-booming auto dealers face a difficult roadblock: a lack of parking spaces.

The severe land shortage in Japan's major cities is hurting new car sales because of laws requiring car owners to have parking spaces, a report by the Tokai Bank says.

The report says sales have declined since early 1991, when the Garage Law was revised to require all new car owners in Tokyo and Osaka to prove they have spaces.

New car registrations this February were down 5 percent from February 1991, statistics show.

Meanwhile, prices of parking spaces have skyrocketed. In Tokyo, a monthly space can cost more than $225 and people may wait years for a space.

The National Police Agency says there are about 160,000 more cars than spaces.

Repeat violators face a $1,500 fine or up to three months in prison.

Subway train breaks through wall of station

3 VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The lead car of a subway train crashed through the wall of a station in Vienna and hung 25 feet above the ground for hours before maintenance crews pulled it back into the building early Friday.

No one was hurt Thursday evening as the car broke through the buffer stop of the last station of the U-1 line and the front half of it penetrated the wall and jutted through the wall of the building.

The car hung over a grass embankment outside the building. A preliminary investigation indicated the train was traveling too fast.

Mortar bomb attack kills policewoman

4 BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A home-made mortar bomb fired at a patrol car has killed a policewoman and seriously wounded a policeman outside the capital, police reported Saturday.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army told local news organizations it was responsible for the attack Friday night in Newry, 35 miles southwest of Belfast.

Police headquarters at Belfast said in a statement that the mortar bomb was fired at the police car from a stationary auto but gave no other details.

The 34-year-old policewoman died of her wounds early Saturday, and the policeman lost both legs and was hospitalized, police said.

Burma experiences strong earthquake

5 HONG KONG (AP) — A strong earthquake shook western Burma on Friday, the Hong Kong Observatory reported. There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

An observatory statement Saturday said the quake, measuring 5.5 on the Richter scale, was centered 110 miles southwest of Mandalay.

The observatory had no further details.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake, as measured by ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

Every increase of one number means that the ground motion is 10 times greater. A quake of magnitude 6 can cause severe damage on land.

Singer Tammy Wynette collapses again; cancels rest of tour

2 PERTH, Australia (AP) — Country-western star Tammy Wynette collapsed early Saturday for the second time in Australia, forcing her to cancel the rest of her tour, a spokesman for the singer said.

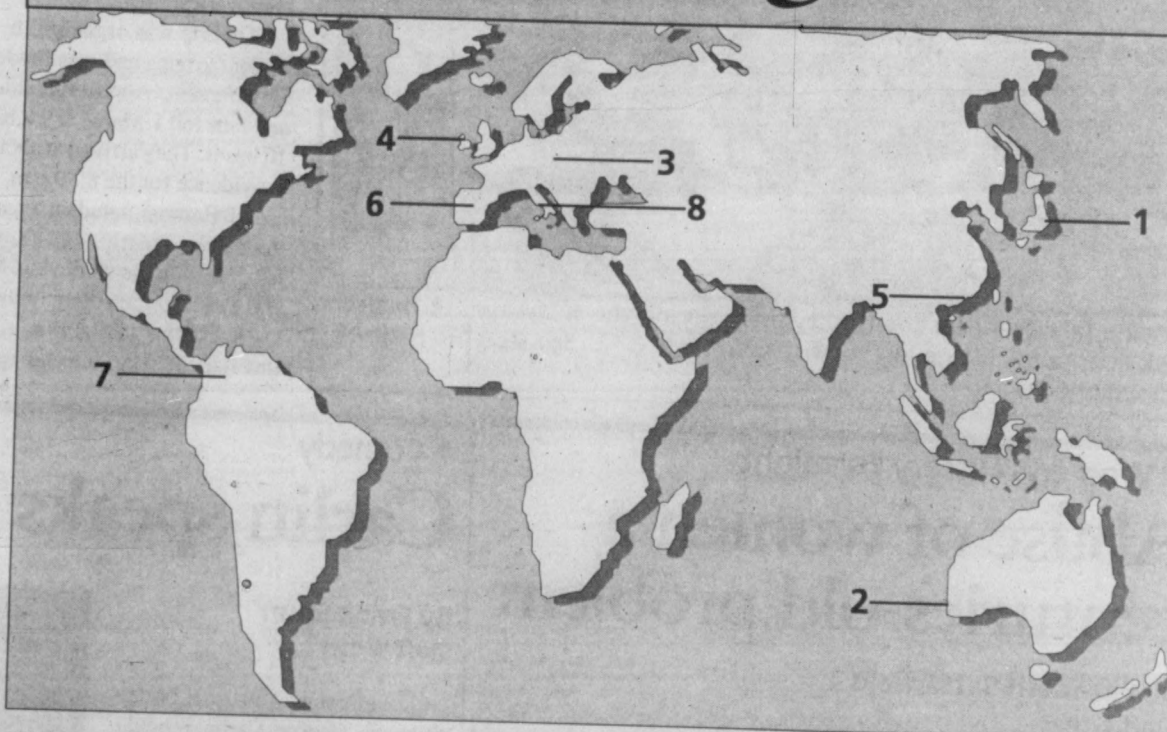

The 49-year-old singer was taken to Royal Perth Hospital at 2 a.m. suffering from exhaustion.

A spokesman for Ms. Wynette, who asked not to be identified, said the singer was in stable condition after husband-manager George Richie took her to the hospital in a limousine.

She collapsed immediately after finishing her performance at Perth's Burswood Casino, and Richie canceled the rest of the extensive tour, which included five concerts rescheduled after her first collapse, the spokesman said.

Ms. Wynette, who has a current chart-topping hit "Justified and Ancient" with British funk band The KLF, collapsed just minutes before she was due to go on stage at the Mackay Entertainment Centre on Feb. 29.

Medical lab reports spill

6 MADRID, Spain (AP) — Fifteen workers were contaminated with high levels of radioactivity this week after a spill at a private medical laboratory, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The employees of Medgenix Espana S.A., in the Tres Cantos industrial area 12 miles from Madrid showed signs of external and internal contamination after Thursday's spill of radioactive Molybdenum 99, El Pais reported.

Medgenix officials failed to contact the national Nuclear Safety Council after a vial containing the substance broke, El Pais said. A neighboring laboratory detected the radioactivity and reported it Friday to authorities, who sealed off the building, El Pais said.

Ignacio Lequerica, technical chief at the Nuclear Safety Council, told El Pais that Spanish law requires that such incidents be reported. The council is investigating the incident.

7 BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Two bombs damaged Diner's Club and Citibank offices on Friday night, killing a security guard and wounding three other people, officials said.

No information was immediately available on who was responsible for the attacks.

The explosions showered glass and other debris over streets in a commercial neighborhood of northern Bogota called Chapinero, said witnesses interviewed over local radio.

The simultaneous bomb attacks wounded at least three people, including a young girl, the RCN radio network said, quoting rescue workers.

Alleged FBI crimes discussed in Neville Saturday

By Deanna L. Partridge
Staff Writer

A conference to examine crimes by the Federal Bureau of Investigation was delayed 45 minutes Saturday morning in an effort to increase attendance. Only six people attended.

The Bring Democracy Home 1992 Tour was greeted by four students, one faculty member and a man from Winthrop when it presented the 5th Annual National Conference Investigating the Crime Committed By The FBI.

The conference, slated to begin at 9 a.m. in Neville Hall, was held off while phone calls were placed to local radio stations in hope of drumming up a larger audience. When those efforts proved unsuccessful, the program began at 9:45 a.m.

The presenters were Dr. Anne Mari Buitrago, Lou Wolf, Ken Lawrence and Joe Bolter. Bolter, who has been active in fighting the license renewal of local television station MPBN and is a member of Maine Citizens to Defend the Bill of Rights, which cosponsored the program, attributed the lack of attendance to the intimidation factor associated with the FBI.

The panel decided not to use their prepared remarks in light of the small gathering. Instead, audience members were asked what they would like to get out of the meeting.

Philosophy professor Mike Howard said he was interested in the subversion of supposedly guaranteed equal rights and wanted to know how to obtain a copy of personal FBI files.

Burt Richardson of Winthrop asked for the media's role in bureau activities to be examined. Richardson said he had decided to follow the conference tour to Orono after hearing the presentation Friday night at Bates College.

Most of the originally scheduled topics to be discussed, including a theory on the FBI's assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the cover-up of the Henry and Harriette Moore murder case over 40 years ago were discussed because the few students in attendance expressed no other specific interests. The media also became a major focus of the discussion.

Bolter opened the conference by explaining the purpose of his organization and the conference tour.

"Our purpose is to shut down the FBI," he said. "We're not sure how."

Bolter believed himself a target of the FBI after a series of car tamperings in 1986 and subsequent phone taps.

"They cut my brake lines and my transmission cap was loosened," he alleged. "My phone would ring after I hung it up and no one would talk on the other end when I answered it."

In fact, all of the presenters asserted they have been, or are currently, the subject of FBI surveillance and phone taps. Each related experiences with the bureau to illustrate how prevalent the government is in personal lives.

Lawrence, an author and activist, said the FBI had forced a break-up between him and his girlfriend.

Lawrence said he has since been able to identify the undercover agent in his neighborhood. Lawrence also expanded on what he called "their dirty tricks."

He said personal computers emit an electric field which can be picked up by special instruments and transmitted to another computer. In essence, he said, the FBI can reproduce on their computers what someone across the street is typing on his personal computer.

Lawrence concluded his remarks with a warning.

"The FBI can't be reformed. The only solution is to abolish it," he said.

Even television's nightly news can't be relied on, according to Lawrence.

"The press has been a willing participant in all of the worst things our government has done to us," he said.

He didn't elaborate on what those things were, but Wolf and Buitrago offered many examples.

Wolf is currently the publisher of Covert Action Information Magazine. He worked in Southeast Asia as a conscientious objector during the Vietnam War. While there, he said he witnessed many crimes committed by the CIA, and said the problem was not the FBI alone, but with all intelligence agencies because they are all closely tied together.

Wolf offered not only personal experiences of his phone being tapped, his room being wired with cameras and being followed, but also evidence of the FBI's responsibility in the assassination of Dr. King and involvement in the assassination President Kennedy.

The evidence included allegations of altered records, inaccurate ballistics information and alleged Mafia contracts.

"I feel it is significant that the media has ignored this story," Wolf said of mainstream publications.

"Unconsciously, and often consciously, the media in this country often work in league with the intelligence agencies," he said.

Buitrago used the Moore murder case as an example of one of the many investigations she said the FBI has delayed and botched.

Henry and Harriette Moore were teachers in Florida in 1950. They became involved in the effort to register black voters and rose to prominence in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

They were murdered on Christmas night by a bomb that was wired to their bed.

"I don't want them to be lost in the great memory hole of this country," Buitrago said.

Despite the national outcry that resulted, including demands by then-first lady Eleanor Roosevelt, the murder has yet to be solved. The FBI was called in to investigate, but inconclusively decided it must have been a publicity stunt by the NAACP to gain sympathy for its cause. Many believe it was an obvious act of the Ku Klux Klan.

According to Buitrago, a man was recently taken into custody for questioning in relation to this case.

"The movement will never let these murders go unsolved," Buitrago said with force. "Now the Klan knows a few years of laying low is not enough."

Gotti defense claims 'glorified frame-up'

NEW YORK (AP) — The case against John Gotti is a "glorified frame-up" by an over ambitious prosecutor, a defense lawyer said Saturday in the racketeering trial of the nation's most recognizable crime figure.

Anthony Cardinale, representing Gotti co-defendant Frankie Locascio, made a combative summation aimed at the credibility of Assistant U.S. Attorney John Gleeson and the government's star witness, Salvatore "Sammy Bull" Gravano.

Cardinale said law enforcers were wrong about their interpretations of hours of FBI surveillance tapes that allegedly show Gotti talking about mob murders and other crimes.

Nine days of testimony from Gravano were not believable, Cardinale said. The man who had been Gotti's close friend and ally will say anything to save himself, Cardinale said. "Sam Gravano is a treacherous survivor," he said.

He dismissed the prosecution's case as

"nothing but a glorified frame-up."

Albert Krieger, Gotti's lawyer, told jurors the government had no firm evidence connecting Gotti to case's centerpiece—the Dec. 16, 1985, assassinations of the former Gambino boss, Paul Castellano, and his bodyguard, Thomas Bilotti.

Krieger said Gotti's "flat-out denial" of involvement in the Castellano hit is heard several times on the government's surveillance tapes, but the prosecutor rejected it.

Kail enjoys studying the power of the written word

By Jocelyn Humelsine
Volunteer Writer

Harvey Kail, University of Maine professor and English department chair, never thought he could make a career of reading and writing.

His father wanted him to be a tax attorney, but after high school in Canton, Ohio and two years at the University of Toledo's business school, Kail decided he was fooling himself and changed majors, pursuing instead a career in English.

Kail said since neither of his parents attended college, education after high school was an unusual accomplishment, one he said introduced him to "worlds I knew nothing about and could not have otherwise known."

Kail began as a teaching assistant in 1967, while studying for a master's degree at the University of Toledo. He later received his Ph.D. at Northern Illinois University, where he lived with his wife and daughter as a live-in-advisor to Alpha Omicron Pi sorority.

In the mid-70s, Kail spent four years teaching composition and Third World Literature at the University of Papua, New Guinea. "The power of written word to shape a country's future is overwhelming," he said. In 1978, Kail came to UMaine as director of the Writing Center.

Currently, Kail teaches a course exploring works by writers of the 1940s and 50s "Beat generation," with Professor Welch Everman. Kail also teaches English Internship 395, and his students tutor at the Writing Center.

Because of his clear intonation and depth of knowledge, Kail is the "best person in the world who can read poetry aloud," Everman said.

In the classroom, Everman said Kail is a "real performer" and the pair have fun teaching together.

Students in Kail's intern class share Everman's opinion. Senior English major Jennifer Dominici, from Boston, Mass., said he is "an intelligent ham," while Donnie O'Quinn, a senior English major from Ogunquit, said "he's really cool — a gas."

As for Kail's serious side, senior Sociology major Chris Carr from Orono said he is "very interested in what others say about themselves rather than changing over the conversation."

Outside the classroom, Kail said he enjoys cross-country skiing, traveling and being near the water. He lives in Orono and sometimes takes his rowboat upstream to campus.

◆ Rail rebirth

Portland — Boston rail service to rebuild Union Station

PORTLAND, Maine (AP)—The rebirth of Union Station, the Portland landmark that was demolished 30 years ago to make way for a shopping center, is part of a plan by train enthusiasts to restore rail passenger service to Maine.

Mayor Tom Allen on Saturday unveiled an architect's rendering of a glass and concrete structure that would be built on the same site as the original Gothic-style train station.

The new design, reminiscent of the earlier one, has as its centerpiece a 132-foot-high clock tower.

The drawing was displayed at the annual meeting of TrainRiders Northeast, the grassroots organization trying to revive passenger trains between Portland and Boston.

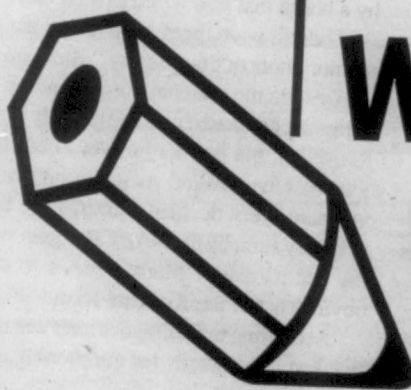

Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell addressed the session, focusing on efforts to line up federal funding for passenger trains. He recalled that Congress last year enacted legislation that permits highway trust funds to be earmarked for other modes of transportation.

The cost of the new station has been estimated at $6 million to $9 million, and Wayne Davis of Yarmouth, chairman and founder of TrainRiders Northeast, said most of the money would have to come from private sources.

"I guess I see a big part of any Portland station being a private developer because really, the station becomes a retail center," Davis said.

Before the station can be built, rail service must be re-established. Last month, Maine chose Amtrak to run passenger trains, rejecting a competing proposal by Guilford Transportation Industries Inc., which owns the track.

These Delta Tau Delta brothers can jump and play basketball

By Justin LaBarge
Staff Writer

March is the month for basketball. Benefit basketball, that is.

During the same season as the college "Final Four" tournament and as the NBA begins winding down its regular season, Delta Tau Delta fraternity held its first basketball tournament, which sponsored "Here's looking at you 2000," a program promoting drug education for Orono and Veazie elementary schools.

The event took place Saturday at 9 a.m. at Lengyel gym, and brought 10 teams composed of students and residents from as far away as Calais and Bangor to participate in the single elimination, five-on-five basketball tournament.

According to organizer Jonathan Johnson, the objective of Delta Tau Delta's charity committee was to sponsor local community-run programs, instead of the typically sponsored large national charities.

"What we wanted to do was give money to the surrounding community," Johnson said. "A lot of times what a lot of (greek organizations) do is raise money for the United Way, and we tried to concentrate more on some of the local charities."

"We found out that the elementary school had an alcohol awareness program, and decided to help make money for their program," he said.

Spokesperson for the program and principal of Orono High School Tom Perry congratulated the fraternity on their dedicated commitment to aiding their community.

"We are very enthusiastic about the effort of Delta Tau Delta in supporting chemical health programs," Perry said.

First place was an $160 award, and second and third place prizes were available through the support of local businesses such as Jasmine's and Pizza Dome.

In the end, the fraternity was able to achieve their goals, which Johnson said is a remarkable feat for any first-time fundraiser.

"I was really impressed with the outcome, although I wasn't sure if the whole thing was going to turn out as well as it did," Johnson said. "We were looking to raise anywhere around $400, and we're going to be able to donate about $400 or so."

Encouraged by this year's apparent success, Johnson emphasized his fraternity's future commitment to support local charity programs.

"We were glad to help out the surrounding community because sometimes they're overlooked," Johnson said. "We're really looking forward to next year, it'll be even better."

◆ USAir Crash

FAA never saw report which could have prevented crash

By Judie Glave
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A report on a 3-year-old fatal crash contained data that might have averted a USAir crash at La Guardia Airport, a Canadian judge said. The Federal Aviation Administration said Friday the agency never saw it.

"We didn't even know it existed," FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said. "We quite often don't get reports issued by other governments."

National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Ted Lopatkiewicz said his agency never saw it, either.

Gordon A. Haugh, a spokesman for the Canadian inquiry panel headed by Justice Virgil Moshansky, said its interim report on the March 1989 Air Ontario crash was sent to the FAA and all major U.S. airlines.

The issue of who saw the report was significant because the two crashes were strikingly similar and because recommendations in it could have prevented Sunday's crash, Moshansky said Thursday. Both crashes involved Dutch-made Fokker F-28s.

"If in fact a cause of the USAir crash is determined to be wing contamination, it is safe to say that the necessary information to have avoided that catastrophic event is contained in the evidentiary record and within the pages of the second interim report," Moshansky said.

He declined to comment further on the matter Friday at a news conference in Thunder Bay, Ontario.

"I really don't have enough information on the events in New York at this time to make any comment," Moshansky said.

Toxins may be a cause behind breast cancer in women

By Bill Kole
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — The widespread industrial toxins known as PCBs may play a key role in breast cancer in women, a researcher said Friday.

Dr. Frank Falck Jr. of the University of Michigan said his pilot study found higher than normal levels of polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, in fat samples taken from women with breast tumors.

The chemicals were widely used to insulate and cool electric transformers until the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency banned them in the 1970s.

PCBs have been shown to accumulate in animal fat, causing cancer and reproductive hazards, but no study has proved a link between the chemicals and cancer in humans.

"When you look at PCBs, they're definitely potent cancer promoters. They have widely contaminated the food chain," Falck said.

The study is to be published in the March-April issue of the Archives of Environmental Health.

Fifty women in their early 60s with breast abnormalities were studied beginning in May 1987 in Hartford, Conn. Pathologists chemically analyzed breast tissue taken during biopsies or mastectomies on the women, 23 of whom had malignant breast cancer.

The women with malignancies had 50 percent to 60 percent higher traces of PCBs and the environmental toxins dichloroethane and trichloroethane in their breast tissue than did women with benign disease.

The results are preliminary, but suggest a connection between PCBs and breast cancer that hadn't previously been established, Falck said.

Many of the nation's worst hazardous waste dumps contain PCBs, and Consumer Reports magazine said last month commercially sold fish may also contain the chemicals.

Dr. Janet Osuch, associate professor of surgery at Michigan State University and a breast cancer spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society, said the findings suggest a link between diet and the disease.

"I think it's certainly possible. It makes intuitive sense," she said Friday. "I definitely think it's worth studying."

Rookie says King looked 'crazed' on night of beating

By Linda Deuche
Associated Press Writer

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A rookie police officer testified for the defense Friday that a motorist acted as if he had a weapon and seemed "crazed" in the moments before four officers began beating him.

"I recall looking at his face and seeing his eyes," Rolando Solano testified. "The eyes I saw that night seemed kind of crazed. I interpreted it as a hostile stare."

Solano was the rookie patrol partner of defendant Theodore Briseno, one of four white police officers charged in the beating of Rodney King after King had been stopped for speeding.

The March 3, 1991, beating of King, who is black, was videotaped by a bystander. The tape stirred racial tensions in Los Angeles and prompted nationwide calls for police brutality investigations after it was shown on television.

Solano, who said he watched the beating but did not participate, said King's behavior so frightened him that he drew his gun.

On trial are Briseno, 39, Sgt. Stacey Koon, 41, and Officers Timothy Wind, 31, and Laurence Powell, 29. They could receive four to eight years in prison if convicted of assault and related charges.

Also Friday, a physician testified for the defense that he believed King's multiple facial fractures most likely were caused by a fall, not by baton strikes.

Registration is just around the corner.

Students in the School of Human Development: (CDER, HFL, HNF, MCR), registration materials for Fall 1992 are now available in the Main Office 29 Merrill Hall.

Coalition claims credit for getting NY out of hydro program

By Elizabeth Edwarsen
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A coalition of Indians and environmentalists took credit when New York suddenly canceled a contract to buy power from a utility whose hydroelectric project would flood the tribe's native hunting grounds.

"This is a tremendous, tremendous victory," Bill Namagoose, executive director of the Grand Council of the Cree, said Friday after Gov. Mario Cuomo announced cancellation of a $13 billion contract with Hydro-Quebec.

"We are absolutely elated to hear the governor's decision," said Robyn Rehak of the Environmental Planning Lobby. "Mario Cuomo has heard our message loud and clear — that New York doesn't need this power."

Cuomo said he was aware of the concerns raised by the Cree and environmentalists, but said the contract was canceled for economic reasons.

The governor said projections for New York's power needs had declined since the state entered into the agreement. He said it would be less expensive to rely on conservation and other energy sources.

"Circumstances have changed dramatically since this contract originally was signed in 1988," he said in a statement. "We do not need new electricity generating capacity until after the turn of the century."

Richard Flynn, head of the New York Power Authority, said the decision to cancel was based solely on the cost of power. He said he had attempted to negotiate a better deal with Hydro-Electric and recommended that the contract be scrapped because those negotiations failed.

Under the 20-year agreement, the state was to receive 1,000 megawatts of electricity beginning in 1995.

Hydro-Electric, the provincial utility in Quebec, plans to expand its generating system in northern Quebec by building dams and dikes on the Great Whale River. The series of dams is in a sub-Arctic area on the eastern shore of the James and Hudson bays that has been home to the Cree for centuries.

The proposed expansion, the Great Whale project, would be the second phase of a $62 billion hydroelectric program that is a centerpiece of Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa's economic development plan.

If the entire project is completed, it would divert three rivers and flood an area of 1,600 square miles, including thousands of acres in the Cree's hunting grounds.

The utility said the Great Whale project was needed as part of an overall expansion that involved electricity exports to New York.

The Cree, one of the last hunter-trapper societies, lobbied against the contract for the past year. They won the support of environmentalists and sympathy from many New Yorkers with publicity efforts including a canoe trip to Manhattan.

Hydro-Quebec had fought hard to keep its contract, hiring some top New York public relations experts and lobbyists to promote the contract.

The Cree, who number about 10,000, contend the first phase of the hydroelectric program has disrupted nature, poisoned fish with mercury, ruined traplines and threatened their traditional way of life.

Hydro-Quebec officials downplayed the significance of New York's withdrawal, and said the utility would go ahead with the Great Whale project.

"This is not a setback for the company," said Jacques Guevremont, Hydro-Quebec's representative to the United States.

◆ NASA

Space shuttle Atlantis may delay return for another day

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis' astronauts measured light from shooting stars and Earth's gleaming halo Saturday, midway through the first shuttle mission devoted to environmental research.

The crew of six men and one woman was rooting to stay up an extra day, and it appeared NASA would grant their wish. Flight directors said they would decide Sunday whether to extend the eight-day flight.

The astronauts have been frugal with energy since reaching orbit Tuesday. Returning Thursday instead of Wednesday depended on whether they could save enough power, which they did.

"After going through all this work and all this effort, an extra day is a big thing," astronaut Michael Foale said in a preflight interview. "It will represent more than 10 percent of the science."

Atlantis' astronauts have been conducting tests of Earth's atmosphere, including whether chemicals are destroying its ozone layer, which protects against dangerous ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

Mission scientist Marsha Torr said it's far too soon for researchers to "write the science papers" on ozone depletion.

"All we can say at this point is that the quality of the data that have been gathered thus far is very superior to what we have seen on previous flights," Torr said.

The crew should have spent Saturday firing an electron beam gun to generate artificial auroras as well as radio waves aimed at students equipped with special receivers. The gun stood motionless in the cargo bay, though, disabled by an irreparable blown fuse.

Instead, the crew aimed an atmospheric-imaging camera at natural auroras, shooting stars and airglow, a glimmering layer 44 to 372 miles above Earth resulting from atoms and molecules absorbing and radiating sunlight.

◆ Slaying

Investigators look for dumped body in Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Investigators searched painstakingly for clues Saturday in the swampy woods where the body of a missing college student was dumped.

They also worked to dispel rumors that more graves have been unearthed.

"We have no evidence or reason to suspect there are other bodies buried in that area," Alachua County Sheriff's spokesman Spencer Mann said. "The media is doing all the speculating at this point."

On hands and knees, a dozen forensic scientists with trowels and sifters searched several acres for evidence in the slaying of Elizabeth Foster, the eighth college student killed in Gainesville in two years.

The 21-year-old Santa Fe Community College student had been missing for more than a week before her body was found Thursday in the trash-strewn area about two miles south of the University of Florida campus.

The search could take several days, Mann said, but he refused to confirm a Miami Herald report Saturday of "suspicious depressions" that were being investigated as possible gravesites.

"There are a number of reports attributed to different sources," Mann said. "All I can say is not all of them are true."

Ms. Foster's death has officially been ruled a homicide but authorities declined to reveal autopsy results or say whether the young woman was sexually assaulted.

Louisiana drifter Danny Rolling was indicted on charges of killing five students in August 1990, and a carpet cleaner confessed to killing two other students in June 1991. Both men are being held.

Authorities said they have no evidence to connect Ms. Foster's slaying with the seven other killings or the 1989 disappearance of University of Florida student Tiffany Sessions.

AIDS awareness exhibit vandalized at USM

By Mike Spinney
Free Press

PORTLAND, Maine (CPS) — Vandalism used black spray paint to deface an acclaimed international exhibit of 250 AIDS awareness posters at the University of Southern Maine's Portland campus.

Ninety-nine of the posters on loan from the Centre for AIDS Documentation, Research and Education (CADRE) of Canada were damaged or destroyed. The exhibit, titled "Visual AIDS," is currently on a tour of college campuses across the United States.

Vandals armed with spray paint cans apparently entered the student center shortly after security guards opened the doors at 7 a.m. March 5.

"Some will not be able to be replaced, some of the most interesting posters," said Clarence Crossman, CADRE spokesman from his London, Ontario, office. "I feel very angry and frustrated. I feel these feelings as well as a determination to capitalize on this to raise (AIDS) consciousness.

"There have been efforts to censor it in various ways. This is the first time it has been defaced."

The damaged posters remained on view through the scheduled end of the exhibition at the university's Portland campus. A ribbon of black paint randomly scarred portions of the exhibit, marring posters both innocent and sexually explicit. Among them were posters of the parting Red Sea with the caption "Until there's a miracle, the only cure for AIDS is you," a nude silhouette of a pregnant woman warning of the dangers of passing AIDS to an unborn child, and naked men in an erotic embrace.

One poster produced by Art Against AIDS, which depicts the history of the disease, now bears the word "Sodom."

"We originally were considering replacing (the damaged posters) with black paper," said Martha Cook, an intern in the university's art department. "But we want people to see what has happened."

The posters include examples of AIDS awareness efforts from countries such as the United States, Canada, and Japan, as well as every European country, Australia, and African and South American nations.

Others said they hoped the continuation of the exhibit would make a powerful statement about the often-hysterical reaction to AIDS.

"It will draw more attention to the issue. The big value of this show is the message. The show will be able to go on, and it may have some impact that it otherwise might not have had," said Craig Hutchinson, associate director of student life.

"This exhibit was put together by an arts organization, funded by a major Canadian insurance company (London Life), has been displayed at over 100 other locations and this (vandalism) has never happened," said Professor Chris Reed, who specializes in the study of AIDS graphics. "This is a major embarrassment to USM and to Maine."

Students deplored the vandalism, even when their personal feelings were less than positive.

"It's a little graphic. I'm not 100 percent sure it needs to be as graphic as it is. I am 100 percent sure it needs to be up," said sophomore Julie Hallet, a nursing major. "I think that if people need to express their opinions, there are more constructive ways than vandalism."

"Whoever did it made it stand out. It will make the message more substantial," added sophomore Andrew Hogan, a criminology major. "Now more people are coming by to see what happened."

USF president accused of cover-up

TAMPA, Fla. (CPS) — University of South Florida President Frank T. Borkowski's job performance came under scrutiny after a state report charged that a star athlete was allowed to continue to play after he was accused of rape.

A report by the Florida Board of Regents charged that top university administrators knew that six women complained of being harassed, battered or raped by athlete Marvin Taylor, but withheld information to allow Taylor to continue to play basketball.

A performance evaluation for Borkowski will take place within the next 30 to 60 days, said Pat Riordan, spokesman for the Board of Regents. Borkowski's evaluation originally was scheduled for August.

Chancellor Charles Reed and a special committee met with Borkowski for two days. "It is the highest priority on his list of evaluations," Riordan said.

Another university official, Dan Walbolt, vice president and supervisor of the school's athletic program, resigned under pressure Jan. 31 after the allegations became public.

At the Board of Regents meeting,

Borkowski turned in a plan for reform that included major organizational and personnel changes at the school, such as the creation of an office for women's issues and a victims' advocate program.

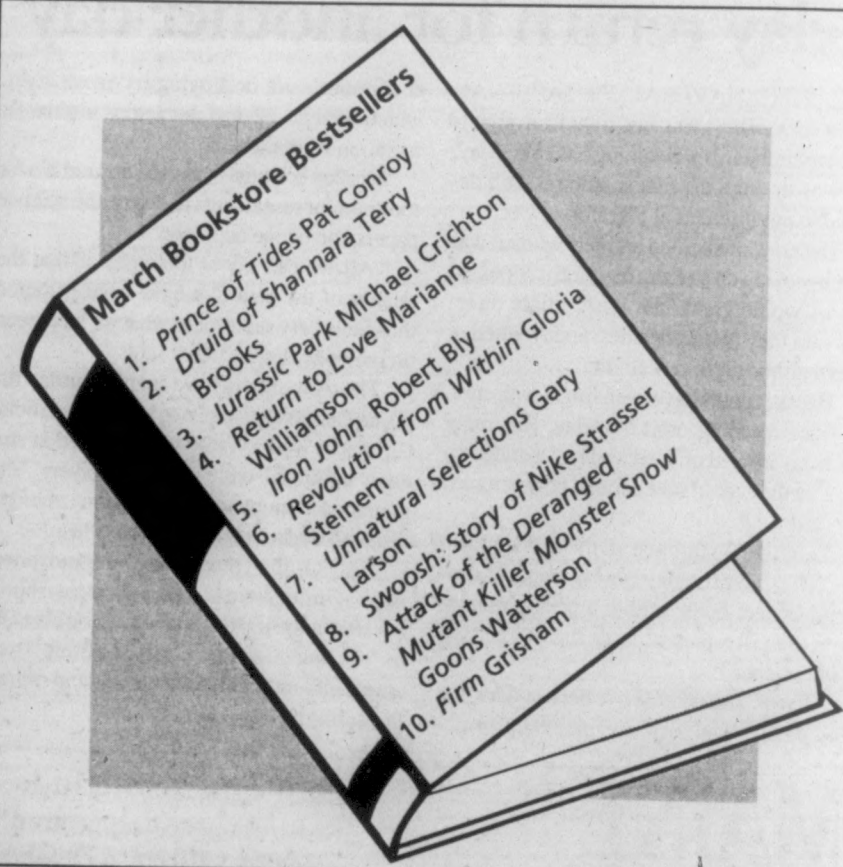

An interim coordinator of the victims' advocate program was named within days of the meeting. Jeanette Abin Marcus, a paralegal with the university's general counsel and chairwoman of the Status of Women Committee, has been named to the position.

Billy Newland, managing editor of the Oracle, the student newspaper that printed the first story about Taylor in 1990, said the controversy has left many female students angry about the university's handling of the matter.

"Marvin was the guy who got them to the NCAA," Newland said. "He was the best point guard we ever had here. I think these (administrators) were good men making bad decisions."

Newland said he is concerned that some students are not taking the issue seriously.

Even after stories of sexual misconduct were printed about Taylor, many students cheered him loudly at basketball games, Newland said.

Indiana University ATO accused of hazing

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (CPS) — Indiana University and the national chapter of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity are investigating an alleged hazing incident that left a pledge hospitalized with a .40 blood alcohol content.

As a result of the Jan. 28 drinking binge, the fraternity and 26 members have been charged with hazing, endangering the life of a student, giving false information to university officials and violating the school's alcohol possession and consumption policies.

University officials would not release the name of the man who was sent to the hospital after the incident. According to the school, the man had said he was drinking before he went to the fraternity house for a big-brother, little-brother function.

Student Association protests ROTC policy

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The United States Student Association delivered to President Bush's campaign headquarters ballots from college students in 48 states protesting the ROTC's ban on gay and lesbian cadets.

Mock ballots were distributed to more than 100 campuses nationwide, and students were asked to return them to the USSA office.

Glenn Magpantay, co-chairman of USSA's Lesbian-Gay-Bisexual Student Caucus, said several boxes full of protest ballots were delivered March 9 to Bush's campaign office. The exact count was uncertain, but Magpantay said there were thousands of ballots.

"Today the president will hear from the nation's students," Magpantay said. "The ball is in his court. He can change the policy or face the wrath of students."

Financial aid

Students protest minority scholarship policy

WASHINGTON (CPS) — About 300 students rallied in protest of the Department of Education's policy on minority scholarships and called on Congress to increase the amount of money available for financial aid programs.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson joined the United States Student Association in a March 9 news conference calling for legislation that would preserve the legality of minority scholarships and make Pell Grants an entitlement.

"George Bush is playing race politics at a time when the economic recession is most conducive to dividing groups of people and distracting students from the real source of their financial aid problems," said Tajel Shah, president of USSA and a student at Rutgers University.

"In the same way that Bush is dividing middle-class students from the 'neediest students' with his Pell Grant proposals, he is also dividing whites from 'minorities' who 'undeservingly' get a minuscule amount of race-targeted scholarships."

In December 1991, the Department of Education proposed that universities be prohibited from awarding scholarships based solely on race. March 9 was the last day for public comment on the proposed rule.

Education Secretary Lamar Alexander emphasized that no student who has a scholarship will lose it because of the new policy. He also said that scholarships can continue to be used by colleges to attract students if the scholarships are based on a number of factors, such as economic background, geographic location and race.

The primary result of the move will stop predominantly white colleges from offering scholarships based solely on race to encourage enrollment of minorities. Race can still be considered in a scholarship, as long as it is "one factor among several." About 2 million students receive minority scholarships, but only 45,000 have race-specific scholarships. "As students we will not be divided and conquered. We want access to higher education for all," said Stacy Leyton, vice president of USSA and a graduate at Stanford University. "Students know that the answer to the crisis in higher education is not to abolish minority scholarships, but to strengthen the student aid programs so that they serve the needs of low- and middle-income students."

According to a statement by USSA, Pell Grants now cover less than 25 percent of college costs, compared with 50 percent in 1980. Despite sharp increases in tuition, grant money for college students continues to dry up.

The Senate recently approved a major expansion of student aid, but dropped a provision that would convert Pell Grants into an entitlement. The House has not yet approved its version of the Higher Education Reauthorization Act.

As an entitlement, Pell Grants would receive automatic funding and avoid the annual appropriations process that often leaves the program short of its authorized funding level.

Student arrested for running URI gambling ring

By E. Martin Hulse
Special CPS Correspondent

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (CPS) — Three people have been arrested in connection with a college-based gambling ring that has spawned investigations by the University of Rhode Island and Bryant College to see whether any athletes or coaches were involved in illegal betting.

After a three-month investigation, state police arrested Matthew Zimmerman, described as the ringleader of the gambling operation, which involved the University of Rhode Island, Bryant College and other unidentified colleges and may have had ties to organized crime.

Rhode Island State Police Capt. Brian

Andrews said Zimmerman, a 21-year-old Bryant College senior, was arrested in late February and charged with bookmaking, racketeering, organized crime gambling and conspiracy.

"A street-type bookmaking operation, gambling operation, doesn't last unless they've been sanctioned by organized crime. You don't run a gambling organization unless you pay," Andrews said.

Zimmerman's roommate, a non-student, Dennis Millette, 20, and a University of Rhode Island student, Raymond Damaso Jr., also were arrested in connection with the ring. Millette was charged with organized crime gambling and conspiracy. Damaso was arrested Feb. 24 on gambling charges.

Meanwhile, Bryant College in nearby

Smithfield, R.I., has removed one student from the basketball team and suspended four others accused of being involved with the ring. Bryant College also has created a special task force to study the problem of student gambling.

According to an Associated Press report, the five players had bet on college sports, wagering as much as $54,000, and other players allegedly collected debts for the ring.

Meanwhile, the president of the University of Rhode Island, Robert Carothers, said the school's investigations would look at illegal gambling in the dorms, Greek houses, off-campus housing and the athletic department.

Ed Hannan, sports editor of the University of Rhode Island student newspaper, said he and other students were not surprised by the findings.

A loss for everyone

The University of Maine hockey team's loss wasn't the worst element of this weekend's trip to Providence. While the elimination of the team from the Final Four was heartbreaking, the UMaine fans' behavior and conduct was even more so.

The almost exclusively Maine crowd – while lively and excited – seemed to have more than just a few bad apples making things difficult for the rest of the crowd. Members of the band were harassed by Maine fans through complaints, jeers, and negative criticism. One "Main-ah" actually spit into the bell of a band member's instrument.

The band wasn't the only victim, however. A number of the home crowd were ejected from the arena, while still others managed to pillage a Maine fast-food eatery. Worse, a possible rape by a UMaine student of a UMaine student is being investigated by the Providence police.

It boggles the mind how immature some students and other adults can be when left unsupervised. It is not surprising that NCAA rules and local security are so stringent during tournament time when things like this occur.

Harassing the band that supports one's own school's team is inconsiderate and hurts the band's confidence and morale, as it did ours. Harassing local residents and establishments, and committing criminal acts in a city where we are welcomed as guests, is intolerable, and leaves a horrible mark on our school's reputation.

The fans who did praise the efforts of the band, cheerleaders, and other support groups should be thanked and applauded.

The best thing about UMaine's 3-2 loss is that we won't have to suffer this same kind of embarrassment in Albany. (MAA)

It really is sad

You try to do something nice for people and what happens? They shit on you.

Such is the case of the now-infamous Bus Trip to Providence.

The intent was for UMaine students to be able to go see the Black Bears in the NCAA tournament at a affordable rate and not worry about driving or anything.

As the above editorial states, a fiasco occurred and not everyone had a good time as was planned.

How do you, as a group, expect to be treated as adults when a few students continue to act in such a childish manner? You complain on a regular basis about not being able to attend hockey games at Alford Arena and I used to agree with you.

Not anymore.

Your reactions at the game were, at first glance, commendable and sorely needed, especially 298 miles from the friendly confines of Alford.

But upon closer review, shameful is a better word than commendable.

It's simple. You act respectably, you get treated respectfully. Don't and you won't be invited back.

It would be very surprising if there is another student bus trip offered in the near future. Why go through all the hassles, why go to the mat for a bunch of students who don't appreciate it in the first place?

It's sad to say, especially for players such as Scott Pellerin, Mike Barkley and the five other UMaine players who have pulled on a Black Bear uniform for the last time, but maybe it's a good thing Albany isn't in the immediate future.

It really is sad....(TWH)

Let them sit on couches

It's hard not to be outraged in times like these. The University of Maine's budget problems are continuing with the campus facing a $5.5 million cut for fiscal year 1992.

A cut which is passed on to you and me, the consumers:

- A 15.6 percent tuition increase yet to be approved (like there's ever a ray of hope) by the BOT.

- Room and board is increased from $4,241 to $4,362.

- The Comprehensive Fee is increased by $8 to $146.

And remember if you're just joining us, that these are just the latest atrocities. UMaine and the entire system have a great and glorious history in this department.

We had the mid-year 15.6 percent tuition increase.

We had 100+ class sections cut, which makes registration all the more Darwinian.

We had numerous faculty and professional staff laid off. For God's sakes, they even laid off the cows.

University spirit is non-existent. Morale is at an all-time low. Students are mad. Faculty are mad. Staff are mad.

What's a university to do?

HIRE AN UPHOLSTERER!!!!

Yes, that's right, an upholsterer, someone who repairs furniture.

I was reading The Bangor Daily News Midweek insert last Wednesday and I noticed the ad you see below.

UNIVERSITY OF MAINE

Full-time, Regular position.

Work hours are 7 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Employee performs skilled work in the repair and rebuilding of upholstered furniture, draperies, mattresses, wall treatments, blinds and window shades. Employee does estimating, ordering of fabrics and supplies, and meets with vendors and outside customers. The employee supervises students and/or temporary employees.

Employee uses trade associated with the upholstery trade and person selected must have demonstrated experience in all facets of trade. Skills in innovative problem solving and resource management expected. Some lifting required. $8.05/hr. with excellent full-time benefits which include health insurance, life insurance, generous vacation and sick leave, 12 paid holidays, retirement and tuition waivers.

My question is: In a time where everyone has been cut to the bone and the university claims it's sooooo poor and is desperately trying to uphold its commitment to quality education, is now the best time to worry about the status of our couches?

I, being someone who makes 50 cents an hour (I swear to God this is true), believes it is not the right time at all. An upholsterer is a luxury we just can't afford.

The new UMaine upholsterer will make $8.05 an hour. How many of you students out there make that kind of dough?

Since it's a full-time job that's 40 hours a week, so you'd gross $322 a week. After taking out taxes (I figured 15 percent) that leaves you with $273.70. When you multiply that figure times 52 weeks a year you've got an annual salary of $14,232.40. I could deal with that.

Granted that's not a whole lot of money to big shot adults, but to students who have a $20 grocery budget for the month, it's a king's ransom.

And the 14 gs isn't all – don't forget the free tuition (which right now is a free $267 a class), "generous" vacation, sick leave and 12 paid holidays. It must be nice, and all for fixing furniture.

Not to belittle the accomplishments of upholsterers, they are skilled and do deserve a decent wage – but it's depressing to me, the average college student. I watch students struggle with money problems everyday and I think of better things the university could do with that $14,000+.

They could add it to the work study fund, give out some loans, hire some part-time instructors, etc.

I'm earning a degree which is becoming more and more useless as time goes on. I've been trying for four months to get a summer job somewhat related to my major and the best offer I've gotten is $75 a week.

I see students bust their humps every day trying to pay their bills and live somewhere above the poverty line. I watch them eat a 50 cent box of macaroni and cheese for days on end because an overzealous teacher required them to buy six books. I watch them walk dejectedly out of student aid as they get turned down for help because their parents have the audacity to own their own home, but can't afford to help pay for school. I watch them drop out of school because they just can't make it anymore.

I watch this everyday, but John Q. Alumnihall doesn't. He doesn't see this and that's why the sympathies and concerns for the students sound so damn false exiting his mouth.

I listen to him tell me how much he wishes he could help and how much they care.

From the looks of it, the University of Maine cares more about the appearance of its furniture than the quality of life of its students.

British conservatives think Major needs to be tougher

By Cotten Timberlake
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — With the deadlock continuing in the opinion polls, members of the ruling Conservative party grumbled Saturday that Prime Minister John Major's campaign lacked "street fighters" and "razmatazz."

While prominent Tories expressed their dissatisfaction with the run-up to the April 9 election, Major faced an ugly scene in Luton, north of London, where he tried to drown out jeering from 50 protesters screaming "Tory scum."

Major braved the group, shouting to them and to the rest of a large crowd: "You see the face of hatred there. No mob taking to the streets is ever going to stop us coming out and talking to the ordinary decent people."

Opposition Labor leader Neil Kinnock, celebrating his 50th birthday on the campaign trail in Prestwick, Scotland, received a warmer reception at a housing complex for the elderly.

Residents presented Kinnock with a cake with five Labor red candles and the words "To Neil, it's time for Labor, Happy Birthday." Red is the Labor party's color, blue is the Conservatives'.

Major celebrates his 49th birthday on Sunday with his wife Norma at the prime minister's country residence, Chequers. His low-key manner and "nice guy" image haven't helped his party move ahead in the opinion polls. Neither has a defensive Conservative campaign, which has contrasted sharply with Labor's confident offensive.

The Conservatives are looking vulnerable largely because of a deep recession that brought 9.4 percent unemployment and a record number of home repossession and business failures.

The two main parties have been running neck-and-neck in the opinion polls for weeks. A British Broadcasting Corp. poll late Saturday showed Labor with a 39 percent lead, the Conservatives with 37 percent, and the centrist Liberal Democrats with 19 percent.

The poll was calculated by taking a weighted average of recent surveys. There was a margin of error of plus or minus 2 percentage points.

The result included polls that were conducted by Harris for the Observer, ICM for the Sunday Express, and by NOP for the Mail on Sunday, between March 26 and March 28.

"It is time to let lose the Tory street fighters... We have got to sharpen up our words and get into the war," said Kenneth Warren, a Conservative legislator.

Conservative legislator Teresa Gorman, fighting to retain her Billericay seat, told BBC radio: "We have a terrific story to tell and we are not telling it. We want more razmatazz."

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Government party leaders Saturday selected former Finance Minister P.J. Patterson as prime minister to lead Jamaica through one of its most painful economic periods, TV and radio said.

The vote also officially ends the Manley family's control of the People's National Party since its founding in 1938.

Patterson, a British-educated lawyer who also served as deputy prime minister, promised to continue the free-market reforms supported by Prime Minister Michael Manley, who is resigning because of poor health.

"There's going to be no radical change in direction," said Patterson in an interview Saturday.

JBC-TV and RJR radio projected at least a 2-to-1 victory for Patterson among the estimated 3,200 party delegates. Official returns were expected later Saturday.

Patterson, 56, was scheduled to be sworn in Monday.

Patterson — who has said he will restore business confidence in Jamaica — was forced to resign from the Cabinet in January after granting a $1.47 million tax waiver to Shell Oil. But he claimed he did not benefit from the grant.

The party vote comes after Jamaica's currency fell to an all-time low against the dollar and price hikes were announced for milk and cement.

The Caribbean nation's economy has been struggling ever since Manley began cutting state subsidies and selling state industries as part of a plan to make Jamaica more competitive worldwide.

Labor Minister Portia Simpson, who waged a strong grass-roots campaign for the prime minister post, said she would not challenge the vote and appealed for party unity.

Ms. Simpson, a former secretary and social worker, is popular among Jamaica's poor and rural residents.

"Whatever happens, I will still be regarded as the prime minister of the Jamaican people," she said after casting her vote.

The race began after Manley, 67, announced March 15 that he would step down. Patterson would become Jamaica's sixth prime minister since independence from Britain in 1962.

Independence leader Norman Washington Manley founded the party in 1938, and his son Michael took over the party in 1969.

Executive charged with deaths

BHOPAL, India (AP) — A court issued an arrest warrant Friday for the retired chairman of Union Carbide Corp., who is charged with homicide in the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster that killed more than 4,000 people.

Chief Judicial Magistrate Gulab Sharma ordered the extradition from the United States of Warren Anderson, who was Union Carbide's chief executive when lethal gas leaked from the company's Bhopal plant. The company is based in Danbury, Conn.

The orders come nearly three months after the magistrates court charged Anderson with "culpable homicide not amounting to murder" and ordered him to appear in court Feb. 1. Anderson did not appear.

"Enough opportunity has been given to Anderson," said Sharma in his order. "The only way to get (him) is to initiate extradition proceedings."

An extradition order must go to the Indian government for approval and be relayed to the State Department in Washington for action.

At least 4,035 people have died and about 20,000 were injured when they inhaled poisonous methyl isocyanate gas from the pesticide plant in Bhopal operated by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary. It is ranked as the world's worst industrial disaster.

In its previous ruling the court threatened to seize Anderson's property in India and abroad unless he appeared in court.

◆ Government

Saudi Arabia rejects democracy

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, in an interview published Saturday, ruled out the adoption of Western-style democracy, saying it was not compatible with his country.

The monarch also denied that his recent tentative moves toward democratization were dictated by international pressure in the aftermath of the Gulf War.

"The democracy systems prevailing in the world are systems which in their structure do not suit this region and our people," the king said in the interview published in Abu Dhabi's Al-Itihad newspaper and the Kuwaiti daily Al-Sayassah.

"Our nations in their makeup and characteristics are different from those of that world, and we cannot import a method that others use to apply to our peoples," he said.

After the Gulf War, some Western critics questioned why they should defend Arab monarchies where democracy is non-existent.

Saudi Arabia is a member of the Gulf Cooperation Council, a 10-year old alliance that includes the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar, Oman and Kuwait. Of the six, only Kuwait has an elected parliament but it does not allow political parties.

Fahd recently announced he will name a long-promised consultative council to advise him on public opinion. The decision moved his ultraconservative kingdom of 12 million a step closer to popular participation in the government.

Your Daily Horoscope

For Monday March 30

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You like to be free, especially with your finances. You live by your wits, and while this can be exciting during your wild youth, it makes for a rather insecure existence when you decide to set down roots and raise a family. Fortunately you have many talents and no shortage of imagination. Like a cat, somehow you manage to land on your feet.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): Don't be so quick to jump to the defense of an associate. Would they be so willing to do the same for you? Misplaced loyalty causes grief.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): When a troubled friend needs a helping hand, you reach out to them without giving it a second thought. They know they can count on you when the chips are down.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): A loved one so enjoys your company that they tend to smother you with affection. If you need some space, say so, but do it in a gentle way.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Leftover problems make for an increased workload. Don't be intimidated by the sheer volume. Stay focused and you'll breeze through.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): An associate may try to mislead you under the guise of helpful advice; so beware of the Trojan horse! Their attempt at inciting confusion is a sign that you're on the right track.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Unstable economic factors indicate that major transactions should be put off until another day. Flying in the face of the stars could bring about a fiscal nightmare.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): Criticism from a friend angers you mostly because they're right. Rather than stewing over their audacity, do something to change the source of the problem. Take control.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): An emotionally exhausting personal issue is finally resolved. The outcome may not be quite what you had hoped, but at least it's over with and you can get on with things.

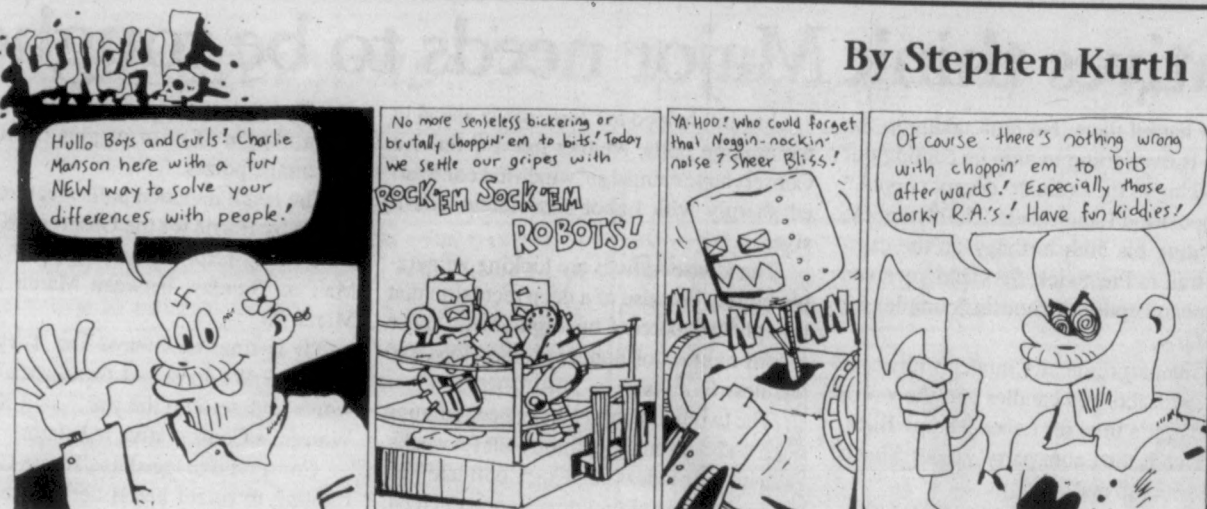

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The flame that burns too brightly fades before the day is done. Remember that slow and steady wins the race.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Intimidating obstacles that loom before you are more superficial than you first realize. By surging ahead without fear, you can transcend all barriers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Lower the defenses that spring from heightened sensitivity and allow a loved one to get close. The tenderness that such an action engenders leads to an evening of passion.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): While idle chatter with a new love interest is pleasing, they lack the sort of depth that makes for a relationship. The sooner you accept this, the better off you'll be.

For Tuesday March 31

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: A rugged individualist, you're immune to peer pressure. Keeping up with the Joneses' isn't a priority, you're more concerned with the practical struggle of living your life the way you want without compromising your ideals. You are surprisingly charming when you want to be, although now and again a hint of arrogance may creep into your manner.

ARIES (March 20 — April 19): Anxiety over recent events can be dissipated by reaching out to a friend. Pick up the phone and call someone, just the sound of their voice will ease your worries.

TAURUS (April 20 — May 20): By preparing psychologically for an upcoming event you have the confidence to emerge victorious. They only way to come out on top is to lay it all on the line.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Hasty solutions to a complex dilemma only serve to cloud things even more. They key to unraveling this kind of knot is patience coupled with attention to detail.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Utter chaos at the office makes it impossible to get anything done. Find a quiet place where you can collect your thoughts.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The stars have seen fit to grant you the gift of wonder. Indulge your fertile imagination and work to bring the beauty of your ideas alive for others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Rapidly shifting alliances could alter the balance of power and leave you hanging by a thread. Keeping you options open will prove to be the best option for all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 23): The seed of romance falls on fertile ground as relationships begin now. However, don't press for something that isn't there, your heart will tell you when it's right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Things are not necessarily as others would have you believe as ulterior motives drive their actions. Proceed with caution.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): When your decision making capability has been compromised by emotions, seek out a friend for an objective opinion. Do your best to see all options clearly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Set aside hostilities when an antagonistic acquaintance makes a friendly gesture. You're not being lulled into a false sense of security: their actions are genuine.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Courage is grace under pressure and you personify this when deftly handling a potentially embarrassing situation. Use humor to smooth over the rough spots.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — March 19): Leave the grind of work behind and concentrate on the simpler pleasures of life. Catch up on family gossip or curl up with a good book.

Corrections

In the March 27 edition of Verbatim, the "Fiddler cast learns more than lines" story contained an error. The story stated that according to tradition, Jewish Sabbath starts at sundown Sunday when it should have stated that Jewish Sabbath starts at sundown Saturday.

In the March 27 edition of The Maine Campus, "The best of the Black Bears looks back" story contained an error. A prediction was made that Carl Smith would be drafted in the fifth or eighth round of the NFL draft; he was not told this as the story indicated.

George Carlin performs at MCA dealing with the problems of the world. "Have you ever gone into a room and suddenly don't remember why you went in?" he asked. The audience laughed in understanding.

Carlin suggested all the golf courses in the United States be used to build houses for the homeless. He called golf a slow game for arrogant white people who wear green pants and yellow shirts.

"The only black people around are usually carrying trays," he said.

Through his comedy, Carlin expressed disdain for airports and the announcers who use wordy terms to express simple ideas.

"In the event that the cabin de pressurizes (the roof rips off), oxygen masks will drop down. In the event that we make a water landing (crash into the ocean) your seat can be used as a floatation device.

"I know I want to float around in the ocean on a cushion full of beer-farts," Carlin said.

Carlin's facial expressions and voice characterizations help with his appeal. Nowhere are these characterizations more apparent than in his classic routine comparing baseball and football.

"Baseball is played on a diamond," Carlin said in a high-pitched voice. "Football is played on a gridiron," he said in a tough, low voice.

"I enjoy chaos and disorder, not just because it helps me professionally," he said. He said that's why he likes watching auto races; he's hoping for a crash.

"You do the same thing," he told the audience, "at least I admit it."

This was Carlin's third appearance at the MCA. Opening for him was Chandler Travis, whose low-key comedy was often paired with guitar playing and singing. Travis said he was a member of the British punk group "The Skumsucking Nazi Boners from Hell." He sang about dogs and meat and in a ballad, moved the audience with the stirring words "I'll kill you all tomorrow."

Carlin is currently touring to promote his HBO special airing in April.

Abuse of women

however he so wished.

Although alcohol did play a role in abuse, it was not as prevalent as many have believed, Nadelhaft said. He added disputes over money, responsibility, performance of family duties, rejection of request for immediate or unnatural sexual gratification and jealousy were common motives for abuse.

"Abuse was not just arm-twisting or a slap, it was fists, boots and weapons of all kinds being used," Nadelhaft said.

Whipping, breaking bones by beating with wood or stone, gouging out eyes, using axes and butcher knives, tearing hair from the head, and making a woman drink nitric acid are acts of violence are recorded in police reports and newspaper articles.

Nadelhaft said men struck at areas that gave them the most satisfaction and were not worried about the public seeing signs of abuse. He said men used threats and violence to control their wives through fear.

Women could not easily support each other and had no way of instigating reform since they could not vote and had no leadership positions in government.

Wife abuse and the apparent decline of women's fortunes in the 19th century is still a debated topic.

"No matter what the variation, abuse is widespread and important. No matter where you are, little is done," Nadelhaft said.

Judicial ruling

Judge asked to end restrictions on aid for children

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A federal judge who refused to bar the state from tightening eligibility for Aid to Families with Dependent Children is now being asked to cut off the state's Medicaid funds until the changes are rescinded.

Pine Tree Legal Assistance filed a lawsuit Thursday that asks U.S. District Judge Gene Carter to bar the government from making Medicaid reimbursements to Maine — an estimated $303 million this year — until the new state restrictions on AFDC are rescinded.

Earlier this month, Carter ruled that the state had authority to impose the limit on the level of child support that welfare mothers may receive before losing some or all AFDC benefits. He ruled that only the federal Health and Human Services Department can order the state to change its rules.

Pine Tree, which is appealing Carter's ruling, maintains that the restrictions violate a congressional mandate by effectively reducing payments below May 1988 levels. U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Dr. Louis W. Sullivan is named as the defendant in the latest filing.

Christopher St. John, an attorney for Pine Tree, said the low-income advocacy group filed the new suit because "that's the relief (Carter) says is the only relief that's available," but also will appeal his earlier ruling.

The 3.5 percent reduction in the AFDC "standard of need," originally slated to take effect in March but now scheduled for April 1, would reduce the outside income allowed for a mother and two children by $20 a month, to $100. The maximum AFDC benefit for a family of three is $453 a month.

The change was part of cost-cutting steps that Gov. John R. McKernan and lawmakers approved in December. A McKernan administration plan to eliminate any outside income for AFDC recipients starting in July has been rejected by the Appropriations Committee.

Clinton criticizes Brown flat tax proposal

By Catherine Crocker
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Democratic front-runner Bill Clinton slashed at Jerry Brown's proposed 13 percent flat tax Saturday, saying it would put money in his pocket—and Brown's as well—while hurting the poor.

Brown shot back that the Arkansas governor had "invented another big lie" about the flat tax as the Democratic presidential race intensified in advance of the state's critical April 7 primary.

"My wife and I have released our tax returns, you can look at them," Clinton said as he campaigned at a Queens diner in advance of New York's April 7 presidential primary. "We'd make a lot of money on Jerry Brown's plan, because we don't consume that much of our income and 13 percent is a lot less than we normally pay," Clinton said. "I bet Jerry Brown would make a lot of money on his tax plan. He ought to release his tax returns and we can see."

About 200 lunch time diner patrons gave the Arkansas governor a round of applause.

Brown ran into trouble with a rival political group and alienated some natural constituents—the organic farm crowd—as he brought his primary campaign back to city streets.

Before Brown arrived to a rally at Manhattan's Union Square, officials of the weekend farmer's market complained that the rally had disrupted the area so badly that the farmers were losing anywhere from a quarter to a half of their normal business.

Clinton, Brown say they're willing to take AIDS test

By Suzanne Ziegler
Associated Press Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Democratic presidential rivals Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown say they'd be willing to be tested for the AIDS virus.

Brown appeared in a public television studio Friday night and Clinton participated via satellite from Indianapolis in a forum allowing Minnesota and Wisconsin voters to question the candidates. The two states' primaries are April 7.

Mike and Sherie Johnson of Milton, Wis., who have tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS, challenged Clinton and Brown to be tested as a gesture of presidential leadership.

"We're all in this together," Mike Johnson said. "The best thing that we can do to get rid of the stigma is all of us act in concert together. If the president of the United States, on national television, told America that all of us, tomorrow, need to be tested...that would be true leadership."

Brown said he would be willing to take the test but said testing of all Americans might not be the best use of resources.

"I have no problem taking the test, but I don't think the medical authorities have suggested that everyone should be tested, only certain risk groups and people engaging in certain behaviors," he said.

Arkansas Gov. Clinton said he's willing to be tested and noted that it's a common requirement for many insurance policies.

"I think we need to get rid of the fear, face the facts," he said.

The "We The People" forum involved citizens in St. Paul and in Wausau and Beloit, Wis.

On another issue, Clinton attacked Brown's proposal for a 13 percent flat income tax, calling it unfair to the poor and middle class.

Rec Sports allows all students a chance to competeBy Randy Robinson
Staff Writer

If the coaches are also players and the game is for fun, it must be an intramural contest.

From badminton to weightlifting, from broomball to inner tube water polo, University of Maine students have been participating in intramural activities since the 1940s, Recreation Sports Director David Ames said.

He said intramural sports, plus a small weight room, were all that were offered to non-varsity athletes when he became Rec Sports director in 1971.

Ames said the intramural program, like other recreational sports programs on campus, has grown considerably since its inception.

Ames said the founder of college intramurals, Elmer Mitchell, introduced the non-varsity sports for the first time to Ohio State and the University of Michigan in 1913.

Twenty-five intramural sports are now offered at UMaine, in male, female and coed divisions. Many students participate in several events during the same season.

Junior Leslie Proulx, a health, physical education and recreation major from Waterville, has played water polo, softball, women's and coed volleyball among others.

Proulx was injured playing high school varsity sports and said she wanted to participate at a lower level in college. She also said she likes being able to play several sports.

Proulx said she likes meeting people through intramurals, but wishes more people would show up for games. The number of no-shows is "very irritating," she said. She also said fewer women seem to participate.

Jeff Hutchinson, a senior math education major from Stonington, said he likes the social aspect of intramural contests.

Hutchinson, who said he's always been athletic, likes being part of a group. He said athletics gives him a "crutch" to get to know people.

Sometimes people take the games too seriously and get "real obnoxious," Hutchinson said.

He said he likes the informal nature of intramurals, which allows players to be coaches. He said he's never seen anyone who was just a coach on any of his teams.

Hutchinson has played flag football, basketball, softball and volleyball, and has also coached.

Hutchinson said Ames and assistant Rec Sports director Thad Dwyer do a good job organizing games.

Hutchinson's roommate, John Hill, is an electrical engineering graduate student from Yarmouth. His intramural activities include basketball, volleyball and softball.

Like many students, Hill likes meeting new people and being part of a group. He said his major problem with intramurals is the time they can take away from studying.

Currently, Hill said he spends about 4 hours a week playing.

Participants include men's and women's dorms, Greeks and off-campus students.

◆ State Congressional race

Pat McGowan to run against Snowe again for Congress

CANAAN, Maine (AP) — Democrat Patrick K. McGowan, who came close to unseating U.S. Rep. Olympia J. Snowe in 1990, announced Saturday he will seek a rematch against the seven-term incumbent.

McGowan, 35, a country store owner who spent 10 years in the state House of Representatives, made his announcement to more than 400 supporters at a bean supper in the Grange Hall in his home town of Canaan.

Former Republican U.S. Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, seated between Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and Androscoggin county District Attorney Janet Mills, drew applause from the crowd after being introduced by McGowan.

"It's time for the people in Washington to wake up," McGowan said. "Let me get a brick and throw it through a plate glass window down there. We can let them know what we've been living like here in Maine."

McGowan said he will support imposing a limit of six two-year terms for members of the House of Representatives.

"That's it, pure and simple," he said. "Whether it's passed or not, in 12 years, I'll be gone."

McGowan was the first candidate of either major party to formally enter the congressional race in the 2nd District. Jonathan Carter, a professor at the University of Maine at Farmington, announced earlier this year he will run for the seat as an independent under the banner of Maine's Green Party.

In the last election, McGowan captured 49 percent of the vote.

Democratic officials say McGowan's strong showing should make it easier for him to raise campaign contributions this year. McGowan spent nearly $230,000 in the 1990 race and Snowe spent about $275,000, according to campaign finance reports.

Snowe, who defeated her previous opponents handily, has said she expects another tough contest against McGowan. The Republican congresswoman began her reelection effort earlier than usual, opening a small campaign office and hiring a fundraiser last year.

A pilot, McGowan logged nearly 10,000 miles in his bush plane during the last campaign to seek votes in the predominantly rural area that makes up what is geographically the largest congressional district east of the Mississippi.

Bobby Knight Quote of the Week

"I think all games should be played in the morning. We should probably start at, oh, 7 in the morning. I think that way we could interest housewives across the country in basketball and get them away from those weight programs."

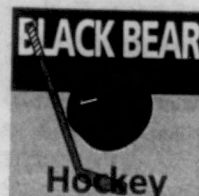

"Pretty soon, you'd have housewives playing basketball instead of running on those Nordic ski tracks or whatever they're on."

Spartans stun Black Bears, 3-2

By Tim Hopley
Sports Editor

PROVIDENCE—"It's not supposed to end like this," University of Maine senior tri-captain Scott Pellerin said.

Indeed, The Black Bear hockey season ended Saturday night as the Michigan State Spartans downed UMaine 3-2 in the NCAA quarterfinals at the Providence Civic Center.

Fueled by two goals and an assist from the CCHA Player of the Year Dwayne Norris, MSU rebounded from an early one-goal deficit and now advances to the Final Four in Albany, NY where they will face Lake Superior State, 8-3 winners over Minnesota in the West regionals, Thursday afternoon.

Bryan Smolinski scored the game-winner for the Spartans mid-way through the second period when Black Bear goalie Garth Snow missed a poke at a loose puck. The junior from Ohio pounced on it and flipped a wrist over the downed Snow, giving MSU a 3-1 advantage.

UMaine appeared to have closed the gap back to within one at the 13:11 mark of the second when Jim Montgomery seemingly tucked one home past the Spartans' Mike Gilmore.

Gilmore gloved Montgomery's attempt over the goal line, but the red light never came on and referee Jim Burlew didn't make the call. "(Gilmore) caught the puck over the goal line, which is a goal, but the light never came on and the ref didn't have the guts to make the call," Montgomery said.

Black Bear sniper Jean-Yves Roy was sent to the dressing room immediately following after being assessed a 10-minute unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

"I said something to the ref in French (about Montgomery's apparent goal) and unfortunately he understood French too," Roy said.

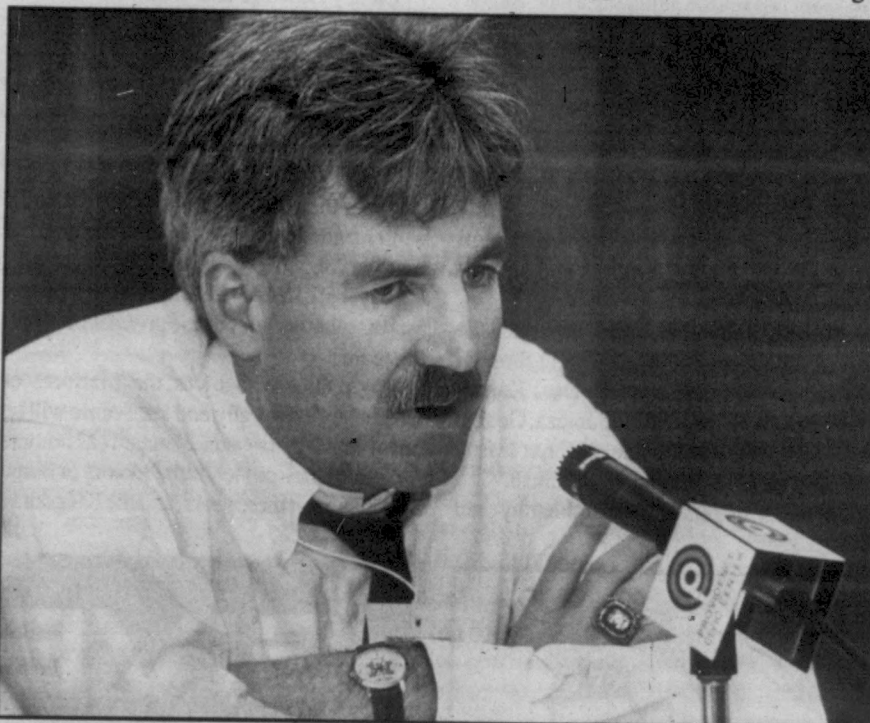

Defenseman Chris Iles did get UMaine back to within one with 2:48 to play in the second when he tipped a Patrice Tardif pass from the left slot through the five-hole on Gilmore.

With 20 minutes to play in the season for one of the teams, UMaine came out flying in the third, bombarding Gilmore with an assortment of blasts and point-blank chances. Unfortunately, the senior was up to the task and turned them all aside. The season had come to an abrupt and unexpected end for the Black Bears.

"It's a sad, sick feeling when you play as well as we did in the last 30 minutes tonight and don't come away with a win," UMaine Coach Shawn Walsh said.

"Give credit to Gilmore though; we had 20 shots in the third period and he played great. Hey, what can you say? That's hockey."

The Black Bears couldn't seem to sustain any momentum in the first half of the game, partly thanks to Burlew, who became whistle-happy after a cleanly played first 10 minutes.

UMaine Coach Shawn Walsh appears stunned following the Black Bears' 3-2 loss to Michigan State in the NCAA quarterfinals Saturday night. (Boyd photo)

Bearcats down MSU 88-57

By Owen Canfield
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Cincinnati turned No. 4 into Final Four.

The 12th-ranked Bearcats, behind the play of Herb Jones and Nick Van Exel, beat Memphis State for the fourth time this season, 88-57, to win the Midwest Regional Sunday and advance to the Final Four for the first time since 1963.

Cincinnati (29-4) will play Michigan in the NCAA tournament semifinals Saturday in Minneapolis.

Memphis State, like Cincinnati a member of the first-year Great Midwest Conference, ends its season 23-11. It was the Tigers' worst loss since 1981, when they lost by 30 to Louisville.

The Final Four trip will be the sixth for the fourth-seeded Bearcats, who went to five straight Final Fours from 1959-63. They lost that last time in the championship game to Loyola of Chicago.

Cincinnati became the first school to register four victories over the same opponent in a single season since Kentucky swept Alabama in 1985-86.

Jones had 23 points and 13 rebounds, helping the Bearcats out rebound Memphis

State by seven. Cincinnati had outrebounded the Tigers by eight per game in three previous meetings this season.

Van Exel scored 22 points and killed the Tigers with his 3-point shooting. He had one in the first half to punctuate a run that gave the Bearcats the lead for good, and added three more in the second half as Cincinnati pulled away.

The Bearcats shot 60 percent while holding Memphis State to 36 percent. In the previous three meetings, which were decided by an average of 11 points, the Tigers shot no better than 43 percent.

Anfernee Hardaway, who made just 13 of 39 shots in the first three games, scored 12 on 4-of-9 shooting. He picked up three first-half fouls and fouled out with 5:28 to play.

The Great Midwest becomes the first conference to send a team to the Final Four in its first year since the Sun Belt did it in 1977 with North Carolina-Charlotte.

Cincinnati looked rattled early, turning the ball over four times in the first 8 1/2 minutes against the Tigers' pressure. Memphis State took a 20-17 lead at that stage, thanks to a 7-2 run in which David Vaughn scored five points.

Michigan upsets Ohio State

By Chuck Melvin
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Fab Five. Final Four. Sounds like a natural.

Michigan's precocious freshmen worked overtime Sunday, beating Big Ten nemesis Ohio State 75-71 behind 23 points and 11 rebounds from Chris Webber.

Webber sent the game into overtime with a powerful followup shot that tied it at 63 with 31 seconds left. The 15th-ranked Wolverines then dominated the extra period, outscoring Ohio State 12-4 over the first 4 1/2 minutes before the third-ranked Buckeyes scored two meaningless baskets at the end.

Jalen Rose scored six of his 20 points in overtime, including two free throws with 32.4 seconds remaining that sealed it. Following Duke's 104-103 overtime victory over Kentucky on Saturday, it was the first time in NCAA tournament history that two regional finals have gone into overtime.

The sixth-seeded Wolverines, the lowest seed to make the Final Four since No. 6 Kansas won the national title in 1988, will play Cincinnati next weekend in Minneapolis.

It was Michigan's first win in three tries against Ohio State (26-6), and it kept alive coach Steve Fisher's dream of a second national championship in four years. Michigan (24-8) won it in 1989 after Fisher replaced Bill Frieder as head coach as the tournament began.

Ohio State's leading scorer, Jim Jackson, collected 20 points but also hurt the Buckeyes with nine turnovers.

The Fab Five, who scored all but two of Michigan's points, survived a 6 1/2-minute drought late in the second half during which they committed four turnovers and squandered a seven-point lead.

Neither team led by more than six until Michigan ran off eight straight points early in the second half for a 47-39 advantage. Webber started the run with a layup and finished it by passing to King for an easy layup.

The margin was still seven after Jimmy King sank a short jumper with 9:30 left.

Then, the Fab Five suddenly began playing like the rookies they are. Ohio State forced four turnovers and outscored Michigan 11-0 over the next six minutes for a 61-57 lead.

The Wolverines recovered in the nick of

AL West preview; Sierra, Rangers head to the topBy Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

After a season in which every team in the American League West finished at .500 or better, they all enter this year believing they can win.

And, after seeing how the Minnesota Twins became the first club ever to go from last place to first, why shouldn't they see it that way?

More than anything, the result of becoming the first division to have all of its teams wind up at the break-even point or better means the AL West is even more wide open in 1992.

Predicted Order: 1) Texas, 2) Chicago, 3) Kansas City, 4) Oakland, 5) Seattle, 6) Minnesota, 7) California.

Texas Rangers

Ruben Sierra, Julio Franco, Juan Gonzalez, Rafael Palmeiro and the rest of the Rangers led the majors by scoring 829 runs last season, and the addition of Dickie Thon at shortstop in place of Jeff Huxton should make them even better.

Franco (.341) won the batting title and teamed with Sierra (.307, 25 home runs, 116 RBIs) and Palmeiro (.322, 26 homers) as a trio of 200-hit teammates; only two other players in the majors reached that mark. Franco, however, has been hobbled by bursitis in his right knee this spring.

Gonzalez (27 homers, 102 RBIs) started in his first full season, Brian Downing (17 homers) is productive at age 41 and Kevin Reimer added 20 home runs.

Chicago White Sox

New manager Gene Lamont inherits a team that hoped Bo Jackson would provide some needed pop. Without him, Chicago still has Frank Thomas and Robin Ventura to drive in runs, but not much else.

There's no telling how good Thomas, 23, will become. Thomas (.318, 32 HR, 109 RBIs) may be the most selective hitter in the majors, and his 138 walks boosted his on-base average to .453, best in the game. Ventura (.284, 23 homers, 100 RBIs) got into a groove, just like the scouts projected.

The White Sox traded pitcher Melido Perez (8-7) to the New York Yankees for second baseman Steve Sax (.304, 31 SB), and he'll team with Thomas, Ventura and shortstop Ozzie Guillen (.273) to form a productive infield. Tim Lincecum (.268, 51 SB) spent last season adjusting a new league and is a year older at 32, while Carlton Fisk (.241, 18 homers) is 44.

Kansas City Royals

The Royals completely revamped their team. Bret Saberhagen, Danny Tartabull, Storm Davis, Kirk Gibson and Kurt Stillwell are out and Wally Joyner, Kevin McReynolds, Gregg Jefferies and several others are in.

More than anything, injuries wrecked the Royals. While the White Sox went through last season without any problems, Kansas City lost Saberhagen, Mark Gubicza, George Brett and Mike MacFarlane all for at least a month. The result was an 82-80 finish.

Gubicza begins this year healthy and joins with Kevin Appier (13-10, 3.42 ERA), Mike Boddicker (12-12) and swingmen Tom Gordon (9-14, 3.87 ERA) and Luis Aquino (8-4, 3.44 ERA) as a good nucleus.

Oakland Athletics

There's no doubt that this is the make-or-break year for the A's. If Dave Stewart, Bob Welch and Mark McGwire return to form and if the bullpen gets the job done, Oakland could win its fourth title in five years; if not, it could be another season of sliding.

Jose Canseco (44 homers, 122 RBIs, 26 SB) and Rickey Henderson (400 on-base average, 58 SB) remain two of the greatest forces in the game. McGwire (93 walks, 22 HR, good glove) is better than his .201 average indicates, but needs to show it. Dave Henderson (25 homers) and Harold Baines (.295, 90 RBIs) round out the offense.

Carney Lansford and Walt Weiss missed most of the season with injuries, and the Athletics could not put together a good left side of the infield. That will be harder now that all-purpose Mike Gallego left via free agency.

Seattle Mariners

After their first-ever winning year and a winter trade to acquire Kevin Mitchell, the Mariners hoped to spend the off-season talking baseball. Instead, the main issue of interest was whether a Japanese group would buy the team.

No matter who owns the Mariners or where they eventually end up, Seattle will be fun to watch this season. Mitchell (27 homers for San Francisco) leads the majors in home runs in the last three years, and the Kingdome figures to improve his total by a few.

Ken Griffey Jr. (.327, 22 homers, 100 RBIs) has improved his average by 27 points every year, and Jay Buhner (27 homers) achieved his power potential. Second baseman Harold Reynolds (57 RBIs, 28 SB) provides solid defense up the middle.

Minnesota Twins

The Twins, more than any other team in majors, show the kind of free-fall flux period that baseball is in. From last place to first place, and back down again.

Because of Minnesota's 11-1 postseason record at the Metrodome, many people tend to think the Twins were a fluke in 1987 and 1991. Sure, the home-field helped, but so did Kirby Puckett and friends.

Puckett (.319, 89 RBIs) became the first American Leaguer to hit over .400 (.406) against left-handers since Sixto Lezcano in 1979, and his biggest blow was the home run off Charlie Leibrandt that won Game 6 of the World Series.

Kent Hrbek (20 HR, 89 RBIs) also provided a big lift. Rookie of the Year Chuck Knoblauch (.281, 25 SB) was solid and smart in his first year.

California Angels

New general manager Whitey Herzog began making changes late in the season, cutting Dave Parker, and once the year ended, Joyner and Dave Winfield left as free agents. Problem is, that left California with even less offense, and trades for aging Von Hayes (.225, no homers in 284 at-bats) and Hubie Brooks (.238, 50 RBIs) won't help.

After Jamaal Brown's 18-footer put Ohio State back up by two with one minute left in regulation, Webber powered for the follow-up shot on a missed jumper by Rose.

Ohio State had one last shot, but Chris Jent's jumper bounced off the rim at the buzzer.

Michigan State ends Black Bear season 3-2

Eighteen penalties ensued in the next 20 minutes, as both sides began a steady procession to the box.

Montgomery had given UMaine a 1-0 lead just 5:39 into the first when he took a Tardif pass from behind the net and snapped a one-timer over Gilmore's blocker.

Norris then evened the score with his first of the night at the 9:33 mark. Peter White was credited with an assist.

MSU broke the tie early in the second, on the power play, when Norris picked up a loose puck in the neutral zone and beat Snow with a backhand while Roy was off for interference.

Smolinski's goal made it 3-1 and the rest was history.

"We just ran into a hot goalie tonight," Montgomery said. "Five more minutes and we would've scored, we just ran out of time."

The Black Bears had 38 shots against Gilmore on the night, while the Spartans peppered Snow with 24.

UMaine ends the season with a 31-4-2 record.

Michigan State goaltender Mike Gilmore turned aside 36 of 38 UMaine shots in the Spartans' 3-2 win in the NCAA quarterfinal match-up at the Providence Civic Center Saturday night. MSU now plays Lake Superior. (Boyd photo)
