TIMBER ON TOWN-FARM.

The pine timber cut amounted to 441,700 feet, and it was sold for $8.65 per M., making $3,820.70. Cost of operating, $539.52; making the timber net the town, on the stump, $3,281.18. In the bill for operating, $25.00 was paid by beef sold from the town-farm, and the farm account has never been given credit for the same. One year ago we sold Mr. Bickford one pair of steers for $35.00, and charged the same on his salary, and the farm account has not been given any credit for the same.

We have had the poplar cut on the farm, taking out what would go for veneering, $17\frac{3}{4}$ cords, netting the town \$133.56. Mr. Bickford has hauled to the main road and piled the remainder of the poplar, $64\frac{3}{4}$ cords, to be peeled and shipped later, as the town may see fit. We could not get the hemlock timber peeled without paying more than was thought advisable.

SUPERVISOR'S REPORT.

In accordance with law and custom, the Supervisor would respectfully submit the following report of the condition and work of the schools during the past year.

Under the present district system, whose merits or defects I will not attempt to discuss, the official responsibility for the welfare of the schools falls largely upon the school agents, for the simple reason that it is their duty to employ the teachers. Upon the selection of the teacher the prosperity of a school mainly depends; a good teacher will do good work placed almost anywhere, while an incompetent teacher will speedily demoralize the best school. It is true that the supervisor is authorized to reject those whom he finds not qualified to teach or to remove those who prove inefficient. But practically he cannot put the standard very high, and usually must pass the candidates engaged by the agents, and allow a school to go on unless absolutely a failure and waste of the money expended. He can undertake little more than some slight oversight of the school-work and some general direction of the studies and methods of teaching; mainly the teacher must be left to his own course and resources. Certainly no amount of supervision can make a first-rate school with a second-rate teacher. Hence the prime necessity for a wise judgment on the part of the agent in the choice of teacher, unbiased by any personal or partisan interest.

Generally speaking, the selection of teachers this year has been judicious. The larger part had already taught several terms, and the good record which most of them had made they have continued to maintain. And those who had little or no previous experience have, perhaps with one or two exceptions, done as well as could be reasonably expected. All things considered, I have been pretty well satisfied with the state and progress of the schools, as I have found them in my visits. And, except in two districts, no complaint from the parents has come to my ears, but generally words of approval and satisfaction. There are two respects, however, in which nearly all of our teachers might much improve their instruction. First, they should more carefully question and test their scholars to make sure that they have a clear and thorough understanding of the lesson, and not be so easily satisfied with the memorizing of words without ideas, and they should give explanation and illustration again and again till the meaning of statements is fully grasped and intelligent thought awakened. In the second place, more time should be given to reviews, especially of important facts and principles. A hasty, formal review, at the end of the term, of the studies gone over is not enough. Every day tests should be made to see that the lessons learned have been fixed past all possibility of ever forgetting. I think that all of our teachers have tried to do good, faithful service, and in no case has the effort failed of some measure of success. Considerable difference among them, however, in experience, intellectual ability, and aptness to teach, has been apparent, as would naturally be expected. It is no easy matter to express a just and discriminating judgment upon the work of each individually, and perhaps it may be as well to do no more than give the names of several, who seem to be worthy of special mention, either as regards instruction or discipline, while saying that some of the others are almost, perhaps quite, as well deserving of such mention. They are Thomas W. Charles, George Haley, Henry C. Stearns, Hattie Abbott, Gertrude Adams, Susie W. Charles, Emma J. Corson, Villa Fessenden, Alice S. Holt, Marion Stearns, and Susan M. Walker.

For text-books there has been expended $65.92. Many of the books now in use are in bad condition and will do little more service. A change in the grammar ought to be made at once, the present book being rather out of date, besides being too hard for most of our scholars. Better black-boards are needed in two or three schools, and a cheap globe and a dictionary for the desk should be placed in them all. The schoolhouse in District No. 12 is badly in need of extensive repairs, and the one in No. 13 is, in its internal arrangements, no credit to that intelligent and worthy neighborhood. The whole number of scholars belonging to this town is 438. Additional facts and statistics will be found in the annexed tabular statement.

B. N. STONE, Supervisor of Schools.
