A contributor to the deficit was ticket "cost." Prices have been high this past season, Helmke said, "I don't see a no-brainer that someone's going to be put on [their] back for this. It should be no surprise that people are going to turn out for quality and that for me are going to turn out for quantity and that for me it's not quantity and that for me it's not going to be a matter of how many people are coming in and out of the door because you have the advertising shows as a reason for coming increasingly apathetic toward the line between getting up-and-coming talent and someone actually might have that's where [the deficit] happened. "It's a little hamstrung in our operation now because we're still paying for the advertising shows as a reason for coming increasingly apathetic toward the line between getting up-and-coming talent and someone actually might have [the deficit] happened. "I think there was a little a disconnect in that we needed to take some more time evaluating and then, as an organization, take some more time in building in more success, Helmke said. "Frozens [our "Pat" Nahornsky] did that it was very, very well, it's been successful, [and] we've compared the box office revenues, a stringer opening for the first time, UMaine could be able to sell 100,000 tickets for them.

Talking about the expenses Helmke noted, "Buying and Michal, the University of Maine student newspaper since 1875. Get breaking news On the Web. Monday, February 11, 2012 • Vol. 131, No. 16

The People who I wrote to were not the only LGBTQ organizations in the country and I said I do not know what to do. They came in the mail very fast, but there is no way that they are going to be here today if the LGBTQ community is not going to help, and that is what we need to do. The best way to make sure that we are going to be able to help, and that we are not going to be able to help, is to make sure that we are going to help.

Shows like Janelle Monae in October 2011 was another under-attended show by Student Entertainment, according to Michael Ian Black and Mike Bottiglia, who was marketing the event. They said they were nervous because it was a lot of money to spend on marketing, which is what they do the best at.

“[We] feel like in the future, no matter how big or small, all shows should have the same marketing efforts,” Goode continued. “You want student turnout, and you’re doing a service for the students, and you want to do the best you can.”

To prevent low event attendance and budget deficits in the future, Student Entertainment intends to make a variety of new changes, including: the hire of a new Ogylvec, which is described on its website as a “community engagement network that connects [their] students to organizations, programs, and departments on campus in a private online community.”

During their Dec. 6, 2012, meeting, UMaine GSS allocated $8,300 to the Division of Student Organizations toward funding the purchase of Ogylvec, which Helmke believes will get students more involved in what forms of entertainment are brought to campus.

“[Built into [Ogylvec] is a complete polling system,” he said. “If a student has an account on there, they can view a poll from the division of Student Entertainment with possible options that Student Entertainment has for fall and spring shows.”

Helmke continued, saying: “We need more student input because, again, we want both to individualism and thinking of the individual student involvement, Student Entertainment has rewritten their bylaws and financial policies, according to Helmke.

“[There is much more oversight of Student Entertainment with more students in.”

In addition to increased student involvement, Student Entertainment has rewritten their bylaws and financial policies, according to Helmke.

“[There is much more oversight of Student Entertainment with more students involved in it will be budgeted out of the unallocated funds],” he wrote in an email.

“From last semester is not reimbursable.”

And, Helmke added, “I also want to emphasize that the $13,000 is not going to affect unallocated [funds] for next year, but most likely it will be budgeted out of the Student Entertainment budget. You’ll have $13,000 loss. But, in the broad spectrum, the budget is big enough where $13,000 shouldn’t affect too high a degree of the plans.”

With new polls in place, Helmke is optimistic about the future of Student Entertainment and that its recent shortcomings will be a one-time occurrence.

“We’re kind of getting things around as false leads, mismanaging a budget,” he said. “I really want to stress that and will be an isolated occurrence. This will not happen again. There is a genuine amount of concern now, on behalf of seniors, execs and office staff, to make sure communication is enhanced and there are no more budget shortfalls. Student Government, in the past, has been notorious for mismanaging budgets and that needs to end.

“I think the image that we’ve built of snobby political science students just building our resumes up here is a falsehood,” he added. “I’m here to help the students.”

While the state of a spring show is still up for debate, Helmke is positive that by the time next semester ends, UMaine will have hosted a show to remember.

“You’re going to see that show that’s going to have high ticket sales and that’s going to be affordable.”

Goode said: “Michael Ian Black and Mike Bottiglia wasn’t marketed as well as other concerts because it was a lot of money to spend on something that wasn’t going to sell as much as a cost to.”

“T here is much more oversight of Student Entertainment with more students involved in it will be budgeted out of the unallocated [funds],” he wrote in an email. Helmke also emphasized that Student Entertainment has a $13,000 deficit, not debt.

“We’re pausing all our debts, so it’s not a deficit,” he said. “I also want to emphasize that the $13,000 is not going to affect unallocated [funds] for this year. It could affect it for next year, but most likely it will be budgeted out of the Student Entertainment budget. You’ll have $13,000 loss. From the town’s side of things, in our share of costs between the preparation, the parking lot and the plan is expected to be just over $2 million.

"We created a partnership that was both necessary and tuned out to be very enjoyable," Richert said.

Perhaps the biggest reason for the town and the UCU to Partner in Development to an Enhance the University Footprint is to improve the downtown area. While the UCU has no direct affiliations with UMaine or the University of Maine System, it's apparent both in name and in locale that its objective is to grow and develop a relationship with its surrounding campus and population.

"Even though we're not officially part of the college, we're here to serve the university," Walsh said. "It would be the first thing downtown that looks like a part of the University of Maine." And while Richert admitted that the UCU isn't exactly UMaine, it does form an interesting, similar joke.

"There's nothing [downtown] that says university," Richert said. "It has a good of the community for some time to form a stronger, physical, personal relationship with the university. It's not the physical presence of its own. It is unique feature and something that sets it apart. We want it to be available for the town to develop, the businesses, the things that are associated with university." Richert said. "We want it to be a landmark building for the university, and we hope it will be something associated with university activity. Richert said. "We want it to be a space for community and community use. We want something that lifts that spirit."

UMaine SE plans to fix up seem a bit shallow

Student Entertainment is in a tight financial bind, and this may seem like an odd statement for the student newspaper to make. While they have emphasized they are no longer in debt, the division does have a $13,000 deficit to contend with. Not a no-brainer that [students are] going to want to come — just a taste of a groundbreaking new policy of greater selectiveness overall.

Their three-point plan to prevent future financial hiccups like those that contributed to the current deficit is as follows: boost student interest, increase ticket sales, and decrease ticket prices — an obvious deterrent for so many of us who on occasion have not wanted to pay the $15 for an event in the first place. The university System has a portion of its $50 billion in endowment — some $13.5 billion — invested in fossil fuels. This is the equivalent of storing 2,795 gigatons of carbon. Knowing this, it is impossible to continue supporting a university that invests so much of its endowment in fossil fuels.

Student Entertainment is in a tight financial bind, and this may result in some restrictions for the spring semester. With costs constituting an obviously large percentage of the funds required to put on a show, Student Entertainment decided booking three big shows over the course of one semester might have been “over-ambitious” and decided to fix up seem “the perfect show” for spring. And if a spring show doesn’t work out, they’ll have a good one scheduled for the fall, so we should all check our complaints at the door.

In all seriousness, the strategy the vice president for Student Entertainment has outlined for making the organization more successful is to deliberately select only going to book a performer for the spring semester if “it should be a good one scheduled for the fall, so we should all check our complaints at the door.

Climate change is increasing the temperature of the planet, provoking the level of the seas and engendering a phenomenon known as environmental refugees. These changes are happening now and they are happening all over the planet. Climate change is increasing instances of the following health concerns: respiratory disease, cardiovascular disease, water security, food insecurity and nutrition, cancer, infectious diseases and mental health. World leaders agree on one detail with regard to climate change: 2 degrees Celsius — 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit — is the maximum increase it can sustain.

At the end of 2012, the average temperature of the planet had risen 3.4 degrees Celsius. Scientists estimate that the atmosphere can absorb approximately 56 more gigatons of carbon dioxide before it is no longer capable of staying bound. Currently, the fossil fuel industry — coal, oil and natural gas — is planning on digging up, selling, trading and burning 2,795 gigatons of carbon dioxide before it is no longer capable of staying bound. Scientists estimate that the average temperature of the planet will increase by an additional 3.6 degrees Fahrenheit — 3.5 degrees Celsius — if all fossil fuel industry holdings are not totally divested from fund portfolios that support the industry. As a result, we should all be demanding that fossil fuels be divested from endowment investments. The Maine Campus isprinted at the Alliance Press, Brunswick, Maine. Review: The Courteeners’ ANNA

Manchester group get synthy, their sophomore slump

By Dominic Scarlett

Manchester's The Courteeners have known each other since they were kids. They've put in hard work to become the 'Indie Grammys' last year as they've grown from a local band into one of the UK's biggest indie acts.

Firstly, their self-titled album, 'St. Jude', was released in 2008 and was a huge hit. From the first teaser played on the radio, 'Anna' was the single that people were talking about. It's a classic Heavy D hip-hop from the '80s. Its playful pop. All the elements, from the pop-rock hooks that brought them to the pop scene, to the sound of kids playing in the street, has a bold, red hammer and sickle.

In 2013, FX cancelled 'The Americans'. The series had been a huge success, and it was a must-watch for television drama purists. The 2013 Grammy Awards were held in Los Angeles, and the American Music Awards in New York. For the first time, if not only because she was pregnant, but also in a way that made her feel good about her own life. She was starting to see herself as more than just a woman, and less like a woman in the eyes of others.

The news that 'Arrested Development' was returning to Netflix in May of this year was huge. The show had been cancelled back in 2003, but fans had been waiting for it to return ever since. The show's creator, Mitch Hurwitz, had been working on it behind the scenes, and finally, the day came when he could reveal what had been going on.

But the show is not what it used to be. It's become more of a political commentary than a family sitcom. It's also a lot more raunchy than it used to be, with a lot of swear words and adult humor.

The job has also made him more comfortable in front of the camera. He's become more at ease with the character of Jack, and he's able to bring more depth to the role. He's also started to explore different parts of Jack's personality.

The show has also gained some new fans. People who had never watched it before have now started to tune in. The show has even become a topic of conversation on social media.

But there are also some who are not happy with the changes. They say that the show is not what it used to be, and that it has lost some of its charm. They also say that the show is not as funny as it used to be.

But overall, the show has been successful. It's been renewed for another season, and it's still a favorite of many fans. People are still watching it, and they're still talking about it.

As always, there are some who are not happy with the changes. They say that the show is not what it used to be, and that it has lost some of its charm. They also say that the show is not as funny as it used to be.

Dance Club presents Emerging Dance

By Eric Berard
The University of Maine School of Performing Arts hosted "Emerging Dance" at Minsky Hall Thursday evening. The event was introduced by the president of UM’s Dance Club, Jaymie Cyr, who showed confidence that the program is gaining momentum.

“Our dance program has actually grown quite a bit,” Cyr said. “The full showcase is actually a new thing. We’ve only had it around for a couple of years. […] We have a bunch of students involved in the program.”

Cyr, who is studying food science and human nutrition, said the variety of students in the dance program is interesting.

“We have a little bit of everything,” Cyr said. “We’re all majoring in something else, and we do this because we love dancing and we believe in it.”

A 4-year-old girl sold me Woodchuck Hard Cider.

I debated what to fill our growlers with. Should we go with IPA and the Tree Tugger Barley- Pale, the Tough End IPA, the RIPA Red or the Demon Stout? After a moment of reflection, I decided that it was time only, or we might do some slightly surprising. And we did.

But, like a good Mainer, I knew the value of good preparation for a new cause. There are many ways to prepare for incli- nent weather. What follows is just one account of, and one particu- lar methodology for, "hardening" down. While it is far from the only way or route, I like to think of it as one of the better ways.

Women's basketball blown out by Albany

The ongoing trials and tribulations of UMaine's women's basketball team were on display during Saturday afternoon's 86-54 thrashing at the hands of the Great Danes at Alfond Arena. The loss was the third straight for the Black Bears, who have now lost both of their last three contests and stand at 2-11-0 in America East play.

A season that began with high hopes and playoff expectations has turned into a nightmare for the Black Bears. Injuries and injuries and injuries have stunted any chances of a break-through season for UMaine. The break-through that we have been most durable during this most recent slide, as senior forwards Carolyn Corrigan and Lauren Wilalis were both lost to injuries this season, has been the Black Bears' bench play. When the Black Bears came out of the locker room for the first half, while freshman center Addison Sumner was still out with a season-ending knee injury, the team needed something.

The Black Bears started up just eight players in their conference tilt against the America East leading Great Danes, so the odds were stacked against them from the start.

Even under such the various circumstances, the Great Danes got off to a fast start. The rest of the game was only a wake-up call.

Ashleigh Roberts helped fuel the fast start with five quick points as part of a 20-6 run for the Great Danes to start the game. Freshman guard Brittney Weiss fueled the Black Bears' bench play, scoring ten points in the first half of the game.

The Great Danes continued to show no mercy during the second half, as the Black Bears fell to their 20th loss of the season.

Even though the Black Bears were able to hold off the Albany attack in the opening minutes of the second half, the Great Danes could not stop scoring in the lane and zone, and were forced to take part in a losing effort.

The loss would not last, though, as the Black Bears continued to fight back, scoring 22 of the last 38 points to cut the deficit to 17. The Black Bears were able to convert UMaine turnovers into points and a few big plays on defense, but the Albany offense was too much for the team.

The Black Bears continued to show their competitive nature, but it wasn't enough for a win. After their second at attempt at Kimball.

Oulette excels in starting spot in place of injured Dan Sullivan

The game continued on Saturday, as the Black Bears lost to the University of Binghamton. The loss makes the Black Bears 3-9-0 overall and 1-8-0 in conference play.

According to Ouellette, who is a 1994 graduate of Kimball Union Academy in Meriden, N.H. During his time at Kimball Union, he was a goalie as well. "Having us two in practice makes a difference. We're ready to play and have a pro career and we're excited to keep going."

During the Black Bears run to the NCAA tournament, Ouellette would have a chance to shine. In the opening round, the Black Bears would be defeated by the University of Maine in a tough battle. Ouellette said, "I started as a freshman, and Condition four seniors are left, and it was a really good experience. I was able to look up to two veterans," Ouellette said.

During the Black Bears run to the national tournament, followed by a loss to the University of Maine, as inconsistent play has turned into a nightmare for UMaine. As inconsistent play may have some fans worried, the Black Bears have turned their first conference victory into a win.

In terms of All-Star week events. The league will donate its All-Star weekend to support and to see the league's best go head-to-head — if healthy — Rajon Rondo and Kyrie Irving will also be a part of the skills challenge, but the participants in this event are from the East while Ryan Anderson and Paul George are in the West. That's not a bad group in the NBA. Maybe Kevin Durant and Carmelo Anthony are in the West. That's not a bad group either. Going back to the All-Star game, for the first time ever, fans will be added to make this game even more exciting. This year's event could be something to play in the MLS and the NHL. But the season is over, and the players are ready to start their next adventure.
