Women’s hockey takes Quarterfinal series against Boston

The University of Maine Black Bears [19-13-5], re-)turned to the ice Friday, Feb. 20 to host the Terriers of Boston University (14-17-6) in the first game of the Hockey East Quarterfinals. Maine won all three of the previous games against BU this year with two wins coming on the road and one at home. Starting in goal for the Black Bears was second-year goalie Carly Jackson (15-10-5). Across from her was fifth-year goalie Conner Schroeder (10-7-6).

The Bears got off to a solid start early when first-year winger Joffrey Engström picked up a loose puck and put it past a down-and-out Schroeder. The goal was reviewed for goaltender interference but was upheld. Later in the period the Black Bears went up two after second-year center Tereza Vahlinova picked up a loose puck in front and roofed it. This goal was also reviewed but upheld. Before another minute, fourth-year winger Cath- erine Tuft stuck another past Schroeder. This goal led to three goals. Schroeder was pulled following the Black Bears’ third goal and fourth-year goalie Christopher Bell took over in net for Boston University. Fifth-teen seconds later, BU’s forward forward Nina Ruggles was able to beat Jackson to cut the lead to two. The Terriers finished the period leading in shots 11-6.

Less than a minute into the second, first-year can- cer Michele Wests best her opposite at the 200-yard mark. Jackson made a breakaway with a chance to go up two. O’Reilley had other ideas, and made a spectacular save with 10 minutes from O’Reilley to go in the period. Maine received a penalty for too many players on the ice. On the ensuing power play, fourth-year center Victoria Bach was able to beat Jackson, picking the top right corner to cut the lead down to one, making it 3-2. Black Bears. Boston University continued to lead in shots after two peri- od.

Maine began the third period on the power play. After Boston University’s second-year defenceman Shannon Scarpino picked up a hooking penalty with 52 seconds to go in the period. During the power play, Bach went on a breakaway after picking up a loose puck in the neutral zone, but was shut down by Jackson. Maine went on the power play again shortly afterward but again wasn’t able to capitalize. With a minute and a half to go, Boston University pulled its goalie, but wasn’t able to pull one past Jackson as the Black Bears went on to win 3-0. Maine also took a series lead 1-0.

Total shots were 33-23 in favor of Maine.

Seeking to take down the #1 team in the country, the Black Bears and their fans knew it would take a full effort from the players and fans to get to the next round. The Black Bears' defense was able to prevent any breakaways from either team, and the offense was able to score two goals in the first period, one in the second, and one in the third.

The Black Bears were well-prepared for this game and were able to come out on top. Despite being down 4-2 at one point in the game, they were able to fight back and even the score. The Black Bears then went on to win the game 5-4, proving that they are capable of taking down any team in the country.

The next game will be against the University of Massachusetts Lowell, and the Black Bears will be looking to continue their winning streak.

Fire destroys home of five UMaine students

Second-year Liz Therault looks at her house after the fire.

On Friday, Feb. 23, five University of Maine students lost their home to a fire. Firefighters from Old Town and the surrounding areas responded to the house on Streater Avenue around 1:30 p.m. Friday afternoon. They suspect that the fire started from the dryer, but have not issued an official cause. Luckily, no one was home at the time of the fire and it was able to be contained and extinguished. But not before the entire house was destroyed. Everything that the students did not have with them was destroyed in the blaze. The house was being rented by three journalism students and current writers for the Maine Campus, second-year Olivia Shipsey, Liz Therault and Harley Bryant, along with second-year Casey Bernoch and Ian Fernold. These students have received support from many different sources. UMaine has offered them dorms to stay in and free dining plans for the week following, to help them eat and sleep until they find a new home. The Red Cross was also at the scene of the fire offering assistance, according to WABI.

The most notable help, though, has come from one of their former professors at the university, Josh Roland met Shipsey, Therault and Bryant through an introductory level journalism class. He started a GoFundMe page to help raise money for the students to support them moving forward.

Roland wrote on the page, “They are absolutely amazing students and people, and they lost everything they didn’t have with them at the time of the fire. When I asked them what they needed, they informed whether or not I still had extra copies of the 2016 Election Day newspaper they made during our intro to Journalism course they look in their first semester in college.”

The GoFundMe page was shared by friends and family members of the five students and as of Sunday morning it had raised $2,335 from about 40 different sources.

People wishing to donate can do so on the page at https://www.gofundme.com/student-journalists-house-fire.

On Friday, Feb. 23, the University of Maine’s Rising Tide Center hosted an event titled, “Tell Me The Truth: Exploring the Heart of Cross-Racial Conversations” in the Wells Conference Center. The talk was led by Shay Stewart Bouley, writer of the story “Black Girl In Maine,” and executive director of the Community Change Inc., and Debdy Irving, author of “Waking Up White” and a racial justice educator and writer. The two have been friends for around four years and have toured around various places in Maine to host intimate conversations regarding the subject of having interracial conversations as well as a dialogue between the guests in attendance. There were about 65 people in attendance.

Susan Gardner, the director of the Women’s, Gender and Sexuality Studies program and director of the Rising Tide Center opened the event with some remarks about her work. “The mission of the Rising Tide Center and the Women’s Gender and Sexuality Studies program is to foster a better understanding of and work toward an equitable environment both on campus and in the world. This talk was provided as a reminder that in order to do such work, it begins with open ears, an open mind, and an open heart.” She then left the crowd with a quote from the late Glenn Ira, “Change comes from listening, learning, caring and conversation.”

The University of Maine hosted renters fair to help match students with apartments.

The University of Maine’s annual Renter’s Fair took place on the bottom floor of the Memorial Union this past week. On February 21st and 22nd, recruiters from a variety of different student housing complexes gathered to seek out potential tenants among the student body.

The event was co-sponsored by the University Credit Union, handling the registration and set-up.

Tentatively, the event was scheduled to stop at 1 pm today, but was extended due to the large turnout.

Many students expressed excitement about the availability of new housing options.

The Renter’s Fair is an annual event that provides an opportunity for students to explore different housing options in the area and make informed decisions about their living arrangements.

The event was well attended, with a large number of participants present.

This year’s event featured over 15 different housing providers, including off-campus apartment complexes, live-in learning communities, and on-campus residence halls.

Students were able to visit each booth, meet the representatives, and learn about the different housing options available.

The event was promoted widely on campus through social media, email blasts, and posters throughout the university.

The feedback from students and housing providers was positive, with many expressing satisfaction with the event and its potential to improve the housing situation for students.

The University of Maine continued to work towards providing affordable and accessible housing options for its growing student population.

1. Maine governor Paul LePage speaks about how an 18-year-old should be allowed to make his or her own decisions as an adult during a talk that was being noted by the University/Lawrence republicans on medium.com

2. Lindsey Moran Contributing Writer

"You have the responsibility to shape the future of the state," says, the mate of Gov. Paul LePage during the speech he gave on Wednesday, Feb. 21 in the Donald P. Corbett Business Building at the University of Maine. Concerned with Maine’s aging demographic, the governor discussed everything from forgoing student loans debt and the national drinking age to the ways in which he intends to make Maine a business-friendly state before he term expires in January 2019.

Gov. LePage started the evening off-vocing his opposition to a new bill but only being proposed by heavyweight democrats like Senator Diane Feeney of Calhoun, but also sponsored by Republicans such as Jeff Flake of Arizona, that would raise the legal age at which adults can buy rifles, such as the AR-15 rifle. He never mentioned the words "gun" or "gun control," but instead alluded to theinciocerrances in legislation as they apply to 18 and 21-year-olds in his words, "This line denies you the ability to purchase a legal idift,"

He discussed the $5 million bond bill he proposed, which would require young people incentive to stay in the state upon graduating from an institution of higher education and joining the workforce.

"We should be doing everything we can to attract young people to this state. Young people have to have the ability to invest in their own net worth," LePage said.

The governor cited his purpose for this bond as "keep Maine people in Maine," while attracting young people and investine from all over the United States. In order to address the economic unfeasibility of an aging and shrinking workforce, LePage has pro-poted a tax credit for businesses willing to help new employees pay off their student loans.

In his final State of the State address, the governor said, "We can invest in our young people by reitering the burden of student debt for those who want to stay in Maine or choose to relocate here and start their professional careers."

"Students of today are the leaders of tomorrow. You need to be involved in the world you’re going to live in. You need to think about who you are sending into the legislature," the governor said, "[Explaination] do not think about our elderly, they do not think about our youth. They think about spending money.

The governor visited the University of Maine amid the controversy surrounding his ascension that Assicate Justice Joseph M. Jabar failed to honor an agreement between him, the governor, and the Maine Constitution’s sepa-nation of power when he issued a moratorium on new wind farm permits.

Gov. LePage received a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, finance and accounting from Husson University before earning a Master of Business Administration from the University of Maine. His personal career began in Skowhegan, Maine, where he served two terms as city councilor. He was then elected mayor in 2003 before running in the gubernatorial election in 2010. He remained in office after his speech that he greatly favors us as political leaders like Abraham Lincoln and former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Antonin Scalia.

"I am what you call a reformer. I’m not a politician," the governor said at the end of the brief question-and-answer portion of his visit.
University of Maine history professor Nathan Godfried gave this week’s letter as part of The Student and Marston Studies Series, a weekly talk given since 1988. Godfried is a specialist of 20th century American history with a focus in the history of mass communication, American labor history, and film history. Godfried’s presentation was titled, “Better Dead than Red: The History of Red-Baiting at the United States.”

The talk began with Godfried explaining the history behind his subject of discussion. The presentation has been driven by by other historians, however, his own work focuses on activism in the media during the mid 20th century. He also talked about how during the 1930s, the “reds” were those that identified as socialists, communists, anarchists, and communists. In 1917, there was a radical upsurge in public and government that came and went the way of the Paris Commune.

Godfried then delved into the anti-Crusades and the diverse nature of those who took the place. The anti-red supporters believe that socialism and communism are both a system and unquenchable evil that was vascular beyond law and reason as well as foreboding influences that have resonated through time. There were also three major instances of red in which they took place. The red scare of 1930, the Red Scare of 1940, and the McCarthy scare. The first Red Scare emerged after World War I and it was an anticommunist movement that spread across the U.S. and involved Russia, which had undergone the Bolshevik Revolution, where they established a communist government that withdrew troops from Russia during the war. The U.S. believed that Russia had let down their allies, including the U.S., by withdrawing from the war. Also, the theory of communism an ideology spread through the revolution and the belief was that the working class would overthrow the middle class. According to the Ohio History Central website. The Age of McCarthyism was known for the practice of accusing people of subversion or treason without enough evidence, and it was traced back to the previous U.S. Senator Joseph McCarthy.

Godfried mentioned the Second Red Scare. It spanned from 1947 to 1955 and included political repression and the spread of fear through campaigning with Communist influence. Some common phrases that are associated with McCarthyism include paranoia and hysteria, as well as overreaction to threats without action. Godfried also mentioned the importance of not dismissing these events. He added that the process of demonization does make it easier for people in power to retain their power. With that comes the importance of looking at everything in its context, understanding that there are reasons why certain groups were red-baited over other groups through concrete economic and social situations.

Some examples of reasoning that Godfried mentioned throughout his talk the American Left, which started in the aftermath of WWII. During this effort, there were gross economic efforts made by the Red Army with the Chiang Kai-shek for commodity and labor and for advancing patriotic goals. Their ways of practice and self-identify with the American people were many, but one of the most important was the spread of radicalism in Europe, and the group was originally funded by the New Deal and Morgenthau. The membership, which is hard to get into, was not the most well known and included a variety of political and philosophical ideologies. The organization did manage to seep away from political statements, but became involved in countercultural activities. The Maine Peace Action Committee is one of the sponsors of these talks. The group meets every Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the Virtue room of the Maine Building. Doug Allen, a professor of philosophy at UMaine asked students in attendance to consider attending these meetings. Currently their biggest topic is to look at the issue of gun violence, how to approach situations that arise that lead to acts of violence.

Allen also encouraged students to consider adding to the mirror in Socialist and Marxist studies. The mirror is in the course catalog and is constantly being updated. To get more information on the mirror, Allen recommends stopping by his office in the Maine Building or scheduling a meeting.

Guns from A6

The Parkland shooting that feels more desperate than ever

The shooting at a Florida high school, which killed 17 people and injured 17 others, is a reminder of the ongoing epidemic of gun violence in the United States. The Parkland shooting is just one of many mass shootings that have occurred in recent years, and it highlights the urgent need for meaningful gun control legislation.

Human trafficking: The sale of your women in your own backyard

According to the U.S. Department of State, human trafficking is a crime that affects millions of people worldwide. It is the exploitation of another human being through force, fraud, or coercion, with the intent of obtaining some form of economic benefit. Human trafficking is a global problem and threatens the human rights of people of all ages, genders, and backgrounds.

Many victims of human trafficking are vulnerable because of their age, gender, or social status. Traffickers may use violence, intimidation, or threats to control their victims. They often force victims to engage in illegal activities, such as prostitution or forced labor, in order to obtain money or other forms of remuneration.

In recent years, there has been an increase in the number of reports of human trafficking in the United States. This is likely due to increased awareness and efforts to combat this issue. However, it is important to note that many cases of human trafficking go unreported, and the true numbers of victims are unknown.

It is crucial that we work together to prevent human trafficking and support its victims. This includes raising awareness about the issue, providing resources for survivors, and holding traffickers accountable for their actions.

#NeverAgain and gun regulation in America

The #NeverAgain movement is one way in which people are fighting for gun control reform. This movement, led by student survivors from Stoneman Douglas High School, is a call for action against gun violence and policies they believe are responsible for such tragic events.

The movement is based on the idea that those who have lost loved ones to gun violence are strong enough to demand change. The #NeverAgain movement is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit in the face of devastating loss.

The movement is also a call to action for those who have not personally experienced the trauma of gun violence. It is a reminder that we all have a role to play in creating a safer future for ourselves and our loved ones.

In Conclusion:

It is crucial that we continue to work towards a future where gun violence is no longer a threat to our communities. This requires a concerted effort from all levels of government, as well as individuals and organizations across the country.

We must also recognize the role that gun manufacturing and sales companies play in perpetuating the cycle of violence. These companies have a responsibility to ensure that their products are not being used for harm.

Finally, we must support survivors and their families, and we must hold accountable those who have contributed to this crisis. The #NeverAgain movement is a testament to the power of collective action and the strength of the human spirit in the face of adversity.

The struggle against gun violence is not over, and we must continue to fight until we achieve lasting change. Together, we can create a safer future for all Americans.

UMaine students share their travel stories through a library pane

"Be smart with your time management. Focus on what matters. As a freshman, you are studying abroad in the first place," said Katie. "So, do some research and find out more about the city and area."

As the students shared their travel stories, they were captivated by the audience, and their experiences were shared with enthusiasm. The event was a huge success, and the students were proud to share their stories with others.

"I learned about the life in Iran and the Middle East. I decided to do something that is about and the influences of my country." Indeed, the ancient music-making skills and re-technique techniques, as well as the Persian love for the instrument, taught them much.

Planning and brainstorming for future events and performances, members of the club hope to see it grow and expand as they take on different projects and host events. The club continues to host meetings every week and do what they love, and the members feel that their hard work and energy into making it successful is paying off.

"The Guitar Club here at UMaine is a fun way to get to know other people who love music and playing guitar as much as you," first-year student Kathryn said. She serves as the secretary of the club. "Because college is hectic, and sometimes as a musician I don't get to practice and play as often as I'd like, it's nice to have a set time blocked out in your schedule where you know you can just relax and play music," she said.

Second-year student Amanda Darvishi Kent formed the group a little bit later in the first semester of her freshman year. "I wanted to create a fun, stress-free environment where music was the center of attention. We've always wanted to join a guitar club, and I saw that our school had an

“Stupid F*##king Bird” breaks the fourth wall while addressing pertinent social issues

By Sivan Lopiansky, Staff

On Friday, Feb. 23, the audience of the theatre actually had a chance to encounter life itself as director, producer and lead actor Mohammad-Reza Maraghi presented a show that brought together music, acting and social commentary. "Stupid F*##king Bird," a musical/monologue, is a project that he has been working on for almost a year and a half. The show is a commentary on the clash of values that are often present in our society, particularly in the Middle East.

"The show is a reflection of the current reality and the challenges that we face as a society," Maraghi said. "It is a commentary on the limitations of the current political system and the struggle for freedom and equality."

The show began with a scene where a character, played by Maraghi himself, is seen on stage, addressing the audience directly. He talks about the political landscape of Iran and the struggle for freedom. The character then begins to play a guitar and sings a song that is both musical and political.

The audience was engaged throughout the performance, as Maraghi's powerful voice carried his message to the listeners. He used humor and satire to highlight the absurdities of the political system, and the audience responded with laughter and applause.

"The show is meant to be a reminder of the importance of freedom of speech and the right to express one's opinions," Maraghi said. "It is a call to action for all of us to stand up for what we believe in and never give up our fight for freedom."

The show ends with a powerful monologue where Maraghi speaks about the importance of education and the need for a new generation of thinkers and leaders who can bring about change. The audience was left with a powerful message and a sense of hope for the future.

In conclusion, "Stupid F*##king Bird" is a unique and powerful show that addresses important social issues in a creative and thought-provoking way. It is a must-see for anyone who is interested in political commentary and musical theatre.

Black Bear baseball splits series with Ohio University

Contributor
The University of Maine baseball team (2-4) traveled to Emerson, Georgia to take on the Bobcats of Ohio University (4-4) in a four game series from Feb. 23-25. This was the first ever that these teams have faced off against one another. The Black Bears came into this series 10-16-1 against current Mid-American Conference schools. In Game 1 of the series, the Black Bears did the Bobcats 5-1.

Starting on the mound for the Black Bears in Game 1 was fourth-year Justin Courthey. Last season, Courthey made a team-high 15 starts, going 4-9 in nine games. He threw the team’s best ERA of 3.92, while hitting a team-high 15 batters.

On the mound for the Bobcats was redshirt fourth-year Galya Salsal. Last season, he was a member of the MAC tournament championship team and made 17 appearances and two starts.

In the first inning, the Black Bears came out hot and put up three runs when third-year Jeremy Honeycutt found a hole on the left side of the first pitch of the game to give Maine the early lead. Then third-year Danny Casals hit his first home run of the game, increasing the lead to five. In the bottom of the third, the Bobcats cut the lead back to four when second-year Tanner Pitch- erick hit a double, followed by a single from third-year Devon Derosa. Redshirt second-year Nick Bradson then drove in a run to make it 5-1. In the top of the fifth, the Bobcats cut the lead back to one when first baseman Nick Karslida, who induced a grounder that resulted in a double play to end the inning. In the bottom of the sixth, the Bobcats loaded the bases in favor of Maine, with one out. Then made another pitch change, putting first-year Brett Marcin on for his college debut. After nine innings, the Black Bears held on to win 5-1.

Baseball splits doubleheader

The University of Maine baseball team (2-4) traveled to Emerson, Georgia to take on the Bobcats of Ohio University (4-4). In the second game of the doubleheader, the Black Bears and Bobcats split the games, winning 3-2 and losing 5-3.

In the first inning, Ohio took an early lead when Pitcherick made a double to the left, which resulted in a run. Then Peter Panitz, the Bobcats’ leadoff hitter, led to two more runs to increase the lead to three. In the bottom of the first, the Black Bears got on the board of a SAC fly, 3-1. Bobcats. The Black Bears then put up a 2-0 run in the bottom of the second after an RBI single to make the score 3-2. In the top of the second, third-year Trevor Holter doubled home the fourth run, making it 4-2. Then, third-year Treyden Funderburg hit an infield single, which resulted in another run, 5-2.

The second game would end 7-4 in favor of the Bobcats, tying the series at 1-1.

Black Bears down Ohio Bobcats 3-2 in third game of series

In Game 3 of the doubleheader against Ohio University, the Black Bears were looking to take a lead in the series. The Black Bears doved the Bobcats 2-1.

The starting pitcher in Game 3 for the Black Bears was John Beal. On the mound for the Bobcats was redshirt second-year Michael Klein. Last season, Klein was a member of the tournament championship team, while missing 14 starts and going 5-3 with a 3.48 ERA. In the first inning, Ohio took an early lead when Pitcherick made a double to the left, which resulted in a run. Then Peter Panitz, the Bobcats’ leadoff hitter, led to two more runs to increase the lead to three. In the bottom of the first, the Black Bears got on the board of a SAC fly, 3-1. Bobcats. The Black Bears then put up a 2-0 run in the bottom of the second after an RBI single to make the score 3-2. In the top of the second, third-year Trevor Holter doubled home the fourth run, making it 4-2. Then, third-year Treyden Funderburg hit an infield single, which resulted in another run, 5-2.

BU Head Coach Brian Druker liked the way his team played and the exception of the first period.

"We brought the team's performance," Druker said. "We didn't come out of the gates with the first handful of minutes and really didn't get it in the last 10 minutes. We gave them some really good, grade A chances and Erin O'Neill did a super job of keeping the game 3-2 and giving us a chance right at the end." Druker was optimistic about the team's chances for the second game of the series.

"We have to do the same thing we've been doing for a white on row, try to play a good defense and keep our offense coming from Rebecca Durocher (fourth-year goalie), Victoria Bach and Nora Thores.

Those were exuberant players and very good players who didn't wanna play in the series in Boston again to get it in the same way and steadily. I'd love to see one of our other two first lines a way to get a goal. That'll be important for us because they're our home team and they're going to want to see the game out tomorrow," Druker said.

The University of Maine Black Bears (2-0-3, 1-1-0 America East men's baseball team traveled to the Tsongas Center in Lowell, Massachusetts to play against the University of Massachusetts-Lowell River Hawks (11-7, 4-6 in America East) Wednesday night in Lowell. The Bears played, Maine finished 67-68 in two weeks to watch that saw a lead change. The Black Bears struggled at the end of both halves.

"I thought I played pretty well," said Druker, "I was able to control rebounds, I was able to see a lot of shots, go up and down and it was really fun to get there again.

She was also happy with her team's performance.

"I think the way we played was back and we battled really hard. I think that's a big thing for us because we have three quick ones. We got another goal back before the first period and continued to knock it back throughout the game and 3-2 and give us a chance right at the end." Druker was optimistic about the team's chances for the second game of the series.

BU opened the scoring just over six minutes into the first period. Bach let go of a shot that didn't go in and Kastner couldn't stay out of the box but managed to get all three penalties he deserved. The period came to a close with 16 shots fired in by both sides. The first period was as close as the teams got, as the Bears took the 1-0 lead into the second period and put an end to the worries of Black Bears fans.

The Black Bears resumed play on Saturday with game two of the best-of-three series against the Terriers.

BU evened up the series, 2-1, with a 3-2 win against the Terriers on Saturday afternoon at the annual Terrier Invitational in Maine. The first period started with a game played, Maine finished 67-68 in two weeks to watch that saw a lead change. The Black Bears struggled at the end of both halves.

The Maine Black Bears (16-14-4, 7-1-2 America East) traveled to Chestnut Hill on Saturday afternoon to take on the Eagles of Boston College in the final home game of the season. Maine entered the game with a 9-2 all-time record against the Eagles and a 4-0 record all-time at the Heights. In the game, Maine got off to a hot start, as the Black Bears took the lead in the top of the first inning and never looked back. The Black Bears went on to win the game 5-2, and will now take on New Hampshire in the regular season finale on Sunday afternoon.

As the end, as the Black Bears defeated the University of Albany on Friday, Feb. 23, 2018, in a decisive 83-51 win at the ambulance facility, the team could claim the first half of the season with a record of 13-5. Albany would carry a 27-29 lead into halftime while leading the Black Bears in terms of field goal percent (53.8 vs. 41%), rebounds (23 to 15) and the number of turnovers and points scored. Maine held the edge in points in the lead at 16 to 10. The Great Danes came out of the locker room strong again as four-year seniors Jayson Joseph and Derick Tice, who closed out the first half with 21 points, continued their pace to put the team back on the board by adding another lead to 10 points in a quicker tempo than a minute into the quarter that then, somehow, slipped. Maine and Stoney Brook would take turns stuttering Frequires down, not letting her do anything. "They played me the first half, they played me the second half and they played me the first half, they played me the second half and we just let me get my hands on the ball, we couldn't see the screen. That took a big part of my game," Frequires said.

Second-year guard McKenica Tracy gave Albany their biggest lead of the night by making a dagger to put the team up 31-25. After a layup by Sullivan, Tracy found Fresquiere to increase the lead back to 16. The two teams would battle back-to-back, with Albany leading 56-54. If it was 12 point deficit with 10 minutes to go so extreme, our ears were like we were struggling Fresquiere in the game. "We weren't getting the stops we needed. Once we started stopping them, they had to switch to play man defense, and that's when they struggled to stop us. We were able to start cutting into their lead, from 16, to 14, even 12 points gap, it was a big game." Then it's a two possession game. The team never feels like we're out of it," Vassar said.

As Maine pulled ever closer, the crowd got louder and louder. The noise was deafening at the end, and the collective hearts of Black Bear nation sank as second-year guard Julia Brossbach's 3-pointer at the end of regulation edged out the second set. Maine would go on to overcome Albany 83-51 in overtime as Brossbach hit two of the biggest shots of the game from beyond the arc following a pair of free throws from first-year guard Dari Sar.

Maine, not projected to finish very high in the pre-season poll, has shocked everyone with a 13-5 record. They've a testament to what the coaching staff has put in place.

"Amy [Vassar] has done a great job with what she has, a great job with what she has," Maine Coach Joe Hafer said on the sidelines. Maine is 5-3 in the conference, with regular-season games against the University of Maine, the University of Southern Maine and the University of Maine.

Second-year third baseman Tracey Delatte, who made eight appearances last season with four starts, has added 9.3 hits and 1.248 slugging percentage. The Maine black bears lost 3-2 to the Black Bears and 3-2 to the Bobcats.

In the top of the ninth, the Bobcats made a two point lead and were up, 14-14, into the thirteenth inning. "It's a huge game. It's a huge game. We're not going to let them have it tonight," Maine's coach said.

the two of them, but a person who has been involved in the game for a long time, he really wanted to rejoin the coaching staff because he felt it would be a good opportunity for him to leave behind the head coach of the Islanders.

Wheeler has also decided to bring in someone new to his coaching staff, but everyone is keeping it a secret for now.

This year, the Black Bears have decided to bring in a new head coach, and they have chosen a person who has been a part of the university for a long time.

The Red Sox finally made the long-awaited free agency move and offered a two-year contract to Dustin Pedroia, who is expected to make a big impact for the team. In December on Monday, the team signed outfielder Andrew Benintendi for $10 million contract. Marcell enters agency as one of the top targets in free agency, and he is coming off a career year with the Brewers. Benintendi has hit .304 with 10 home runs in 47 games, and he has a .353 batting average (ADG). Marcello will be joining the void of a much-needed lead-off hitter that Boston has not had all of last season. He is a solid player, and some people are hoping that he will bring some much-needed presence to the team. His projected lineup includes Mookie Betts, right field; Andrew Benintendi, center field; Hanley Ramirez, first base; Mitch Moreland, who would probably hit behind Benintendi in the lineup and batting third; Rafael Devers, third base; Eduar- dor Vazquez, catcher; and Jackie Bradley, Jr., center field. Most of this lineup should be set in stone, with the question marks being on the bottom half of the batting order.

With football season having ended three weeks ago, most sports fans have turned their attention to another sport: basketball. The Boston Celtics have had a great season so far, but they are looking to improve and win the NBA championship. Boston has been one of the top teams in the league for most of the season.

Boston has been able to maintain their success because of balanced scoring. They have three scorers: Al Horford, Marcus Smart, and Jayson Tatum. These three players have been leading the team in scoring throughout the season. They have been consistently putting up double-doubles, which has been key to their success.

The team's defensive play has also been a major factor in their success. They have been able to shut down some of the best scorers in the league, which has helped them to win close games. They have a deep bench that can come in and make a difference in the game, which has been crucial to their success.

The team is currently 38-16 in games played, which is good enough for a .672% winning percentage. They are currently ranked 2nd in wins, 3rd in losses, 4th in points scored, and 1st in defense. They have scored 113 points per game and allowed 107 points per game. They have a 14-4 record at home and a 24-12 record on the road. They have won 20 of their last 25 games, which is an impressive streak.

The team is currently on a six-game winning streak after defeating the Toronto Raptors last night. They have won two of their last three games against the Raptors, which is a good sign for their upcoming series. The Boston Celtics have a tough schedule ahead of them, but they are looking forward to the challenge.

leaves three years ago. With the team's new head coach, they are looking to make moves to improve their chances of winning the Stanley Cup. They have already made some changes, such as trading for a top-six forward and signing a new goaltender. They are looking to make more moves to strengthen their team before the trade deadline.

The Red Sox appear to be entering the season with a set lineup. Expect them to make some changes, but this team has all of the firepower to make a deep run in the playoffs. Another player to keep an eye on is Devens, who is expected to bounce back after a disappointing season. They should be a force to be reckoned with come October.
