UMaine student wins Miss Maine USA 2020

Julia Van Steenberghe, a current Univer- sity of Maine student was crowned "Miss Maine USA 2020" on Nov. 10. As a fourth-year el- ementary education and child development and family relations student, education is at the forefront of Van Steenberghe’s val- ues. She is an active member of the UMMe community as she is involved in a number of on-campus activities with a primary focus on helping others.

Van Steenberghe is a member of the UMMe chapter of the Student Maine Edu- cation Association. She also is involved in Greek life as a member of UMaine Alpha Phi, Order of Omega. Van Steenberghe works at the UMaine New Bal- ance Student Recrea- tion Center, where she holds positions as a manager and group leader ambassador. She also works for UMaine admissions as a tour guide and a stu- dent ambassador.

Van Steenberghe recognizes the support and opportunities that UMMe has provid- ed her along her jour- ney to becoming Miss Maine USA. "The opportunities I have taken advantage of while being a student at the University of Maine have helped me grow as a student, leader and individual," she has learned from ev- ery moment during my undergraduate career," Van Steenberghe said.

Van Steenberghe has always been a consistent leader, es- pecially throughout her four years in high school. Hailing from Old Town, she had a job deliv- ering newspapers for the Penobscot Times growing up. She attended Old Town High School and graduat- ed with honors in the class of 2016. Throughout all four years of high school, Van Steenberghe served as the student council class president, and partici- pated in athletics. She participated in both track and cheerlead- ing, during her final year at Old Town High School she was named captain of the cheerleading team. She got a first-place victory at the State Class B Championships.

One thing that sets Van Steenberghe apart is her drive to take on new challenges. Van Steenberghe’s initial intent for entering the pageant realm was to challenge herself both physically and mentally. Pagets, diseases which have not been a part of Van Steenberghe’s life until last year when she participated in her first pageant ever, Miss Maine USA 2019 and won first runner-up. After winning first run- ner-up, Van Steenberg- ghe became inspired to run again in 2020. "I wanted to be a voice and an inspira- tion to others prov- ing that a person can achieve her goals, no matter what they are," Van Steenberghe said.

When discussing the process of become- ing Miss Maine USA 2020, Van Steen- berghe explained how hard she worked in many parts of her life to earn the title. "I learned the di- rect correlation between one’s mental and physical health," Van Steenberghe said. "The physical prepa- ration taught me the importance of balance. The mental preparation allowed me to grow as an individual and be- come sure of who I am and what I stand for."

Through the dura- tion of the year that Van Steenberghe holds the Miss Maine USA 2020 title, she will have a number of ob- ligations and duties to fulfill. Volunteering is a large portion of ful- filling her duties. Van Steenberghe plans to spend time at the Run- ald McDonald House, which is an indepen- dent nonprofit organiza- tion working towards children’s health care accessibility. She also plans to read to chil- dren in her free time, alongside working for Camp Sunshine. Camp Sunshine is a camp created for children with disabilities and illness and their fami- lies, located in Casco, Maine.

Subsequently, Van Steenberghe plans to participate in the Na- tional Miss USA 2020 competition, which will be aired on Fox. "It is incredibly sur- prising that I don’t know if I will ever ‘hit me’ a lot," she said. "I worked hard to earn this title and I am excited for the upcoming year," Van Steenberghe said.

The Maine Campus

On Thursday, Nov. 21, the University of Maine faculty held a forum to discuss general education requirement changes. The forum was co-sponsored by the Maine Black Bear Exchange, a community food bank located on the UMaine campus. The forum was designed to give students a better idea of what courses they are required to take, as well as how to address these changes. The forum included discussions on the importance of general education requirements and how they can be thought about in a more comprehensive way.

The state of Maine has made progress in a partnership with the state’s farmers’ markets to make farmers’ markets more accessible to those who are enrolled in a food assistance program with the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry. The Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry has been working with farmers’ markets to help pay for the transportation of fresh produce to the markets more accessible to SNAP participants.

Nov. 16 - 10:15 p.m.
UMPD received a call from RA staff in Cumberland Hall and was called to a room to assess underage students who had been caught with alcohol in the dorm. Three guests were found in the room, all of whom were minors. The guests were transported to the UMPD station, their parents were called and they were referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

Nov. 16 - 1:00 a.m.
A UMPD officer was on patrol in Somerset Hall and noticed the odor of mariju-
ae. The officer stopped a student near the door, the officer noticed open beer cans. All of the students and guests in the room were under 21 and the student was found in the dorm. The student was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

The contestant, Jessica Garsed, answered “Omaha Steaks,” rather than including the “s” at the end of the steaks. Omaha Steaks re-ponded in a tweet that the contestant was not identified. The Secret Service was called to the Oxford Hall by RA staff and was notified of a no-trespass order. The juveniles were given a no-trespass order. After an investigation by UMPD, it was found that the resident whom the motion was assigned to had left campus and allowed friends to use his room. The resident of the room was re-fed to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

Nov. 16 - 11:54 a.m.
While a UMPD officer was on duty in the state of Maine, the Officer was vio-ced in another conduct coupled with a student down the hall from the incident opened their door and was holding a beer. The student was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee. The incident was under 21 and all residents and guests in the room were referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

A UMPD officer was on patrol in Somerset Hall and noticed the odor of mariju-
ae. The officer stopped a student near the door, the officer noticed open beer cans. All of the students and guests in the room were under 21 and the student was found in the dorm. The student was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

The contestant, Jessica Garsed, answered “Omaha Steaks,” rather than including the “s” at the end of the steaks. Omaha Steaks re-ponded in a tweet that the contestant was not identified. The Secret Service was called to the Oxford Hall by RA staff and was notified of a no-trespass order. The juveniles were given a no-trespass order. After an investigation by UMPD, it was found that the resident whom the motion was assigned to had left campus and allowed friends to use his room. The resident of the room was re-
fed to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

Nov. 16 - 11:54 a.m.
While a UMPD officer was on duty in the state of Maine, the Officer was vio-
ced in another conduct coupled with a student down the hall from the incident opened their door and was holding a beer. The student was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee. The incident was under 21 and all residents and guests in the room were referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

Nov. 16 - 8:00 p.m.
UMPD was called to Hart Hall and notified of profanity graffitied on the wall, the second-floor stairwell in sharpie. The perpetrator was not identified, and UMPD is continuing to pursue the case.

The state of Maine had previously passed a motion that would implement a polystyrene ban for the statewide benefit. Bangor has pushed for a motion that would indicate that Bangladesh’s ban on polystyrene was not only beneficial for the environment but also for the local economy.

The state of Maine has made progress in a partnership with the state’s farmers’ markets to make farmers’ markets more accessible to those who are enrolled in a food assistance program with the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry. The Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry has been working with farmers’ markets to help pay for the transportation of fresh produce to the markets more accessible to SNAP participants.

The contestant, Jeffery Sanders, was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee. The bill was referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee. The incident was under 21 and all residents and guests in the room were referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.

Nov. 15 - 10:15 p.m.
UMPD received a call from RA staff in Cumberland Hall and was called to a room to assess underage students who had been caught with alcohol in the dorm. Three guests were found in the room, all of whom were minors. The guests were transported to the UMPD station, their parents were called and they were referred to the Student Conduct Code Committee.
Editorial: Holidays don’t have to be the most stressful time of year

As the most stressful time of the semester approaches, many wait anxiously for the much needed time off from school that comes with Thanksgiving break. Yet for many others, Thanksgiving break also serves as a time of a whole new source of stress; food, family gatherings and home life are not always happy and well-coordinated. This year, try to approach this five-day break with a positive mindset.

Holidays usually2 happily the busiest holiday of the year, even though many people actually spend their time wondering how they are going to survive the holidays and make it to the end of the month. To keep your mood positive, take time to be grateful, remember your blessings, and be thankful for all that you have.

The whole foundation of the November holiday is the practice of giving thanks. Today, this is often lost in translation and replaced with a superficial level of self-centered gratitude. Gratitude has been scientifically proven to increase levels of happiness and decrease rates of depression. It is too easy in the day to focus on the negative side of things, like rude family members, miscommunication and extra homework assignments for classes. Practicing gratitude is a way to fight the “negative triad” of life; it’s a look, a symptom of depression that creates negatives views about the self, the world, and the future. To combat this, practice writing in a journal every morning and list the few things you are grateful for.

Going home for the holidays with a day of indulgence can also be quite beneficial. For the next few days off from school, it is also time to slow down and take care of your self. Every day, take the time to think of one small activity that you can do to help your self relax and regain a positive mindset. This can be as simple as starting to feel overwhelmed, give yourself a physical rest by removing yourself and reconnecting in the quiet of your own company.

Many people feel that Thanksgiving means required time with family and can be tiring. To keep family members related by blood. It is important to spend time and be grateful for the family you do have, surrounding yourself: a day of silence andHolidays with a few minutes when you start to feel overwhelmed, give yourself a physical rest by removing yourself and reconnecting in the quiet of your own company.

When you remember to take care of yourself, self will actually help you to foster the mindset needed to meet all of life’s demands. This tip also applies to Thanksgiving day itself. Every individual has a unique family composed of different sizes, generations and ideas as they can be overwhelming. Answering the same questions over and over about your studies, your friends, or your family can cause anxiety and an overall negative mood. Remember that it is fully acceptable to take time and encourage to help your self relax and regain your positive mindset. This can be as simple as

The popular coffee chain announced earlier this week that they will be doing away with “dou-ble-cupping” their iced and frozen beverages.

The chain will be phasing out the use of styrofoam cups and replacing them with a more environmentally friendly and biodegradable and compostable alternative.

The practice, which has become a longstanding business operation, has gained considerable popularity primarily in New England states. This decision was confirmed first in Rhode Island, where the state passed a ban last December.

A spokesman for Dunkin’ predicted that the use of styrofoam cups in their stores will be fully phased out as early as this coming January, not in all stores at once, but on a worldwide scale.

At current rates, Dunkin’ expects to reduce the waste produced by the use of disposable plastic cups by a degree of 95%.

Each year, an annual report published by Dunkin’ reveals that over one billion styrofoam cups are used across their U.S. and international locations. This means Dunkin’ could include the 3,500 international branches. Styrofoam cups, made out of the material polystyrene, are non-degradable, and take over 500 years to begin breaking down. This problem is compounded by the fact that styrofoam cups that are currently in landfills and as well as in our oceans is a threat to the environment.

In Dunkin’s banning of styrofoam cups, a larger issue is brought to light.

The most significant consequence of Biden’s age is shining through the primary. It is unfortunate that the fact that Biden is an old man is so unstintingly a factor in all the debates, as it is ultimately only a minor stumbling block. It is, however, a problem and what we need to face up to.

For a time, this outrage was directed at the plastic straw.

Friendsgivings: thank you, Millennials

When I decided to sail with Seasmester this fall, I knew it was going to be an adventure to say the least. I'm a sailor whoaboats most of my life, growing up with my uncle and now I work as a deckhand on a nature cruise in Acadia National Park every summer. However, having experience making day trips on powerboats is a bit different than actually being on a working, all-crew ship, the only real place that separates the deck area, called the “fo’c’s’le” (for being forward). The “fo’c’s’le” is a family sharing experience I’ve never really had. It’s a commonly-celebrated Thanksgiving, at least in terms of how we do it in our own family’s Thanks. For sharing an average enemy of the performance. The students, the crew and sometimes dining room, that separates the room into some form of refuge being the best space. For living like “folks-hole” said the Atlantic explains. As a group that includes young children, men and women, that Thanksgiving isn’t, this year, if that’s where you are when November 25th rolls around. But the holiday, love it or hate it, is always almost improved by adding in a sailing Friendsgivings some examples of this), and a meal with your uncle or grandparent might fall anywhere on the spectrum from unpleasant to traumatic. There are also plenty of other explanations for the rise of Friendsgivings, though some of them are also related to generational differences. The Millennial generation, for example, tends to get married and have children later than generations prior. For a group of people in their late twenties might not consist of families with young children, but rather a handful of single friends who just want to gather for a meal and a good time. And, as the article from The Atlantic points out, for those who are childless or unmarried, it’s easy to understand that the most important people in their lives may be their friends.

I'm not saying that Thanksgiving isn't, for many, an enjoyable holiday and a time to be thankful for family because it certainly is if that’s where you are in life when November 25th rolls around. But the holiday, love it or hate it, is almost always improved by adding in a sailing Friendsgivings somewhere along the line.

When Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation in 1863 de- claring a “Day of Thanksgiving and Prayer,” he began an annual tradition of gathering with one’s family to eat a hearty meal and give thanks for all that we appreciate in our lives. However, it’s hard to imagine that Abe would have predicted the rise of a sub-holiday from this proclamation. Yet here we are, in 2019, gathering around a smorgasbord of food with our friends, roommates, and sometimes dining room, that separates the room into some form of refuge being the best space. Students perform difficult jazz pieces in concert

The sweet sound of jazz fills Minsky Hall on Tuesday, November 19 when the UMaine Jazz Ensemble performed a showcases an outstanding performance.

Nolan Altvater has made both learning and working on his favorite subjects a skill a big part of his work. He is also a member of the Penobscot Confederate. Being a Native American is an essential part of his identity and is related to the work and research he does with tutoring and teaching.

Altvater, a third-year English and second-year education student, is currently enrolled in ENG 205, English in the Workplace, the prerequisite course a student must pass in order to become a tutor in the UMaine Writing Center. This course has already benefited Altvater in the ability to explore the many ways in which he wants to work as a tutor as well as be involved with Native American communities in Maine.

"I took a tutor, but the professor gave us a lot of choices beyond tutoring. I'm doing a lot of research with tutoring right now; I'm doing research on campus with Native American Youth in Science Program (WaYS). So, I'm working on science and that's part of my major. But, I also want to use that and exploring ways to relate those to each other."

Altvater explained. "(WaYS) is a program rooted in science but it is Native American scientific methods so a lot of it has to do with oral storytelling and oral discourse, so that is also implementing tutoring. Using those (practices) to make it more accessible to Native American students is my main goal."

Through WaYS, Nolan has been connected to a number of opportunities around the university including a recent research project done in conjunction with the Penobscot Nation and UMaine's neuroscience and music. A new project, "Analog to Jazz," was a project that involved exploring ways to take that Native American music, at the water quality station, and the communications and science departments here and, to do with educational teaching and research skills to benefit WaPSi people. "I moved away from my reservation when I was little so I didn't have much contact with Native American family or the culture," Altvater said. "But when I came to college I had the opportunity to take the WaYS program which I've really helped me find that native identity that was still inside me."

This self-realization coupled with his community-oriented research has given him the opportunity to broaden his horizons and approach ideas regarding Native American identity. "Through the work of that research, there are two ways that different communities could learn from each other," Altvater said.

Altvater was awarded the Margaret Chase Smith Policy Center award for policy-relevant research for his work with the different groups and was presented as "Covering Traditional and Western Scientific Methods to Highlight Penobscot Sovereignty."

Attending UMaine has allowed Altvater to work with these large forces in his life, his Native American identity and how to use his educational, teaching and research skills to benefit WaPSi peoples. "When I heard that the director was playing Titania and her son was playing as Hippolyta, also played by Christie, is shown as she was righteous by the Quetzal, which made up the theme of the show. The displays were open the public at the Centennial Museum in Texas from April 13 to 15 of the year. "To create a complete experience, we designed an interactive experience where kids can see what it’s like to be out of the tent, so they can see the art as being upfitted. That freedom is represent by the Quetzal, which birds that will be flying in the room, because like the birds the kids were able to feel free of our cage,” said Yolanda Luna, associate professor of History at the University of Texas at El Paso. "Uncaged Art" signifies the resilience and hope that the young individuals somehow maintained while being separated from their families and far from their homes. The power and its effects were the focus of the show. In the opening scene, Hippolyta, also played by Christie, is shown in a lighter box of a cage. The walls of Athens, gender roles are conformant with the ‘norm’ of the time. Men held all of the power, and women were subordinated. The decision to have Hippolyta in the box furthers the dichotomy of gender and power within the city.

The University of Maine football team took the field for the last time this season at the University of New Hampshire, in the highly anticipated Border Battle over the Black Bears. Maine, who took the NCAA’s playoff spot last year and made a deep playoff push, sits at fifth in the conference, with James Madison sneaking ahead at 11-1 to take the division crown.

The problems started immediately for Maine, and a multitude of miscues buried the Black Bears over the course of the afternoon. First-year quarterback Joe Fagnano and fourth-year wide receiver Ear- neal Edwards, Maine’s second-half offensive threat, was shut down early in the half. Fagnano dropped back to pass, and the Wildcats sent the ball on first down, and Edwards was tackled by fourth-year corner Isiah Prince Smith, who took the ball 27 yards for a touchdown.

The third quarter came to a close, and with a plethora of tal- ented players graduate- ing, including the school’s all-time receiv- ing yardage leader, Edwards, look for Charlie’s squad to get back on track.

Both teams traded punts to end up clock time, but with six seconds left in the half, the game New Hampshire drove down the field on multiple chunk yardage plays, including a 36- yard completion from Fagnano to fourth-year wide receiver Malik Bush. The sport of Ultimate Frisbee, professionally known simply as Ultimate, has been a fixture of backyard games for years, but it actually got its start on a high school campus in New Jersey. Back in 1968, a group of students at Columbia High School put together the first set of rules and began playing the sport. After that, the game’s popularity started to grow on college campuses in the area and continued to spread throughout the world. Fast forward to today, and Ultimate can be anything from a backyard pastime to a sport played on the highest level in the world. Ultimate started to gain popularity around the country, and in 1975, the game was played for the first time at the Olympics. Since then, the sport, especially the Ultimate Frisbee variant, has exploded in popularity around the world.
Thankful for a look at past and future Thanksgiving NFL matchups

It’s that time of the year again when every group travels to gather for their favorite football teams to collect on turf, put on their best, and paw through mashed potatoes and more. Thanksgiving is synonymous with Thanksgiving is Thanksgiving Day football, in part, high school, college, and in the NFL. Many small towns hold games, where the nation wakes up early, go to their town’s high school football games, and on their team against a rivaling town. The teams clash, and the nostalgia for the War is as they may be their final step in the process. It results in an exciting game, which perfectly encapsulates their memories. That holiday in brings about. After watching the aflates on the field, families get together again when every- year and some older families get together. AMERICAN EAST MEN’S BASKETBALL

AMERICAN EAST WOMEN’S BASKETBALL

Be nice to animals!
The Maine Campus

1. New England Patriots
   Sunday afternoon’s game against the Eagles was a tough display for the Patriots’ offense. Josh McDaniels had to go into the bag of tricks and have wide receiver Julian Edelman throw for New England’s only touchdown of the day. However, the Patriots’ defense got their revenge from Super Bowl 52. After the Eagles’ early 95-yard touchdown drive, their following drives ended in a series of punts, a fumble and a turnover on downs to end the game. New England’s defense bounced back after having run over by the Ravens.

2. Baltimore Ravens
   Going into the week, it seemed like the Ravens and Texans matchup could have been the game of the week. We were expecting a shootout between quarterback Lamar Jackson and Deshaun Watson, similar to the one we saw in 2016 when the two faced off in college in which Watson and Clemson University, quarterback Deshaun Watson, lead the University of Alabama in a thriller. This game was a Baltimore touchdown to end the opening kickoff and the Texans were never really in it after a questionable no call for pass interference on wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins in the end zone. The Saints remain one game out of the AFC’s first seed.

3. New Orleans Saints
   The Saints bounced back from last week’s hiccup against the then 1-7 Falcons. Drew Brees tossed three touchdowns, and wide receiver Michael Thomas caught eight passes for 174 yards and a touchdown. Thomas has more catches, amounting to 94, than all of the Philadelphia Eagles receivers combined who only have a total of 93. The defense picked off quarterback Jameis Winston four times and sacked him twice. With the Panthers’ loss, the Saints have a stranglehold on the division and are currently third in the conference.

4. San Francisco 49ers
   The 49ers needed their offense to get the job done in a shootout with Arizona, and Jimmy Garoppolo answered. Garoppolo threw for 429 yards and four touchdowns, however, he did have two bad interceptions. The 49ers’ offense relies heavily on their run game but the team couldn’t buy a yard on the ground against Arizona, with their running backs combining for 19 carries for 34 yards. The 49ers needed Garoppolo to win the game for them, and did, albeit in a flawed fashion.

5. Seattle Seahawks
   The Seahawks will come off the bye week and travel to Philadelphia in a game that is pretty much a must-win game for the Eagles, who are now 5-5. Quarterback Russell Wilson and the Seahawks are coming off a huge win against the 49ers and are competing for the division. They seem to have the momentum over their opponent. Wilson is also competing for MVP as it has become a sprint between himself and Baltimore Ravens’ Jackson.

6. Green Bay Packers
   The Packers are coming off their big win over the Chiefs in Mexico City on Monday Night. Patrick Mahomes and the Chiefs did not go their way either, as quarterback Kirk Cousins reverted to 94, than all of the Philadelphia Eagles receivers combined who only have a total of 93. The defense picked off quarterback Jameis Winston four times and sacked him twice. With the Panthers’ loss, the Saints have a stranglehold on the division and are currently third in the conference.

8. Kansas City Chiefs
   The Chiefs delivered a big win over the Chargers in Mexico City on Monday Night. Quarterback Patrick Mahomes caught five touchdowns in the game and is competing for MVP as he has become a sprint between himself and Baltimore Ravens’ Jackson.

9. Houston Texans
   The Texans had a call go against them early in the game when Hopkins had a clear pass interference that should have given the Texans an early lead. After the review did not go their way either it seemed like they let that call kill them and it was all Ravens after that. Watson could not get in a rhythm, throwing for only 169 yards, zero touchdowns, one interception and was sacked six times.

10. Dallas Cowboys
   Quarterback Dak Prescott continues to make his end of the bargain taking more power come the end of the season, putting up 319 yards, 1 rushing touchdown and three touchdowns. The defense put their foot in the ground at halftime are 0-99 in the second half of the game in the loss column. The Saints bounced back from last week’s hiccup against the then 1-7 Falcons. Swift, who added to his already strong season with 10 carries for 103 yards, pacing the Buffaloes' offense. Georgia has an easy state game against the University, on the other hand, could afford a loss in the SEC championship and more than likely only qualify for the College Football Playoff as the No. 4 seed. Other teams that are on the outside looking in, such as Oregon, will be pulling for Louisiana State University to come away with a win over Georgia as they have already lost a game.
