vis-ion of fat-ry-land's shore. In won-der they gazed at the ba-by with mother's blue eyes, Like an an-gel just loaned to the moon, And the stars on that soft night in June. Said the .oy to his earth, How the star shone the night of its birth? Love and joy to their sweetheart so true, "There's a lit-tle star shin-ing for you!" home it did bring, Now the moth-er to ba-by does sing, blue, love, And when you're a-sleep, It will twinkle and peep From a-bove like your own eyes of blue; — It will guide you a-way from all harm love, O'er your life it will cast a sweet charm, love, And you can't go a-stray, By night or by day While that lit-tle star's shining for you!" There's a you!"
