

Forestry Club

We ain't there yet?!

AGHHH!

Kevin tries his hand at pulp throw during the Spring Fling festivities.

Forestry club made great strides over the past year in accomplishing its objective of meeting the needs of the hard working, dedicated men, women, and wildlifers that grace the pages of this book.

Students were able to break the tedium of poring laboriously over endless mountains of books, maps, fir, and feathers to courageously risk life and limb in many perilous and often painful pursuits.

Donning hardhats and wielding only innocuous kitchen brooms they took to the frigid ice; grad facing undergrad, stumpee facing rabbit ranger. Survivors from Winter Carnival qualified for canoe jousting at Spring Fling. Student and faculty softball teams went at it at Fall Field Day. Other wild life and wild times included caterpillar rolling and forester-wildlifer pyramid building.

Also this year, athletic foresters teamed together for volleyball, softball, and basketball. And mountains of books were exchanged for mountains of blowdowns when the Forestry Club waded through their annual work trip to Whitecap.

On the more scholastic side (but not too much more!), John Nichols flew in to broaden horizons with a talk on helicopters in forestry and world traveller Director Knight donned his "chairman Mao" cap to share his experiences on his trip to China. Also, the ubiquitous Ed Brown came in to explain how the Forest Service cleaned up after Mount St. Helens' tectonic belch.

All things considered, Forestry Club provided an educational and wicked good time.

Now that's Italian!

This dive should give me a 10!

Whitecap Mountain

Again during October break, Dr. Field led a crew of energetic Forestry Club folks to beautiful Whitecap Mountain to maintain the Appalachian Trail. We cleared blowdowns and clipped brush on a 10-mile section south of Whitecap this year. Along with seeing the beautiful views from Hay Mountain and West Peak, and scrambling around Screw Aggar falls, we experienced the first snowfall of the year and enjoyed the luxury (?) of sleeping in waterbeds! The Forestry Club, offered one of 2 10-mile sections of the A.T. to maintain, opted for the section north of Whitecap Peak. We plan to make an annual jaunt during October break for work and play in the mountains.

Is this what they do on these "work trips?"

Well, it was dark when we set up the tents. . . .

SENIOR NITE

This gala occasion, co-sponsored by the Forestry Club and Alumni Association, is an evening of skits, slide shows, awards, revelry! Just bring your imagination, creativity and nerve. Watch as 100 Nutting comes alive with the scene of portrayals of faculty by students and students by faculty. Between skits, door prizes are drawn, and the awards are given to deserving (or undeserving) students.

The highlights of 1981 Senior Nite included the Woodsmen Team Beauty contest in which contestants adorned in stylish dump coats left the audience in fits of hysteria. Skits allowed the audience to experience a Dr. O'Keefe lecture and Dr. Griffin at summer camp.

Each Senior Nite is unique and filled with surprises—did you ever see anyone ride a bicycle down the aisle in 100 Nutting? This is an “anything goes” evening where everyone participates (even the audience is sometimes volunteered).

If you enjoy acting, laughing and being crazy this is an event you don't want to miss—and you don't have to be a senior to attend!

Now y'all know what the answer is, don't 'ya!

The Wildlife Society

The University of Maine Student Chapter of the Wildlife Society is one of many individual chapters of The Wildlife Society located throughout the country. The Wildlife Society is a professional organization of individuals in the wildlife or related fields concerned about the conservation of natural resources. Our student chapter provides an opportunity for students to learn about the profession outside the classroom and to meet with professionals and other students.

During the past year the chapter has sponsored a whale watching trip out of Northeast Harbor, the annual game banquet, as well as speakers, films, and workshops. Other activities in the past have included an ice-fishing derby, photography contest, hawkwatching at Beech Mountain, plus field trips to Schoodic Point, Mt. Katahdin, and Hirundo Wildlife Refuge. In February, a group of students will be travelling to the State University of New York for the Northeast Wildlife Society Conclave. We will be participating in the 14th annual Wildlife Bowl which the University of Maine has won for 11 years and hosted twice.

Some of our speakers have included Dr. Robert Giles, Professor of Wildlife Management at Virginia Polytechnical Institute; John Jensen, Executive Director of The Nature Conservancy; Dr. Stephen Kress from the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology; and Dr. James Applegate from Rutgers University.

The Student Chapter of the Wildlife Society is a very active organization, and our membership is open to everyone.

Environmental Awareness Committee

Dear Sue and Ellen,
 You were very nice. You know a lot about nature. I think our group should thank you for surviving the trip and not falling back. I hope you come back sometime.
 What I really would like to thank you for is all your time and patients. Sorry we all didn't stay with you! You will never know how much you taught us. Your friend
 Tony Ferraro

The Environmental Awareness Committee (EAC) is a committee under the Wildlife Society that offers students interested in natural resources and education the opportunity to use their skills in presenting programs to the community. Throughout the year, students take slide programs and movies to school classes, scout groups, nursing homes, and other groups.

This fall was unusual in that EAC took the semester off to revise all of its programs. However, with the coming of spring semester, EAC was back in full gear!

Several special activities that are being worked on include training Oliver, a barred owl, to be used for classroom demonstrations. A nature trail is also being designed that will be built behind Hill-top Complex.

Organizational Fair: Yep, that's a real bear claw.

Mark McCollough

Society of American Foresters

As the summer drew to a close, and the school year loomed close, everything happened at once for the student chapter of SAF. First of all, Mary Gaudette, our chairman, got a Co-op job with IP and Dan Simonds, vice-chairman, took over. At our first meeting, just two days into the semester, we chose Doug Fox and Mary Richards to represent us at the national convention in Orlando, and recruited people for the booth at the Common Ground Country Fair coming up in just three weeks.

After much mad organization and literature assembly, a crew went down to the fair and manned an information booth that informed woodlot owners about various concerns in forest management. We ate some organic food, talked to lots of people, had some fun, and learned a little bit, too.

After four days in Florida Doug and Mary came back with tans, slides of rollercoasters, a first place trophy for the Maine Forester, and some valuable insights into forestry. Modelling their Mickey Mouse ears, they shared their experiences with us. Jim Esden and Jim Ward from IP gave a demonstration of pre-commercial thinning using Swedish clearing saws.

As the spring semester begins, the chapter begins a new year in a closer association with the Forestry Club, under the leadership of chairman Mike Hammond. Planned events include more workshops (chainsaw, ax, hand-saw), a more active fuelwood committee, and a possible education program with the 4-H.

I thought we had a red maple!

Mike Hammond (chairman) lends an ear.

Forest Products Research Society

The student chapter of the Forest Products Research Society was very active in the past year. We journeyed far and wide to attend meetings, travelling to Burlington, Vermont for a conference on wood energy and going to Lebanon, New Hampshire for a meeting on composite products. We also had four speakers come to UMO. Dr. Jerome Saeman, former Deputy Director of the Forest Products Lab in Madison, Wisconsin, talked about wood energy. Dr. Zerbe from the Forest Products Lab also talked about wood energy, and Dave Fergus from International Paper in Tuxedo, New York talked about reconstituted wood products (or how to make something out of nothing). This fall, Mike Cyr from Seven Islands Land Company in Bangor spoke on whole tree utilization at a well-attended meeting.

We had a lively time (or should I say "rocking") raffling off a rocking chair that was donated by Moosehead Manufacturing Company. Other events included a reception for Paul Messier, Bob Seymour and Mary Dyer, and the organizational fair. We are currently planning for more speakers, more fun, and of course another chair raffle.

This is my board. I'm going to build myself a new apartment.

Xi Sigma Pi

Xi Sigma Pi, the forestry and wildlife honor society, traditionally means more than just one of several projects and services provided by this group. Student services available within the School of Forest Resources include maintenance of an exam file, tutoring, and a pre-registration information table each semester. Each spring Xi Sigma Pi organizes a scholarship banquet, at which various student awards, as well as the Distinguished Faculty Award, are presented. Other events this year included an afternoon tea reception for John Bissonette and Al Kimball, and a Christmas party for the faculty and their kids.

Tom Gallagher-Secretary/Treasurer, Steve Miller-Forester, Sandy Clark-Ranger, Jim Coleman-Associate Forester.

UMO Forest Fire Attack Team

When was the last time we had a forest fire at UMO? You say you can't remember! Well, neither can I, but if we ever have one the UMO Forest Fire Attack Team will be right there to handle it. No doubt you've heard of UMOFFAT around Nutting Hall, so I'd like to take a few words to tell everyone about us.

How'd we get started? About six years ago a certain professor named Charlie Williams, schooled down south where fire is a common forestry tool, came to UMO. During his short time here as a Forestry instructor, he started the Fire Crew to try to educate the natives. The Fire Crew consisted of about six people, Charlie included.

This Fire Crew was an obscure but devoted bunch. They had a few prescribed burns and tinkered with the equipment. Mostly it was a way for these "good'ole boys" to get away from the books.

Well, Charlie left for greener pastures, er forests. He did leave behind a few devotees, namely Jim Esden and Pete Tracy. The Fire Crew made like a black bear in the winter and hibernated.

In the fall of '80, Jim and Pete decided to see if there were any coals under the ashes of the Fire Crew. They stirred up a meeting one night in Nutting, and the response was overwhelming, especially to Jim and Pete. These forty or so people were the end of the old Fire Crew and the beginning of UMOFFAT.

Today UMOFFAT has about 60 active members, constantly training and still trying to get away from the books. In the last two years UMOFFAT has undergone Red Cross First Aid and CPR training, fire suppression training from the Maine Forest Service, and has conducted several mock fire training exercises.

UMOFFAT has improved and added to its equipment inventory thanks to the ingenuity of its wheelin', dealin' faculty advisors, Tom Brann and Al Kimbal. Recent additions include a six wheel drive tank truck, an additional pump (we now have three), and new hose. In addition, UMOFFAT lit the Student Senate on fire with their recent official club status approval. Next year we'll blow a little more smoke at em' and maybe they'll cough up some funds.

What's in the wind for UMOFFAT? There's talk of a new pole barn to store our recently acquired equipment, all with a little assist from Roger Taylor. Training is planned with the Brewer Fire Department. Another mock fire is in the offing, along with some prescribed burns by the paper companies. In planning is a permanent summer crew. If we can put this crew together, it can expect extensive training and close work with the Maine Forest Service.

That's about all the room I have to tell you about UMOFFAT. It has a solid core of dedicated individuals gaining valuable practical experience in organization, fire fighting skills, and leadership and most importantly, they know how to get along with others as a team. These things will never be listed in the UMO course catalog. But when the work is done, we have fun. Watch for our bulletins.

Woodsmen's Team

Until 1976 the UMO Woodsmen's team was just that—a woodsmen's team. Since then our team of gals has been chopping and sawing their way to the top and is presently one of the best women's teams in competition. The men's team, led by Don Barrett, has upheld a grand record since February of 1981 when they captured the title of Northeast Intercollegiate champions at Canandaigua, New York. They haven't lost a meet since.

As well as meet competition, the team enters the "Real World" occasionally to demonstrate their skills to the public. This year's performances included demonstrations at Mattawamkeag Wilderness Park, Baxter State Park, and the UMO Mall on Parents Day.

The team is open for membership to anyone on campus who wants to join a hard-working, fun-loving group. The Woodsmen's (and Woodswomen's!) Teams strive to keep alive the tradition and demonstrate the art and way of life of the Old Woodworkers.

Winter Carnival

The falling flakes of snow set the mood Friday night for the beginning of Winter Carnival weekend. The lobby of Nutting was alive with fiddle music and twirling, foot-stomping people as the Marsh Island Band tried to teach foresters and wildlifers new steps at the bopping contradance. They cut the rug from 8 to midnight. On Saturday night, a few diehards got together around some flickering flames at the Stump Dump bonfire to warm-up for the broomball game that night. About 70 students and 35 faculty/graduate students braved the cold and wee hours of the morning for a brutal match at Alford Arena. With many star broomball players, the game was exciting. The students reluctantly conceded the game to the faculty/grad students with the final score 4-2. Some wildlife came in from the cold to observe the game and were emitting strange moose-like noises. Sunday was planned for an ice-fishing derby and outing at Pushaw Pond. Unfortunately, most people spent the day at home nursing bruises and aching bodies from the night before at Alford.

Let's show these guys how it's done out West!

Swing that gal!

Unique Activities

Many individual students in the School of Forest Resources have participated in unique activities. These activities form an important piece of the professionalism puzzle and should be considered by all students. Tim Rensema, a senior in forestry, was one such individual who journeyed to the forests of Australia this past summer. The following is an account of his trip.

Australian Forestry

Forestry in Australia is viewed as an occupation requiring specialized education and training in the areas of forest management, engineering, wildlife, and other related disciplines. The education is provided by state universities and the Department of Forestry at the Australian National University in Canberra, Capital Territories. Upon graduation, occupational opportunities exist inservice with the state forest commissions, the national government, or with private industry. Once out in the field the forester is required to apply his education in a discretionary and decisive manner. The Australian public (though only 14 million) is well informed on many aspects of forest utilization and very aware of harvesting practices conducted in state forests. The professional in the "bush" (country), regardless of employer, not only has to be a good forester but must also be trained in public relations.

The original forestry school in Australia was founded in 1911 at the University of Adelaide. In 1927 the school was transferred to the National University in Canberra, where it has since provided the principal education in forestry. Some state universities such as the University of Melbourne also provide a degree in forestry. The curriculum is oriented much like it is in the United States. It consists of a four year B.S. degree in forestry, with a core of required courses in botany, silviculture, management, economics, mensuration, and others with options on electives in specialized areas of interest. A two-week Camp between the second and third year is also required, where the student can gain work experience of a technical nature. A student can enroll in a five year program and receive a B.S. in Forestry and Economics. Post-graduate studies are also offered.

Of the 2,967,909 square miles of Australia, only 16,595 are forested (0.56%). Figure 1 indicates the forested areas as well as the individual states. Most of the forested area is located on the eastern and southeastern coasts. The interior of Australia is basically of a desert climate. The states of Western Australia, Tasmania, Southern Australia, Victoria, New South Wales and Queensland have functioning state forest commissions.

I visited the State Forest Commissions of New South Wales and Victoria, so can only relate what I've seen in these areas. These states contain a major portion of the lands available for forests. Foresters entering the state commissions are normally assigned to a subdistrict, where their responsibilities include formulating a management plan (or updating the present one), overseeing the harvesting operations (conducted either by state harvesters or private contractors), supervising state timber scalers, and ensuring that regions harvested are properly regenerating.

Environmental Impact Statements are required for all subdistricts, to include cultural areas (aboriginal camps), wildlife, sensitive areas, guidelines for harvesting, and many other criteria outlined in state regulations. Some clearcutting is conducted in the slash pine plantations of Bathurst, New South Wales, but basically the harvesting techniques observed in the native eucalypt forests employed selection harvest methods. In Victoria, most of the forested areas were on slopes of 30% and greater, and clearcutting was the most common practice. However, the areas were kept to less than 20 acres, slash was burned, and the area replanted almost immediately following the operation. Aesthetics were very important in the harvesting decision and such practices as leaving a 50-meter strip between the clearcut and logging road or using landscape architects to determine the size and form of cut that will prove the most inconspicuous when viewed from any direction or distance was common practice.

The foresters I conversed with offered a wealth of information on the native eucalypt as well as some exotic pines which were grown extensively in state and commercial plantations.

Each state forest commission has a research facility, as well as the national and private industry sponsored Combined Scientific Industrial Research Organization (CSIRO), located in Canberra. From such facilities much research in genetic variation, site quality, and growth characteristics has been completed. In fact the Australians probably are much more knowledgeable about an American species of pine than we are. They have extensively studied Pinus radiata (Monterey pine), which is a major component of their southern plantations.

The attitudes of many foresters in public and private forestry were highly professional. Their interest in Australian forestry was very apparent in their concern for environmental problems. They were practicing good forestry not only for the economic return, but also to ensure that a natural resource continued to be available to the Australian people.
