Free access to eTextbooks:

VitalSource has joined leading publishers to help ensure students affected by the COVID-19 pandemic will have free access to quality digital learning materials through the remainder of the Spring 2020 semester. Beginning March 16 through May 25, 2020, access to an expansive catalog of eTexts will be available for free to students at semester-calendar institutions who have been impacted by recent campus closures. Students simply log in to the VitalSource Bookshelf app using their school email address and can then view course materials from participating publishers via VitalSource’s Explore capabilities within Bookshelf.

Students who need assistance accessing free eTexts can visit <https://get.vitalsource.com/vitalsource-helps>.

RedShelf – As institutions across the country grapple with responses to COVID-19, we’ve committed to supporting our campus store and institutional partners during this uncertain time. Through our RedShelf Responds initiative, we’re providing free access to digital textbooks (to students from nonprofit, semester-based colleges and universities) through May 25th, thanks to the generosity of our publishing partners.

To learn more about the program, visit about.redshelf.com/redshelfresponds for full details.

Students interested in taking advantage of the program should visit responds.redshelf.com.
